Rations, water and letters arrive. The Sergeant-Major allots the rations and water to each Platoon Sergeant, and proceeds to sort the letters. In the middle of this he is summoned to the scene of some casualties. He helps to bandage one of the men and lights a 'fag' for him, and stays till they are all taken down to the regimental aid-post. He then finishes sorting the letters, makes out a casualty report for the Company Commander, and sends down to the Company in support to furnish men in place of the casualties, which happen to be a Lewis' gun team.

After this he goes round the wire and other trench fortifications, questions the sentries to see that they know their orders, and receive their reports and those of the platoon sergeants. Throughout the night, at various hours, he makes a round of the trenches, obtaining reports from the sergeants on duty, and from patrols and listening posts. These he sends in to Company Headquarters.

Towards morning he sits hunched up under his shelter eating a large slice if bread and butter. The Company Sergeant-Major of the adjoining company peeps in.

"How goes it, mate? What sort of a time?" says he.

"Dead slow, chum; nothing doing," replies the indefatigable C.S.M.

BEAUTY SPECIALIST TELLS SECRET

A Beauty Specialist Gives Simple Home Made Recipe to Darken Gray Hair.

Mrs. M. D. Gillespie, a well known beauty specialist of Kansas City, recently gave out the following statement regarding gray hair:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home, at very little cost, that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Orlex Compound and 1-4 ounce of glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost, or the druggist will put it up for you. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray haired person look twenty years younger. It does not colour the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off."

New Fish Today

Usually every Wednesday and Friday is a Fish Day. During Lent, however, Tuesdays and Saturdays were also named as "National Fish Days." The Food Controller says you help the cause of the Allies by eating more fish and less beef and bacon.

Famine Near, Outlook Dark, Says Calder

Horizon is Very Black and Worst Yet to Come

NO BRITISH MONEY

TORONTO, Feb. 27. — Warning that the war situation was "very serious," that the world was practically on the verge of starvation, that the government of Canada might very shortly have to call upon Canadians to make special sacrifices in order to conserve food, that labour might have to be taken away from the cities and put on the farms, and that in spite of all this "danger of famine in all the allied countries was very great," and even if Canada did its utmost "there was the danger of people in Great Britain, France and Italy actually starving," were among the important statements made last night in Massey Hall by Hon. J. A. Calder, minister of immigration for Canada, who said he had come to Toronto to address the Dominion Alliance convention as the representative of Sir Robert Borden and the Union government. The Premier was unable to be present himself because he had been called to Washington, D.C., on some business of great importance, and he could not return to Canada until the end of the week.

Should Get Together.

Every opportunity should be grasped, declared Mr. Calder, to get eastern and western Canada together. During the last few years they had been rapidly growing more and more apart, making the situation a dangerous one. Already even in eastern Canada there was also something which was tending to separate the people there. Some way must be found to bridge over the difficulties which had the effect of separating the various parts of Canada.

Hurrah! How's This

Cincinnati authority says corns dry up and lift out with fingers.

Hospital records show that every time you cut a corn you invite lockjaw or blood poison, which is needless, says a Cincinnati authority, who tells you that a quarter ounce of a drug called freezone can be obtained at little cost from the drug store but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You simply apply a few drops of freezone on a tender, aching corn and soreness is instantly relieved. Shortly the entire corn can be lifted out, root and all, without pain.

This drug is sticky but dries at once and is claimed to just shrivel up any corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin.

If your wife wears high heels she will be glad to know of this.

OMEMEE PERSONALS

OMEMEE, Feb. 27.—Mr. William Waugh, of Peterborough, made a business trip to town last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nugent have returned home, after an extended visit with relatives in Picton and Millbrook.

Dr. MacAlpine, of Lindsay, made a professional visit to town, during the past week.

Miss Cora Sanderson has returned home, after a pleasant visit with her sister, Mrs. E. Jones, of Peterborough.

Mrs. Geo. McQuade was a visitor to Lindsay in Saturday.

Mr. Charles Ivory was a business visitor to Toronto during the past week.

Mrs. J. Smith was a visitor to Peterborough on Saturday.

Mr. John Porter, of Toronto, was a visitor in town on Saturday, having been called home, owing to the death of his mother.

Mrs. D. Dick was a visitor to Lindsay on Saturday.

Miss Alta Sanderson, of Peterborough, was the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Sanderson.

Mr. J. Layton, of Peterborough, was a visitor in town last week.

Miss Maude and Mr. Stanley Laidley are the guests of their sister, Miss Grace Laidley, of Belleville.

Mrs. Thos. Ingram was a visitor to Lindsay on Saturday.

Mr. A. Byers, of Toronto, spent the week-end with his wife and daughter, Mrs. E. White.

Mr. J. F. Diamond, of Peterborough, was in town on business last week.

Mr. J. Ivory, of Toronto, was in town on Monday, renewing old acquaintances, the guest of his cousin, Mr. Charles Ivory.

Mrs. L. Windrim was a visitor to Peterborough on Saturday.

Miss Lula Bushnell is visiting friends at West Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Jones and baby, of Peterborough, are the guests of Mrs. Jones' Parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Sanderson.

Miss Edna Porter, of Renfrew, was in town on Saturday, having been called home to the bedside of her mother.

Mr. Stanley Lowes was a business visitor in town last week.

The many friends of Mr. H. Colwell, a former Omemee citizen, will be sorry to hear he is still in a precarious condition, having taken a hemorrhage of the lungs on Saturday, Feb. 16th, but rallied somewhat on the Monday following, and on Saturday last was removed from Coldwater to Lindsay hospital. Mr. Colwell has been in poor health for some time, having given up his work as section foreman here last summer to accept an easier position with the G.T.R. at Coldwater. His many friends in Omemee hope for a speedy recovery.

Mr. Stephens of Peterborough, was in town on business last week.

Mr. Jos. Weist of Toronto, is in town renewing old acquaintances, having been absent for the past twenty-seven years.

The many friends of Mr. R. J. Mulligan will be sorry to hear he is still in a semi-conscious condition. Although he takes some nourishment, yet he very seldom speaks. The "Eatonia" came down from Toronto on Monday evening and took him to a Toronto hospital. The nurses from Peterborough, Dr. Cameron, Mr. Arthur McCrea of Toronto, Miss Anna McCrea and Mrs. Mulligan accompanied him to Toronto, and his numerous friends look forward to a speedy recovery.

The many friends of Mrs. Robt. Porter were greatly shocked to hear of her sudden death, which took place on Saturday afternoon last, the cause being acute indigestion. The body was removed on Sunday to the home of her son, Mr. Fergus Porter, of Jan-etville, the funeral taking place on Tuesday to Riverside Cemetery, Lindsay.

The Omemee Soldiers' Aid Society are still doing their bit, having packed a bale on Tuesday last. The following is a list of the articles shipped to the Red Cross Headquarters, Toronto, from Nov. 20, 1917, to Feb. 19, 1918: 511 pair socks, 41 suits pyjamas, 2 hospital shirts, 2 pair wristlets.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE PETERBORO' HEALTH ASSOCIATION

Association Has Closed a Very Successful Year—Executive Committee Appointed For the Year—District Nurse's Report is Full of Interest—Several Cases Successfully Treated.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Health Association was held yesterday afternoon in the Bank of Montreal Chambers. Rev. Father C. J. Phelan presided. The Association has closed a very successful year in spite of war-time conditions. The matter of establishing a clinic in Peterborough for the benefit of children was brought up and discussed, and the general opinion was that such a clinic was not necessary at the present time. There are few foreigners in the city and actual cases of neglected children were not numerous enough to warrant the creation of a clinic.

It was reported at the meeting that the sum of one thousand dollars had been bequeathed to the Association by the late Dr. George Burnham. Another one thousand dollars has been granted by the City Council, and the financial statement shown below indicates a bank balance of a little over one thousand dollars, making a total of over three thousand dollars.

The Executive Committee for the current year is as follows: Mesdames Turner, Scott, Aylmer, Coulthard, Kendry, Matthews. Gallivan, Messrs. E. F. Moson, Rev. Father Phelan, G. W. Powell, W. H. Dunsford, E. A. Peck, W. R. Breyfogle, W. J. McElderry, C. C. Abbott, Dr. Cameron, Dr. F. C. Neal and Dr. Gallivan.

Report of Miss Edith Hamilton, District Nurse.

During the year 1917 there were ninety-two patients:

| | |
|---|---|
| Obstetric | 18 |
| Surgical | 6 |
| Medical | 68 |
| | 92 |

Which had to be visited once or twice a day, making one thousand and seventy-two visits in all, three hundred and seventeen were paid for by the patients themselves, making the sum collected seventy-nine dollars and forty cents.

The following dressings have been supplied by the Association for the free patients:

Gauze.
Absorbent cotton.
Adhesive plaster.
Lycol.
Tr. green soap.
Old linen.
1,000 refills for sputum cups.
32 oz. of carbolic acid.

A large quantity of old linen, comforters and clothing. One patient is supplied with medicine weekly and another with cod liver oil.

The following articles have been loaned:
4 air cushions.
3 tents.
Verandah curtains.
Thermometers.
Cots and soap-stones.
Coal oil stove.

The work has also been aided by the following donations:

Horlick's Malted Milk, Drs. Halliday and Cameron.

Magazines, Mrs. T. F. Matthews.

Comforters and other useful articles, Miss Bennet.

Tent and other articles, Mrs. Ritchie.

A number of useful articles, Mrs. Mulholland.

Malted milk, canned goods, old linen, Mrs. (Dr.) Galivan, Mrs. Aylmer and Mrs. Scott.

Trinity Methodist Sunday school, fruit and a large quantity of rolled oats.

Six bags of potatoes were distributed among the needy cases, donated by Mr. Young of the Henry Hope Works.

Of the twenty-three cases treated during the year, five were new. I am glad to be able to state that in seven cases the disease has been arrested. Two of the patients have been able to go back to work. In fact have been at work for over a year.

One of the seven arrested cases is a man with wife and children who are dependent on him for support. He has been provided by the Association with a quart of milk a day, eggs, cod liver oil and a large new tent.

A boy twelve years of age, who has had to remain home for two years, has regained his health and is about to return to school.

These are just two of the cases that are constantly occurring.

Five patients who were in the advanced stage have died. There is nothing more pathetic than the suffering of the advanced tuberculosis patient. When we think of others who have been cured, when taken in time, it ought to spur us on to more energetic work. There is only one method of doing away with tuberculosis and that is by curing the disease before it becomes advanced. For this of course, constant vigilance is necessary so that all cases must be reported in the early shages. No greater work in any community could be accomplished than the wiping out entirely of this dreadful disease.

Edith Hamilton,
District Nurse.

Financial Statement.

Mr. W. H. Dunsford, treasurer of the Association, submitted the financial statement which follows:

...rs. R. R. Hall seconded the vote ...hanks.

...rs. Coulthard, Regent of the ...pter, occupied the chair.

...r. Kenner in his address outlined ... meaning of the "New Patriot...

He said patriotism is gener... defined as a love of country, and ... not a glittering passion, but ...ality. We Canadians have rea... for patriotic pride as British citi... not because of her wealth, as ... ideals she stands for. The foun...on of the British Empire was laid ... the Seven Years' War, after ...ch the Empire was not a com...tor of the powers of Europe, but ...rother of nations.

Magna ...rta also was a scrap of paper. ...hat Britain is fighting for is ...nst the world domination of a power whose God is a God of force, not a God of love.

Is the Empire worth fighting for? Under this Mr. Kenner outlined the colonies of which the Empire is made up. Canada, "the Lady of the Snows," may know a shortage of coal but she has no negro problem. Richest of all possessions in natural resources she holds a population brave and clean; the Motherland, consisting of Scotland, with her traditions of mighty men and historic associations; Ireland, whose gift to the Empire has been such warriors as Wellington and Kitchener, and England, with its unequalled traditions, and grandeur of land and scenery. Before the war the Englishman was known as a "sparrow" but with the call of the Motherland, the "sparrows" were not backward in flying home to her aid.

In conclusion, Mr. Kenner paid a tribute to the brave soldier lads who thought the Empire worth fighting for and whose message to us is to carry on. He also spoke of the results of the war, one of which is already shown in disciplining of the world, the people of which have gained more than they comprehend.

Told Woman To Go Back To The City For Supply Of Coal

"Where did you get the last coal you bought?" was the salute of a dealer to a woman who had asked for only two hundred pounds when she saw several cars shunted into his yards.

"From the city," she replied.

"Well, you'd better go back to the city for some more," was the dealer's curt dismissal.

She related the incident in the police station this morning and almost begged for a temporary supply. The best the police could do was to fill out an order card for her, but she said she had been around to all the yards, only to be met by a blank refusal at each office.

Other complaints to the police told of homes that were bare of fuel.

"I wouldn't know what to do if I could get a little coal," said one woman who had trudged around to the fuel yards without success. "I guess I'll have to wait till spring comes before I'll be warm again, or I may go out and pull a few boards off a barn."

There are innumerable stories, all in this tenor, unburdened to the police every day, and it's a wonder their sympathies haven't been exhausted.

If the licenses of some of the coal merchants depended upon the approval of citizens who have met with the experience of the woman who was told to go back to the city, — — —.

LATE JAMES STEERS FORMERLY RESIDED IN PETERBOROUGH

The Bashaw Star of Feb. 21st announces the death of Mr. James Steers, formerly of Peterborough, who died in the hospital at Edmonton on the 16th inst., after an operation for appendicitis. He left Peterborough in the year 1901 and resided in Alberta. He was postmaster for the town of Bashaw for some years and took an active part in municipal and church activities. He was a member of the Masonic Order, under whose auspices the funeral was conducted. He married Miss Jennie Forster, of North Monaghan, who, with his daughter Mabel, is left to mourn his death. He will be remembered by many as a member of Charlotte street choir.

ENCAMPMENTS MET LAST EVENING

A joint meeting of the Mount Hebron and Hiawatha encampments was held last evening in the Oddfellows' Hall at the corner of George and Hunter streets. Grand Warden Malcolm Sinclair of Toronto, was present and gave a very instructive and lucid address on the work of the Order. The Mount Hebron encampment initiated a class of candidates during the evening. Refreshments were served at the close.

A fire which broke out her today has destroyed half of the business section of the town. The damage is estimated roughly at £100,000 —Reuter.

The Letter.

The letter reads as follows:

France.

Mrs. J. W. Stuart,

Peterborough, Canada:

Dear Mother,—Thought I would write you a few lines this evening, although as usual there is very little to write about. I am still on that course and geting on fine. At first I did not like it much, but now I am getting real interested and besides the meals have improved a little.

I have had no mail since coming here, but I guess the battery is holding it up. I was very much surprised while looking over the daily paper, which we can get here, this morning that there had been quite a fire in Peterborough destroying part of the business section. I will enclose the clipping if I can find it. There seems to have been an awful lot of fires around home this year. I will see in the papers you send me the particulars of course, but I hope it has been exaggerated and there has been no loss of life. I hope there is a letter at the battery from "Hod" for me, as I think I will be going on leave shortly after I am through here. When I last heard from him he was in hospital still. That was on Jan. 7th. So you see I want his address if he has been discharged from there, as I might have some trouble finding him otherwise.

Bill Thornton has moved away from here now and I am kind of alone. Of course I know lots of fellows at the school, but they are not like Bill. We had some pleasant evenings together here though.

I ran across the battery Claude Manley was with when he was killed and met a fellow who was with him that day, and he told me the the particulars. He was in the gun pit and a shell burst right in front and I guess a piece hit him in the head. He died instantly and was buried at the position which is some distance from here. A nice cross was erected, and if I ever get down that way I will try and find it. He was very popular with the fellows in the battery.

We have been having the most wonderful weather for the past week and a half. No rain. But nice bright warm days and dandy moonlight nights. Not a bit cold either, and the mud has nearly dried up. Nearer like May than January. I also saw Alex. Butcher from Ashburnham yesterday. You know he was badly wounded some time ago and has been in England ever since. He is not fit for active service, but is acting quartermaster-sergeant of an artillery school. It is a good job believe me. He is going back to England about the last of February. It certainly is nice to come out here and know it is only for six weeks. However, he saw considerable service and deserves a "cushy" job now that he is unfit.

Well, I guess I will close now mother, and go back to my hut and bed.

With love to all,

CLAIRE.

My address is the same as usual.

AN IMPORTANT PROMOTION FOR PETERBORO BOY

Major G. Garnet Greer M.C. Becomes Deputy Assistant Director of Medical Services for the 4th Canadian Division in France

HAS DONE FINE WORK

It will be pleasing news to the many friends of Major Garnet Greer to learn that his long and efficient work at the front has been again recognized by his promotion to the important staff position of Deputy Assistant Director of Medical Services for the 4th Canadian Division in France.

Major Greer left Peterborough at the beginning of the war, going overseas as Medical Officer of the 2nd Eastern Ontario Battalion, the Iron Second, and has been on continuous duty in France for over three years. Last autumn the Peterborough Officer was offered three months' furlough, but feeling the urgent need at the front, declined the offer and decided to remain at his post in France.

Major Greer won the Military Cross during the Battle of Somme, and has at about the same time promoted to the rank of Major.

HOW WORDS COME TO PICTURE IDEAS

Philologists Can Read History From Words a Country Uses

Sometimes words are borrowed bodily from another language. Sometimes a root-word is borrowed, often-est from the Latin or Greek, and an English ending given it. Again, we take two old words, join them together and make a new one. At first we separate them by the hyphen, but after a while that is left out, and the two are mingled as a single word. Then, we take a prefix, or a suffix, from some other tongue, and add it, after or before, and we have another new word. Or when a word is too long, we shorten it—because we English-speaking people are great for saving time.

Words Reveal History.

A philologist can read history from a word; as to when it first came into use, what caused it, the condition of the arts and sciences at the time, the state of literature, the wars going on, and many other things that he sees in it. A word robs the civilization of its time, as a dewdrop mirrors the heavens. Every maker of words is a poet, whether he knows it or not. The word "poet" comes from a Greek verb meaning "to make." Poets generally make words that seek to convey the idea by the sound.

Thousands of new words are defined in The New Universities Dictionary which we are now offering almost free to our readers. It ought to be in every home, office, workshop and study. It can be made the means of self-culture to a very large extent. The coupon offer elsewhere in this paper explains the terms upon which you may get it.

Books Ready To-morrow.

The second coupon appears to-day, the third will appear to-morrow, and then the doors open to the great educational flood. Don't wait for a later chance; eager readers may exhaust the limited supply.

The New Universities Dictionary is profusely illustrated in colour and duotone. It has many full pages and double pages of magnificent colour plates. Each is a work of art. The book is an ornament to any table or desk, and its presence stamps a home or office as up to date, refined and educated. No man, woman, boy or girl can afford to be without it.

Music & Drama

"THE IRISH 15TH."

"The Irish 15th," with Al. H. Wilson, the Irish singing comedian at its head, was the attraction at the Grand Opera House last night and provided a very enjoyable evening for a large audience. It proved one of the familiar type of Irish comedy dramas, with several khaki uniforms and a war atmosphere about it to distinguish it from its predecessors. The plot, although most improbable, furnished some thrilling situations and the third act was especially gripping in its interest. Mr. Wilson was happily cast as Lieut. Dick Dale, a part that gave him many opportunities to show his histrionic ability. His voice is not what it used to be, but Mr. Wilson has not forgotten how to sing and his song numbers were most enjoyable, especially "A Lily From Heaven" and "My Mother's Wedding Ring," while the sentiments expressed in "The Irish Will Be There" were warmly applauded. The best acting of the evening was done by Albert Patterson, whose work as Lieut. Darcy Neill was most effective, especially in the third act.

DOING GOOD WORK

The Red Cross Auxiliary of Murray Street Baptist Church report the following articles made during the past month: Six personal property bags, thirty-five suits of pyjamas, nine grey flannel shirts, fifty-four stretcher caps, twenty-four bed socks, fifty-two pairs of socks, with an average attendance of twenty-three ladies to sew each week.

MANY ALARMS DURING MONTH

During the twenty-eight days of February the Fire Department had twenty-seven calls and one for the pulmotor. The only serious fire was that of the Planing Mill, on Saturday, the total loss from which amounted to $14,000. The pulmotor call was to a case of coal gas poisoning on Water street.

Lang Soldiers Back From The Front Are Given Warm Welcome

The Village Hall at Lang, in Otonabee Township, was the scene of a most enjoyable gathering last evening. In spite of the bad roads, the residents turned out in large numbers to bid a hearty welcome home to Lieut. Dinsdale, who, after three years' service, is home on furlough, and to Pte. Andrew Spears, and Pte. Horace Gudgon, the two latter having been honourably discharged after long service at the front.

A pleasing feature of the evening was the presentation of gold lockets, suitably engraved, to each of the young soldiers, and the reading of a well-worded address of welcome by Miss Miller. A splendid musical programme was also rendered. Col. T. J. Johnston, late Commanding Officer of the 93rd Oveiseas Battalion, occupied the chair, and spoke feelingly of the splendid work performed by the Canadian soldiers at the front. The Rev. Mr. White, Col. J. W. Miller and Mr. F. D. Kerr also delivered short addresses.

The Patriotic Society at Lang has done splendid work since the outbreak of the war.

NOTICE FOR THE LIFE UNDERWRITERS

Don't forget the regular meeting to be held Saturday evening, March 2nd. Let every man make it a point to be present. This is going to be one of the best meetings ever held. Two canvasses will be put on and ought to be heard by every one in the profession, besides there will be other features that will make the evening one of great educational value and most entertaining. If you are not already a member come. You will want to be before the evening is over. The canvass will be both interesting and instructive to the ordinary and industrial man alike. Remember that individually we may not accomplish much, but as a strong live association we can be and are a great power in the profession. To have this great influence we need every man writing insurance. And every man writing insurance needs the help and influence of the Association. Make up your mind to be present and don't forget the hour, 7 o.m. sharp, and the place, office of the Prudential Life Insurance Co., over the Royal Bank.

THT AWFUL ACHE OF LUMBAGO RUBBED AWAY FOR ALL TIME

Hoorah! No More Suffering—Every Ache Goes Quick

RUB ON NERVILINE

Lumbago is a peculiar sort of rheumatic trouble that affects the muscles about the loins and back. At times its agony is intense. Severe spasms of pain shoot in all directions, and become more severe on stooping.

In treating lumbago or stitch in the back, it is necessary to keep warmly covered to prevent a sudden chill. Attend to this, and then apply Nerviline freely.

Almost instantly you feel its warm soothing action. Right through the cords and muscles the healing power of Nerviline penetrates.

Quick as a wink you feel the stiffness lessening. You realize that a powerful pain-subduing remedy is curing the pain, is easing your distress, is making you well again.

Nerviline quickly cures backache and lumbago because it has the strength, the power and penetrating force possessed by no other known remedy. Its amazing curative action is due to certain extracts and juices of rare herbs and roots, combined by a secret process, and forming a truly magical medical marvel.

Any sort of aches in the muscles and joints Nerviline will cure quickly. It eats the pain right up—relieves stiffness, restores the muscles to their wonted elasticity and vigor.

It's the quickest thing imaginable for rheumatism, sciatica or neuralgia.

As for earache, toothache, sprains, or strains, nothing can excel good old Nerviline.

Get the large 25 cent family size bottle. It's the most economical. All dealers or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

Unify All Interests To Win The War

That Is William Jennings Bryan's Policy as Expressed in Toronto

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Feb. 28.— "I have left for those who are not interested in the success of the war all discussion of everything which was said before the United States entered the conflict," said Hon. W. J. Bryan, former Secretary of State of the United States on his arrival in Toronto today, where he will speak at the meeting of the National prohibition convention to-night.

Speaking of the war Mr. Bryan said: "I have not thought it wise to attempt to make any comment in regard to its duration. I have not yet seen anyhing which anyone could take on which to base a prediction. I feel therefore that the support of the government is a much better thing than to engage in any such speculations." The situation changes so constantly that any discussion of it in the way of making predictions or calculations is only apt to divert attention from the most important issue. That is the united support of the government in anything of the government in anything of the war and this has been my attitude from the day we entered the conflict and it is my attitude now," he said. Continuing Mr. Bryan explained his policy as follows:

"My aim has been to unify all interests that we may win the war and win it at the earliest possible moment."

C.G.E. Houses On Albert St. Must Be Vacated By Tenants

Tenants of the houses on the Canadian General Electric Company's property on the north side of Albert street have been notified that the premises will be required by the company, and must be vacated in the near future.

This announcement has stirred up a hope that is becoming a belief that the company is preparing to clear this big block of land for extensions this spring. It was stated that there are four or five houses to be vacated in a strip of land fronting Albert street about 250 yards. At least one of the houses is in good repair, but the razing of the rest will be no serious loss to the city's real estate. The occupants have always realized that their tenancy was likely to be cancelled at any time. If the company builds this spring it will likely be as an extension to the big shop that now stretches along Albert street from the Park street corner.

Frank Statement Given Of The War Situation

(Canadian Press Despatch)

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 28.—A frank statement of the war situation, as affecting Canada was made by leading members of the Government to-day to the Women's Conference composed of representatives from all provinces and women organizations in the Dominion. The Duke of Devonshire impressed upon the women the fact that this was a time when the courage and spirit of Canadian womanhood were particularly required. Hon. N. W. Rowell pointed out that the increasing demands of the war involved a new tax on the man power of Canada. Ministers of the various departments explained the needs of man power and woman work in their various spheres.

Milkman Put Fire Out With Milk

(Lindsay Post)

Mr. Norman Mark, the well-known dairyman had a narrow escape from being badly burned yesterday morning. That he escaped with minor injuries is due to his presence of mind.

Mr. Mark was driving his delivery sleigh, (a closed vehicle) north on Victoria Avenue just outside the town limits, and in endeavouring to keep it upright the terrific gale overturned it with Mr. Mark securely locked on the inside. When the sleigh overturned, a lighted lantern was also upset. A quantity of cool oil leaked out and this took fire. In the twinkling of an eye a bad blaze was in progress in one end of the sleigh. Mr. Mark realized that he must act quickly, as the fire was spreading and the heat was becoming intense. He quickly made use of the milk supply and consumed eight gallons in extinguishing the fire. After a strenuous fight he mastered the flames and then sought a means of exit. He smashed an opening through the van with his foot, and after throwing the burning lantern outside climbed through the opening. In fighting the flames he had his hair singed and also lost one of his mitts. He next endeavoured to unhitch the horse, but as his hand was bodly frostbitten, he was obliged to give up the task. He then detached the front bobs from the sleigh, and sent the horse on ahead. In following in the wake Mr. Mark had a hard fight against the wind, which virtually took him off his feet.

Skips' Bonspiel Marked By Many Close Finishes In Last Night's Games

The gallery called it a grand raise, but "Lornie" Bowes said it was a lucky shot that snatched a last stone win from J. W. McDermid, who was lying three, well guarded, with the exception of a difficult port, in the first game of the "eights" round last night.

McDermid had led all the way, and with a strong end coming home, was probably wondering whom he met in the next round. The score by ends was as follows:

Bowes . . . . . 02210012101—9
McDermid . . . . . 20100310010—8

This is the only game played in the "eights" of the primary round. The rest will be staged at nine o'clock, and the semi-finals will be reached to-morrow night.

Curling With a Punch.

Last night's play was replete with thrills. There were more fighting finishes packed into a few hours than would usually occur in half a season. In the elimination process in the second round three of the games pasted up the same score of 9 to 8, and George Morrow had to go an extra end to win by 11 to 9 from Harry Foote.

There was nothing fluky in these finishes. Kay and Campbell were tied coming home, so were Brown and Patterson.

Won With a "Five."

In the consolation round, Ray Best was five down to J. H. Ferguson. When they finished the ninth end he needed four to tie and five to win. The score was then 10 to 6, and Best pulled down a five end, accomplishing what seemed an impossibility. The score by ends was:

Best . . . . . 0220000205—11
Ferguson . . . . . 1002211030—10

Last night J. H. Conral skipped George Giroux's rink and pulled out a win over Sam Ray.

Sturgeon defaulted to Hicks, and Denham to Archibald.

BOX MAY PLAY FOR DENTALS AT KITCHENER

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, Feb. 28.—Williard Box, the speedy forward player of the Dentals, and considered by some as the best amateur player in the world, who was operated on for appendicitis, is likely to play for the champion Dentals in the return game at Kitchener Friday night in the O.H.A. finals. He was skating at the Arena to-day. It is expected Box will greatly strengthen the Dentals.

TURNBULL'S TIGERS LOSE AT LAKEFIELD

The Turnbull hockey septette journeyed to Lakefield last night and in one of the best exhibitions of hockey ever seen in that village were defeated 12 goals to 9. About thirty-five rooters accompanied the team. The local team were at a great disadvantage on the thirty-foot wide rink. As it was the teams were about evenly matched, the decision hanging in the balance until the final bell. The score by periods was 5 to 4, 8 to 5, and 12 to 9. The line-up was as follows:

| Turnbull's | | Lakefield |

BOWLING On Water St. Alleys

PRINTERS WON FROM GROCERS

In a closely contested league game last night at the Water Street Alleys the Printers won two of the three games from the Grocers. All three games were very keenly contested, the Printers rolling up an 870 total for the first game, while the Grocers rolled up 374 for their second game. Fitzpatrick, for the Grocers, was high man with 610 for a three-game total, and also high single of 216.

Henderson and Anderson were high for the Printers, with 576 and 537 for totals. The scores were as follows:

| Grocers— | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| R. Ross | 153 | 175 | 141 | 469 |

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir—In Friday's Examiner you published a letter from an English woman, complaining about an expressman being insulting about the delivery of some coal. Now, I am the expressman referred to, as I found out, and I wish to say that the statements of Mrs. Payne, Munro Avenue, where I delivered the coal, are not correct. When I called at the house Mrs. Payne asked me to go to the shed with the coal. This I was prepared to do, but on looking at the lane I had to go through I felt I could not get down without falling, as I am not as strong as I used to be, and asked permission to go through the house. This she refused and as we were talking a neighbour came along and carried two of the bags around, and Mrs. Payne said to me without further asking, that I might carry the other bag through the house. When paying me for the delivery we smilingly parted the best of friends and I was astonished at the letter. I have lived in Peterborough all my life and I do not think any one can accuse me of being insulting or not willing to accommodate any person when I could.

Yours truly,
SANDY O'BRIEN.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

The action of the Council in turning down the request for a grant of $500 toward the furnishing of Veterans' club rooms has been the subject of superficial condemnation of civic action and interest in the welfare of our returned soldiers.

The Veterans' Association is in an embryo state, and we may excuse the inopportuneness of its requests to some extent, by Mayor Duncan certainly expresses public sentiment in stating this is a most unopportune time for requests that do not minister to present imperative needs.

Now, when we are trying by extra effort to get tea and coffee to the veterans in the front trenches, those at home can well afford to forego for a time luxuries and conveniences that do not minister to actual needs.

The action of the Council is no indication of a lack of interest in this matter, but is an exercise of good judgment in the interests of the Veterans both at home and abroad, and an indication to the public that our civic administrators are not playing the role if the fawning politician.

The country owes a debt of appreciation to our Veterans and will be ready to meet that debt at the proper time, but first things must come first. Veterans at the front have the right of way, and in this I am sure the real Veteran at home who has seen the real smoke of battle will most heartily agree.

If the temporary watchword of the local association was less of self comfort and more of present needs for comrades at the front, it would command general respect and meet with both civic and public support.

A. B. CUNNINGHAM

To the Editor of The Examiner:

The "City Fathers" and "Civis" agree that "grant giving" must have the line drawn somewhere; quite so, but why have it drawn at the G.W.V's the most deserving body of citizens, which has been, is being, and still will be, the most needful one in the city; for the rest of that body is still fighting for us, or has yet to fight. Should the war end to-morrow, they would all be G.W.V's, in fact those not yet returned, may see less of the fighting line than those now at home. It is not impossible either, that some of these returned soldiers may have passed to the Great Beyond ere Mr. Duncan and his confreres begin to show practical interest in their affairs.

As the veterans have risked their lives, or at the very least, offered them, for our safety, each citizen is bound in honour as far as possible to repay the debt he owes them. It is duty, not charity nor kindness. Supposing too, the Germans should force their way here through Siberia or China! Not utterly impossible nor improbable, should we not at once turn to the G.W.V's for help and instruction? Aye, and the aldermen would be the first to ask it. Mr. Duncan objects to their having a club where they can sit in arm-chairs and talk instead of by their own fireside, etc. Why does he not take his own advice, and stay at home? The city has been supplying him and his colleagues with a free "club" and arm-chairs in which to sit and talk for many years. They, at all events seem to enjoy it, judging by the way they "stick" there.

If some of the city ladies were there I think there would be more, and better results, at half the present cost of light and fuel, and certainly less "cleaning up" to do. The veterans deserve quarters free of cost. That they need it is palpable to anyone, having the slightest vestige of brain-matter. Their work is much the same as that of the Y.M.C.A. in caring for their members—returned soldiers to be welcomed as "belonging," help given, interest looked after, etc. Does not Mr. Duncan know some of these men have lost wives, children, or parents whilst away fighting for us? Theirs must be lonely firesides to sit by! He says our first duty is to the boys in the trenches—no one is relaxing in their efforts on that score. We are merely requiring extra effort for the boys at home. The boys in the trenches will fight the better, knowing that we at home, keep the promises made them when they left. It means pinching, but we shall find that easier and nicer than standing up to our knees in freezing mud and water. Let the aldermen try it and see.

Mr. Duncan and the others promise them thought and care in the "future"—they have just broken a promise—could we trust that "future"?

Chocolate soldiers notwithstanding these men are the only true volunteers of this city—they were not even "sneered" into enlisting, let alone "conscripted."

The "Volunteer soldiers" have as much right to a free club, as the "City Loilers" have to their "City Club."

If we neglect doing the things near at hand until after the war, we shall probably find neither time nor money to do them in the great rush and melee that will follow.

Truly, as Mr. Duncan says, this war is not like other wars—no, no country was ever as prosperous as Canada now is, during so stressful a time. That there will be so many to care for after the war, is the greater reason we should begin now;—after the war, each will have to fight for himself — all men have to live — I think the government is doing, and will do its share; we should not shift our responsibilities on to another body. I heard lately of a soldier sent back as too old it being discovered he was 48—in reality he was 58! I suppose they would call him a chocolate soldier too. There are some on the Council under 58, but as they have not volunteered, naturally they are not "chocolate soldiers." I wonder what they are? these men who sit lolling and smoking in the city arm-chairs, jibing at fellow-citizens who have had the pluck to volunteer and risk their lives whilst they still lolled at the "City Club."

Probably as the ladies have always done the most for "the boys," they "still can show them the way."

Hannah Elkington Spence.
Peterborough.

An open letter to Peterborough Council:

Gentlemen: The question at issue is: Why are Peterborough's working people without coal during this severe winter; and, have the City Fathers done all in their power to avert the catastrophe. The general opinion of the real sufferers is: that they have not. The hot air of the proposed municipal coal yard has failed utterly to warm anything but the temper of the people. To the mind of the majority of people, the municipal coal yard was doomed to failure from the very outset. Why? Because the Council was not big enough, whole-souled enough, to rise above tradition, and take the initiative, and form a precedent, by doing their own business. I mean by getting our local coal dealers to do the Council's business, through jobbers, and middlemen.

What would our local coal dealers say if a man went up to them and said: "I say, Mr. Hicks, or Mr. Weir, in fact any of them "I am going to undersell you in the coal business. I may not be able to get all your customers, but I am going to break your combine, if possible. Then after having got them real wild, to say, by the way gentlemen, where do you get your coal, and what do you pay for it? I will ask you, gentlemen, are they going to put him on the right track to help ruin their own business?

These gentlemen may be public spirited enough to do the right thing by the Council, but it does not appear to the reason of a freezing populace, them? Was it possible to do away do this, when the Mayor and Council had the will of the people, also the power of the government behind them? Was it possible to do away with the traditional system of dealing with middlemen and jobbers. Profiteers all, the Democracy, Sir, has no use for any of them. May I ask, how many of you Aldermen have stood on the street for hours for the privilege of drawing one or two bags of coal home on a hand-sleigh to help keep your family of little ones from freezing; to say nothing of losing half a day's work and pay, making the price of that coal 2 1-4 dollars per bag? I know of people that have lost half a day's work, to secure fuel, failed in their efforts, only to go home to saw up the furniture. We know the strenuous times we are in; we all have had to economize; it is only right and proper. But it is the apparent laxity of the Council, to use to the uttermost, the power vested in them by the Dominion Government for an equitable distribution of coal.

Another question I would like to ask on behalf of people who have had their money lying in the municipal safes all this winter as payment for the coal they never got. What sort of business do you call it? Safety first, it may be but I wonder have you a legal right to that money which, lying in a bank would mean a profitable interest to the rightful owner. If a business establishment of this city accepted cash for contracts they knew they could not fulfil the Chief of Police would most likely be after them for trying to defraud the public.

This city council must study their business more from a workingman's point of view. Does this Council realize that in not doing so it is burdening unnecessarily the Dominion's best citizens—the producers. Also that every young Canadian he brings into this world he presents $500 to the State, another fifty dollars sterling to doctor and nurse, leaving himself financially broke; only able to buy his daily necessities at retail prices. While the better financed people can buy at wholesale price, making two or three cents a lb. difference in price of necessities. You may tell us to buy in the summer our winter supply. Advice may be good, but as I have just mentioned, circumstances do not always permit. Think of this when giving advice to working people with large families. The working men must put more fellow workingmen in the aldermanic seats before the Council's vision can be brought to the spending value of from 10 to 15 dollars per week.

I may say, in conclusion, that the people of this city are ready and willing to make any sacrifice, put up with any hardship for the benefit of the State, and the successful issue of the war, but the reasoning mind is beginning to think it is often put up as an excuse for dilatory management on the part of our public bodies.

Don't let us Germanize our municipal coal yard by making it a mere scrap of paper; let the slogan be "coal all the year round, not promises."

T. TOOMS.

Police Encourage Dog Catcher With Long Sheet To Fill

Two dogs yesterday and another to-day brought the Gates' list of deaths up to seven. One mongrel and two Spaniels comprise the latest work of the official catcher. The police keep a record of his captures and their disposal on a long scroll that that is hung on the wall in the guard room, and reaches to the floor. If this sheet is ever filled out there won't be a dog left in the city, or some of them will have been frequent "repeaters".

GOVERNMENT MAJORITY IS NOW 64

(Canadian Press Despatch)

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 28.—The majority for the Union Government is increased to sixty-four as a result of the soldiers voting in England, the results of which were received by cable to-day. McIsaac, the Government candidate in Kings County, Prince Edward Island, is elected by 52 majority, and Nicholson, Government, won one of the two seats in Queens, Prince Edward Island by 158 majority. Only Prince Edward Island and Quebec results were received to-day.

PROMOTIONS ANNOUNCED

KINGSTON, Feb. 27.—The following have been appointed as Majors to the Depot Battalion here and to command companies: Capt. D. Green, late of the 39th Battalion; Capt. F. W. Partridge, late of 77th Battalion; Capt. Lech, late of the 93rd Battalion, and Capt. R. P. Watt, late of the 93rd Battalion.

CROWN GIVEN $2,700.

TORONTO, Feb. 28.—Another legal tangle arising over a will made on a will form was settled at Osgoode Hall when Mr. Justice Middleton confirmed certain bequeaths made by William Aspel of Hamilton. The testator left $9,300 to various societies, but his estate amounted to almost $1,200. The main question decided was the fate of the $2,700 residue. Acording to a judgment handed out yesterday afternoon at Osgoode Hall it goes to the crown.

TO-DAY'S WAR NEWS

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

BERLIN, Via London, Feb. 28.—"The Fourth Esthonian Regiment placed itself under German command," the Berlin official statement said to-day.

"At Minsky we captured 2,000 machine guns and 50,000 rifles.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 28.—The Kaiser has wired a German Agricultural Association that the "Army and Navy has assumed tremendous things," and that "German swords are preparing the way towards peace," according to despatches received here to-day.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 28.—The German fleet in the Baltic is steaming northward at full speed, presumably toward Finland, despatches from Berlin declared to-day.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Feb. 28.—The Serbian Cabinet has resigned, a despatch from Corfu says to-day.

(By Wm. G. Sheppard, Formerly Petrograd Correspondent of the United Press).

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—This is the time long ago selected by the Germans for the capture of Petrograd.

All well informed military authorities in Russia have known this for many months. It is the consensus of expert military opinion.

Even if there had been no peace conferences at Brest-Litovsk, the Germans necessarily would have had to wait until this time to make an attempt upon Russia's capital, because they could not do so without Jack Frost as their ally. There was no means of taking Dvinsk except by utilizing the ice in the marshes.

As for Petrograd, the frost of Arctic winter has created a battlefield for the Germans which could not exist in summer. It is no less than the frozen Nova and its vast mouth that flows past Kronstadt to the Baltic. Fields of ice cover the Nova every winter. One of the most popular and remunerative trolley lines in Petrograd is that which is laid, poles, wires, ties, steel rails and all on Nova ice, and which carries traffic lengthwise of the city during six winter months.

Hundreds of thousands of acres of this ice field, strong enough to support the heaviest artillery and tractors, environ Petrograd.

All danger of the Nova mines is removed. Instead of approaching Petrograd in boats, carrying heavy naval guns and risking Russian submarines, nets and mines, the Germans have only to sledge their great guns on to the ice from the Finland shore and draw them towards Petrograd as their line advances. No other plans for the taking of Petrograd would have been possible. The Germans have not tried to take Petrograd before now, because the time was not propitious—they were only marking time at Brest-Litovsk.

The general public in the Allied countries may be surprised at the German advance on Petrograd at this time, because the Brest-Litovsk Peace Conference produced a belief that the Germans didn't care to go further into Russia. But the experts know that the German military plans provided for a German advance at just exactly this time of the year.

Short Weight Bread Confiscated By The Inspector To-day

Police Sergeant Reid, bread inspector, visited a number of grocery shops and bakeries this morning and weighed nearly 250 loaves of bread. He confiscated four large loaves all from the same bakeshop. They should have aggregated twelve pounds, but it was stated were short in weight almost one small loaf. Some of the loaves were stale and dry and had doubtless lost considerable through evaporation. At the bakeshop the new loaves were up to weight as they came through the machine.

CONSERVATIVES IN MINORITY

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

THE GHOST DIDN'T WALK.

Mayor Duncan Out of Town and Cheques For City Employees Were Unsigned.

This should have been pay day for the city's employees, but Mayor Duncan was in Toronto and the cheques had to be held for his signature on his return. The police force had pleasant expectations in their pay for the reason that their salary increases were retroactive to the first of the year.

WATER FOUND IN DRY BELT

OTTAWA, Feb. 28. — Water has been discovered by the geological survey in the dry belt of Southern Alberta. The country is splendid ranching territory of about a million acres, but has been handicapped by lack of water.

WAS TOWED TO LAND BY FAITHFUL COW

LONDON, Ont., Feb. 28.—George Johnson, a Westminster Township farmer, living near White Oak, was caught by the sudden rise of a stream through his farm. Threatened with drowning while neighbours looked helplessly on, he chose the expedient of grasping the tail of a cow that swam for land and so he was hauled to safety.

MUST BE VACCINATED.

Sarnia, Feb. 27. — The Board of Health to-day distributed circulars throughout the city calling upon all citizens who have not been vaccinated, to do so at once. Seven days is the time limit allowed. Citizens are warned that if they do not comply and the disease threatens to spread, compulsorty vaccination will be enforced. The situation remains unchanged to-day.

HASTINGS NEWS

HASTINGS, Feb. 27.— Pte. Andy Lawson, who has been on active service at the front, and was severely wounded, arrived home last week on furlough. The citizens will give give a reception for him in the town hall on Thursday evening, to which the public is invited.

Mrs. Alex. German received word during the week of the death of her niece in Toronto. Mrs. German left on Thursday for the city to attend the funeral, which was to take place on Friday.

Considerable delay was caused to passengers on Thursday morning, the 7 o'clock train being stranded in the ice just above Campbellford, and did not arrive for several hours.

Much mild weather is following the extreme cold of the past week.

The roads in some places are almost unfit for travel, one driver on the Norwood road almost losing his horse when the animal stepped into the slush and got down in such a way that it would have drowned but for the timely assistance of a farmer, who noticed the occurrence.

Mr. Wilfrid Knight, who has been in the west for the past few years, arrived home on Friday. It is rumoured that he intends taking over the editorship of the Hastings Star.

His friends are pleased to see him so hale and hearty.

Mrs. S. Stickles has been visiting friends in Warkworth.

Mrs. G. Buchanan has been in Peterborough the past week visiting her sisters there.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Firman, of Percy, spent Monday with friends in town.

Miss Blanche Baker, of Warkworth, has been visiting friends in town.

Miss Blanche Williams is rapidly recovering after her operation for appendicitis.

Drs. Sweeney and De La Matter last week performed an operation on a young son of Mr. Harry Brooks of Percy. The boy is doing nicely.

Pte. Gilders and family have removed to Peterborough to reside.

OBITUARY

ALEX. MORRISON.

Bridgenorth, this morning, lost one of her oldest residents in the death of Alex. Morrison, who passed away in Belleville, while visiting his daughter, Mrs. P. Crozier, as a result of a stroke he had three weeks ago. Mr. Morrison was born in Dumblain, Scotland, seventy-seven years ago, and came to Canada when eighteen years of age, when he settled on a farm in Ennismore. From there he moved to Bridgenorth, where he resided for forty years. He leaves of the immediate family: Robert, of 899 Bolivar street, William of Elcho, B.C., Alex., of Toronto; Bert (Lieut.) with the R. F. C. France; Fred (a driver with the Canadian Artillery, in France), Mrs. MacGregor of Edmonton, Mrs. Crozier, Belleville; Mrs. Linteck, Peterborough. His first wife died fourteen years ago; his second, in 1916.

Funeral to-morrow at 2.30 from the residence of Mr. Robert Morrison, 599 Bolivar street. (Please omit flowers).

WILLIAM CROWLEY.

The funeral of the late Wm. Crowley, uncle of Mrs. T. Turcotte, 504 Cross street, and Mrs. Travis, and Miss Crowley, of McDonnell Street, whose death occurred at his residence Downeyville, Emily, on Thursday last was held in Downeyville, on Sunday afternoon, at 2.30, to St. Luke's church and cemetery, Rev. Father Galvin officiating.

The late Mr. Crowley was born in County Clare, Ireland, 81 years ago; came to Canada to reside when 12 years of age, to settle with his parents on the 14th concession of Emily. Later he took up farming on lot 9, concession 8, where he lived until a year ago when he moved to Downeyville to reside.

Mr. Crowley enjoyed the esteem and respect of all classes of the community and his death removes the last of a family which had an honored name in the community.

He leaves five sons and four daughters: Michael, Thomas and Frank, of Emily; Wm. and David, of Lindsay; Mrs. D. Haskins of Rochester; Mrs. Perdue of Detroit, Mrs. D. J. Winn, of Toronto, and Miss Agnes, of Downeyville.

The pall bearers were Mr. Crow. Mr. Sam Winn. The funeral was one of the largest attended ever held in Downeyville.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Turcotte, Miss Jane and Mrs. James Crowley, Mr. and Mrs. Len Duffy, of Peterboro, Mr. Michael, Miss Katharine, and Miss Louise Gillenen, Lindsay, were among the out of town people who

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of my dear friend, Viola Cathrine, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Davidson, 857 Water street, who passed away Feb. 28th, 1917.

Sleep on, dear friend, we would not wake you,
Sorrow and care would darken your brow,
Sweet be your sleep while the angels are near you,
No earthy sorrow can come to you now.
A day of remembrance sad to recall.
His gentle voice we loved to hear,
His manly form to see,
How dear he was to us,
No one can ever know,
Only the aching hearts
That loved him so.

Mrs. R. Arkern.

In loving memory of Viola Cathrine, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Davidson, 857 Water St., who died February 28th, 1917.

The call was sudden, the shock severe,
We little thought her end so near,
Days of sadness still come o'er us,
Hidden tears oft times flow,
For memory keeps our dear one near us,
Although she died a year ago.

From the Family.

DEATH RESULTED FROM BURNS

MILLBROOK, Feb. 28.—Under distressing and painful circumstances Mariannie Fallis died at her home on the Fallis Line.

Deceased, who had rooms in the house occupied by her nephew, Mr. Arthur Fallis, apparently fell asleep beside the stove and the heat ignited her clothing. Before help arrived she was so severely burned that she died before the doctor arrived.

Miss Fallis was most highly respected, a sincere Christian and an excellent neighbour. She was born on the farm on which she died. Her parents were the late Mr. and Mrs. John Fallis, her mother's maiden name being Catherine Touchburn.

In religion the late Miss Fallis was a Methodist.

The funeral to Gardner's cemetery, on Tuesday, was largely attended. Rev. W. H. Higgs conducted the services. The pall-bearers were: Wilbert Walsh, Herbert Ball, and Weston, Howard, Arthur and W. Fred Fallis.

One brother, John, of Millbrook, survives her.

Degraded Army Captain Is Removed To Prison Under Military Escort

Ex-Army Officer, Stripped of Insignia, Centre of Curious Throng in Railroad Station—David A. Henkes, Taken From Castle Williams For Journey to Fort Leavenworht

NEW YORK, March 1.—A dejected man, wearing what had once been the uniform of the regular army of the United States, his khaki blouse, minus the eagle-crested army buttons, held together with safety pins, and the two silver bars, the insignia of the rank of Captain, ripped from his shoulders, arrived at the Pennsylvania Station, under guard of two veteran Sergeants of the 22nd United States Infantry, at 2.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The man was David A. Henkes, who went to France a Captain in the 16th United States Infantry, and who was sent back by General Pershing to be court-martialed for disloyalty. Henkes faces a term of twenty-five years in the military Penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., which he will immediately begin to serve on his arrival at the Kansas prison to-morrow.

Henkes, who for nearly two months had been held a prisoner in Castle Williams, the ancient army prison on Governors Island, left the island a man without a country. Officers and enlisted men looked with scorn upon him as he was marched along the long winding walk that leads from the castle to the island ferry. His departure from the prison was timed so that he had but a minute or two to wait after reaching the ferry slip. He was marched on the boat, and, flanked on either side by his guards, made the trip across the bay on the after deck of the ferryboat. Officers on the upper deck did not even glance in his direction. Enlisted men and civilians discussed him in under tones.

It was 3 o'clock when the Sergeants arrived at the Pennsylvania Station with their prisoner. They marched him into the great concourse, and found that the train which they were to take would not leave for more than two hours. It was impossible for them to conceal the identity of their prisoner. The fact that he still wore the cloth part of his uniform made that impossible. A crowd gathered about Henkes. They had all read the newspapers yesterday morning, and they knew that the man in the blouse held together with safety pins was Henkes.

"Is that 'Captain' Henkes?" a woman asked one of the Sergeants.

"Yes that's who it is," the Sergeant answered with an emphasis on the "that".

The crowd increased in a few minutes to several hundred and the soldiers appealed to one of the station officials for assistance.

"Is there some place we can take him and keep him until it's time for the train to go?" one of the guards asked

A small room in the office part of the station was found and to this room Henkes was taken. He was given a chair in the corner of the room. There for more than two hours he sat waiting the word from his guards that the time to leave was at hand. The crowd knew that the ex-officer was in the room, and htey waited patiently for the time when he would re-appear.

Shortly after 5 o'clock word was sent to the sergeant that the train was made up and they rushed their prisoner through the crowd and to the train. Ten minutes later Henkes was on his way to Leavenworth.

The statement printed in The Army and Navy Register of Washington two weeks ago, to the effect that a Chaplain of regulars has been sent back by General Pershing charged with an offence similar to that of which Henkes was convicted, was a matter that officers on Governors Island refused to discuss yesterday. It is believed that the Chaplain referred to in the service publication is now in Castle Williams, but there is no official verification for the statement.

If such an officer is really in there the opinion that nothing will be said about it until his case has been finally disposed of by court-martial and the findings of the court have been reviewed by Major Gen. William A. Mann, in command of the Eastern Department of the army.

The letters and other documents seized in the home of Henkes, several weeks ago by the Secret Service have not been made public by the military authorities and it is probable that they never will be. These papers are said to show that the convicted man was an active friend of Germany in this country, and that in the early part of the war he subscribed to one of the German war loans paying his subscription in instalments.

Henke's wife, who is an Austrian, is said to have told him good-bye on the island in the morning. It was to Mrs. Henkes that the prisoner telephoned to destroy his papers when he was returned here by General Pershing. Her failure to do so before the Secret Service agents arrived is said to have placed in the possession of the Government much interesting information of a pro-German nature.

Benno Gilhowski and John Muscowitz, both Austrians, were arrested in Jersey City, yesterday for violating the enemy alien regulations of the United States. They were locked up in the Hudson County jail.

QUIET CONNECTICUT COCKFIGHT ENDS IN AUTOMOBILE HOLD-UP WHEN BANDITS ESTIMATE HAUL

Dice Games Gives Greenwich Robbers a Few Indices to Players' "Bank Rolls"—Of One Hundred New York Sheep Only Ninety and Nine Return.

TWO MEN SHOT

GREENWICH, Conn., March 1st.—For the honour of Mount Vernon and Bronxville, communities in the Westchester county (N. Y.) commuting zone, two cocks were tearing each other feather from feather and limb from limb in a barn on Weaver street. One hundred prominent citizens had crossed the border into Connecticut to witness the battle. All but one of them went back. He is in hospital here, following a fight with five bandits who knew that the cock fight was being held and that the local police authorities had failed to detect it.

There were two physical victims of the bandit raid. All the others suffered financially, and incidentally many of them will receive a tidy bill for repairs to their automobiles. The robbers overlooked no protective measure, and when they fled their victims discovered that pursuit was out of the question in automobiles from which tires had been cut and spark plugs removed.

It was not like that in the olden days. Then when devotees of the cock fight assembled at their rendezvous by devious routes, over fences and down chimneys, any such occurrence as this morning's hold-up would have ended in a running race. As it was, the bandits escaped in their own speedy automobiles and the New York sports went home on their rims.

Two Men Shot.

James Tugmire, who owns a roadhouse in the Boston Post road near Byram Bridge, was shot and is in Greenwich with a bullet wound in his right breast. John Welch, a captain in the Yonkers Fire Department, was attended at the United Hospital in Port Chester, for a bullet wound in his right arm and later was removed to Yonkers Hospital from his home.

James F Walsh, the local Prosecuting Attorney, took immediate action, not only to capture bandits if possible but to punish the men who came here to promote the cock fight. At his request seven men have been arrested in Westchester county and will be held until they can be brought to Connecticut for trial. Four others are under arrest here.

According to the details related to the police by the men under arrest, the cock fight was one of a series which have been held recently in various Westchester and Long Island towns. The followers of the sport in each town possess a favourite fighting cock and intense rivalry exists between the various towns.

Cross to Connecticut.

The principal event of the fight held here was a contest between Bronxville and Mount Vernon. The utmost secrecy has been maintained in conducting all the recent fights, due to the vigilance of the authorities in both New York State and Connecticut. Several raids were made recently on Long Island and the sporting fraternity decided to cross over the line into Connecticut for the next meeting.

The same "tired business men," mostly commuters connected with business enterprises in New York, attend all the fights, and from all accounts the gathering this morning was quite a distinguished one. The cock fight was held in a barn on the estate of William Bercume, on Weaver street, which formerly was the Purdy Lyon estate. The men assembled early in the evening and an exciting game of craps was indulged in before the cock fighting was begun. The spectators under arrest believe that members of the hold-up band were present in the barn while the crap game was in progress and thus got a definite line on those in the gathering who had considerable money in their possession.

About one o'clock in the morning, just after the first bout was concluded, the five highwaymen entered the barn in single file. Each wore a mask and was armed with a revolver. The man at the head of the line and the one at the foot had a gun in each hand, and it was an easy matter to cover the entire assemblage. The spectators were lined up and several of their number were singled out for first searching. These were the men who had displayed the largest bankrolls while the crap game was in progress.

Searched in Adjoining Room.

The men were taken into an adjoining room in the stable and searched individually by two of the hold-up men while the other three stood guard over the rest. Only four or five men had been relieved of their valuables when one spectator seized a lantern which was lying on the floor and hurled it at the single electric globe that was burning in the barn. He did not strike the light, but the globe of the lantern was smashed and the noise diverted the attention of the robbers for a moment.

Several of the gathering immediately attacked the men who were standing guard and the entire band became frightened and took to flight. Several shots were fired as the men were leaving the building, but Tugmire and Welch were the only two victims so far as the police have been able to learn.

The assembled men poured out of the barn to give chase to the robbers, when they suddenly discovered that virtually every one of their automobiles, which had been left standing in the stable yard, had been disabled. The hold-up men fled in two large touring cars with yellow tops.

Nova Scotia's Fish Army.

Nova Scotia is literally "the land of fish"—cod, herring, mackerel and the giant albacore or tuna. Nova Scotia is so much a land of fish, says a writer, that it produces over one-fourth the value of the entire Canadian catch, or $9,166,851 worth. Every tiny haven around the extensive Bluenose Land coast harbors fishing smacks galore, while Lunenburg, Canso, Liverpool and Chester are home ports for hundreds of fleet-winged deep-sea banking schooners.

Reason and Emotion.

What a mysterious conflict that is between the reasoning power, which keeps pointing out the right road, and an ill-regulated emotional faculty, which seeks to draw one along the wrong road. Indulging the wrong habits always makes the upward path so much steeper and the downward path so much easier. How fortunate that man is whose false steps are arrested by a friendly touch of common sense disguised in a flash of satire!—Sir George Reid.

Some Towers.

The height of the Eiffel tower, Paris, is 986 feet; of the Blackpool tower, 620 feet; of New Brighton tower, 570 feet, and of the Woolworth building, New York, 750 feet.

"THE CLUE IN THE AIR"

A DETECTIVE STORY—Isabel Ostrander

CHAPTER XXIII.

SEALED LIPS.

"And how did Terhune take it all? It must have caught him in the solar plexus almost as bad as Quimby when the dead girl rose up and stood before the two of them!" Dennis chuckled the next morning, when McCarty came to tell him of the night's events. "Had it all framed up on the stepfather, did he, and then you came along and busted up the game! Faith, I'll bet he was as pleased as the devil at a revival!"

"Denny, he's eating out of my hand!" McCarty's voice was almost solemn. "We're keeping it out of the papers, you know, so the murderer, whoever he is, will feel all the more secure, but I intimated to Terhune that when the whole story is given to the press I'd tell the boys it was him sent me out west to find out Ivy Collins and Marion Rowntree. He all but kissed me!"

"And what did you do that for?" demanded Dennis. "After him saying that your brain was not fit to grasp his little pinwheels and phonograph records. I'd given him what was due him and no more. 'Twas you turned the trick, and you ought to get the credit for it!"

"What do I want it for?" returned McCarty quietly. "If luck has been against him so far in this case, he has done wonderful work in others as everyone knows, and he has a reputation to keep up before the pubilc. He is welcome to the credit and the glory, whatever there is of it. I only butted in because I could not keep my hands off from sheer love of the old game, but when it is all over I'll go back to arguing with the tenants and scrapping with the tax assessor. And on your next vacation, Denny, my lad, we'll go fishing."

"Fishing it may be, but at any rate 'twill not be ballyhooing around the middle west in a taxi, nor yet holding people up in the dark at the point of a gun! Broken glass I'm used to in fighting fires, but not to sit down in, Mac, and when you accused that girl in the automobile to her face of being alive instead of a corpse, and I went over backwards in the road with the surprise of it, I made up my mind that I would count myself out of any more of your little pleasant jaunts. You've not told me yet how you first doped it out that it was the other one, Ivy Collins, who was killed."

"I don't rightly know when it came to me first," replied McCarty. "After I'd talked to Bill Gerahty down at the morgue I thought that it was queer neither Quimby or the old lady had taken a look at the body itself, only the clothes that were on it, but I did not get it until at the inquest, the coroner kept talking about a 'corpus delicit.' I didn't know what was this corpus delicit——"

"No more do I," Dennis interpolated.

"Well I made a few inquiries and the nearest I can come at it is that it means producing the corpse and identifying it, to prove there's been murder done. I got to thinking it over, and I says to myself they have proved the murder right enough, and they have identified the clothes, but no one on of them all has made sure of the body being Marion Rowntree's.

"Supposing it wasn't, after all? Here are two girls, and one is killed, and the other disappears, and can't be found. In some way they have met and changed clothes; we was all barking up the wrong tree. 'Twas only a notion but it stuck in the back of my head, and last Sunday, when you and me had that little talk with Mrs. Grafton Foxe it burst over me all at once that it was God's truth!"

"But how? Why? There was nothing in what Mrs. Foxe said——" Dennis began.

"Wasn't there? She and her husband had hedged at first about Ivy and her affairs, so as not to drag her into the investigation. But they did not hear from her, but Mrs. Foxe kept telegraphing and got nearly crazy with anxiety. Why? What did she fear for the girl? The inquest did not reassure her any, and when we talked to her two days after she said, if you remember, that she did not care who found the girl as long as she was found. What did that mean?"

"Why, that maybe something had happened to her."

"Yes," McCarty added grimly. "Happened to her that Monday night at the Glamorgan! She had not an idea how or where the girl came in or what the change of clothes meant, but you can take it from me she'd a pretty good notion of the real motive for the murder, and who the man was who done it, if 'twas Ivy that had been killed.

"The suspense was just about eating her heart out, but behind the wavering and maybe hope there was the certainty that she couldn't bring herself to believe and admit. She lied, of course, about meeting and talking to her friend at the station, and Terhune and me are going to face her to-day and find out if we can what she knows. You mind I told you when we started for Chicago that I meant to find Ivy Collins if she was above the sod? I'd made up my mind then that she wasn't, God rest her soul!"

"And never a word out of you to me!" Dennis cried. "Leading me around like a bull by the nose!"

"I wanted to wait till I had the proof," explained McCarty.

"When did you get that, I'd like to know? Not when you faced her in the road!"

"No. In the afternoon, late, when you and me were rubbering from the old man's house next door. Mrs. Leonard was out in the yard when her husband came home with the dog and I saw a face looking down for just a minute from one of the windows upstairs. 'Twas the face of Marion Rowntree, as you have seen for yourself if you'd been watching like you were told. I recognized it as anybody would have, from the pictures that had been in all the newspapers."

"Well, it took you to do it!" responded his friend. "Whether Terhune grabs the credit or not it was you who found out the truth. You're a bigger man than he is the day for all his reputation, Mac, and you delivered the goods."

"I did, did I, you big chump?" retorted McCarty with affectionate indulgence. "I've done the devil of a lot, and got no further than Terhune, which is nowhere. We've been busier than deaf mutes in an argument, the two of us, and we've stuck our noses into a lot of other people's business that was, maybe, interesting, but didn't in any way concern us, but it will be two weeks to-morrow since the girl was done to death, and we're no nearer the truth than when she fell in front of me. Who was the murderer? Why did he do it? How did he get in and get out, and where the devil is he now? Answer me that!"

Dennis found the questions unanswerable, and McCarty presently departed to keep his appointment with Wade Terhune. His train of thought, freed from the mass of seeming irrelevances which had cumbered it for so long, led back to the main issue, and he was convinced that in one of three separate paths, obscure and doubtfully indicated as they were, would be found the solution of the problem.

Terhune's manner when he greeted him betrayed a significant change from the somewhat amused condescension of former receptions. His cordiality was unfeigned, and there was a new note of deference in his tone, as to an esteemed confrere.

"Just on time, old man!" he cried, extending his hand genially. "There are one or two points I want to discuss with you. I've given the matter careful attention since last night, and as we are starting this extraordinary investigation practically over again with a clean sheet, I am going to disregard one of my own rules, and suggest a possible theory to you. I have no substantiation of it as yet, but at least it covers the facts as we know them now."

"I'm glad to hear it, sir," responded McCarty with non-committal gravity. "We know the girl is dead and buried, and to my mind that is as far as we've got."

"The Grafton Foxes have an alibi," Terhune observed deliberately. "But so had several other people connected with the case, Mac, if you will remember. Alibis that were subsequently, as you would express it, shot full of holes. Here is the girl, from all accounts an unconscionable flirt, whose avowedly best friend admits that she had a passion for indiscriminate admiration. She spends several weeks in intimate daily association with a married couple; an impressionable man, and a lady whose charms are perhaps on the wane. She possesses unusual sex attraction, glories in it, but is incapable of a serious attachment. As she herself boasted an hour before her death, when they stated that she 'gave them the laugh,' let's assume that she laughed once too often."

"All right. But Mr. Terhune, where do the Grafton Foxes come in?"

"She doesn't," the detective paused significantly. "But did he? If his alibi cannot be shaken my theory falls to the ground. However, suppose for a minute that the girl had idly encouraged his attentions and then when the game got too steep for her, decided suddenly to depart from the scene. Suppose he was desperate, madly jealous, and made up his mind that no one else should have her if he could not."

McCarty was not visibly impressed.

"How did he get in and out again?" he asked.

"With his own key, of course, Marion Rowntree was mistaken, she was too agitated to observe carefully when the other girl closed the front door. That is another point, too. He was not noticed entering or leaving the building because his was a familiar presence and made no particular impression on the mind of any one. He managed to get away from his party for a time, and returned, meaning to implore her to stay, but when he saw her actually on the moment of departure, and realized the futility of his effort, rage overcame him, and he destroyed her. What do you think of it?"

"Since you ask me, sir, I'll have to tell you 'tis not an idea that would keep me awake at night," responded McCarty frankly. "I believe that if you can get Mrs. Foxe to speak what is in her mind you will learn something, but not in that direction. That is one chance we have still got. The other two that's sticking in my head I know that you don't hold with but I can't help believing that between them lies the truth.

"The young man that hung around outside, pretending to be drunk when Cunliffe saw him first, but sober enough when he helped me to carry the girl in, to say that her blood was on him, and to beat it, leaving no trace; I think that he knows more than we do about the case. Then there's the girl's own words: 'The flying man.' She was not delirious, Mr. Terhune, she was trying with her last ounce of fighting strength to tell me who'd done for her."

Terhune shook his head.

"You've made some marvellous guesses at the truth in this affair, Mac, but I'm afraid you are away off there," he said with decision. "No credence can be put in a mere ejaculation uttered at such a time, and as for the passer by, you will find he is quite beside the issue. But come, let us see what Grafton Foxe has to say for himself."

NINE BOILS

Kept Coming On Neck One After the Other

Anyone who has ever suffered from boils, knows how sick and miserable they make you feel.

When you think you are about cured of one, another seems ready to take its place and prolong your wretchedness. All the poulticing and lancing you may do will not cure them and stop more coming.

Boils are simply bad blood bursting out, and the bad blood must be made pure before the boils disappear.

Burdock Blood Bitters is the greatest blood purifier known. It cleanses the system and removes every particle of foul material from the blood, then never another boil comes and the cure is permanent.

Mr. Geo. Ayers, 302 Gloucester St., Ottawa, Ont., writes: "I wish to tell you what I know about your wonderful Burdock Blood Bitters. In the spring I suppose my system needed cleaning out, for I had nine boils come on my neck one after the other. I quickly got a bottle of B.B.B., and before it was half finished I felt a great change, and it certainly put an end to my boils, otherwise I might have had a lot more. I recommend B.B.B. to all I can, for I know it to be a great remedy."

MAN POWER WILL WIN

THE MOST IMPORTANT FACTOR IN THE WAR.

Germany's Strength Is Slowly But Surely Being Undermined and the Allies, Particularly Great Britain —The United States Still Possess Great Reserves of Wealth and Strength.

IN a recent number of The Boston News Bureau, Mr. C. W. Barron, the editor, a recognized financial authority and a deep student of world conditions generally, presents a review of the war situation to-day that is enlightening and heartening. Beginning with Italy, he says:

The Italian situation appears to have created more disturbance than the Russian revolution; yet Venice has not been a commercial city in the centuries since commerce discovered a way to the east around Africa.

To the thoughtless and topographically uninformed, it looked as though Germany might break through northern Italy and attack the French from the rear, or lock in Switzerland and force the opening of the Swiss frontier. But a study of the maps showing elevations would have revealed that the opening of the Swiss frontier would have been to the advantage of the French, who could thus more quickly get to the upper Rhine. And the outlet of the Swiss through France is as g od as the outlet through Italy. As for the Germans coming from the east around Switzerland, every traveller to Rome ought to know that there is but the very narrowest defile for any highway to Italy between Switzerland and the Mediterranean.

The Italians had never climbed the Austrian heights and had as little hope of getting to Vienna as the Russians had of getting to Berlin. Now it is open plain work and there is opportunity for the Italian soldiers and their allies to get at the Germans and Germany has now no men to lose.

For many months it has been evident that Italy could move forward only as she had coal and coal was $100 per ton and not even to be had at that price. In September, one of Italy's munition factories employing 50,000 men was closed for lack of coal and, of course, the Germans soon knew it. This is the real meaning of Lloyd George's call for co-ordination between the allies. Coal may be more valuable at times to the lines of defence in Italy than in England. Italy has a surplus of man-power. Fifteen years ago it was declared that Italy could sustain no more than 33,000,000 people; and a half million must emigrate to the Americas annually. But Italy entered the war with 36,000,000 people and still has now more than 3,000,000 men under arms. She has more surplus men than surplus munitions. But co-ordination may remedy this and also forward the plan that Gen. Joffre has had from the beginning when he said the war would be ended only by the slaughter of the Hun.

Neither the success of the German propaganda in Russia nor the military outflanking in Italy raises the hopes of Vienna or Berlin that Germany can dictate a German peace. The people of Central Europe have only one question: "When will it end?" They do not ask "how"; they ask "when"; and the Kaiser still promises a nearby peace.

All sides endeavor to conceal their losses. When a Zeppelin raid blows a London street full of plate glass, the first work of the police is to clear up the street and the Government replaces the window glass early the next morning. If the building is damaged it is instantly repaired by the Government, and if beyond repair, it is immediately torn down, the plot fenced around; and the appearance is "business as usual." In Germany the damage is to man power. All the hotels of southern Germany are vast hospitals for the wounded and every distant valley is filled with the cripples and convalescents. As in London, so in Berlin; the endeavor is to keep the streets clean and the appearance "business as usual." But London window glass and London roofs are not in the category with the lessening man power of Germany. When her casualties passed the 5,000,000 mark, a ban was put upon their publication. But with the lists still far behind, the casualties are noted as above 6,000,000.

This we figure to be a loss in German fighting power of 4,500,000 men, or 10 times the number of men with which she conquered France in 1871. France had figured that she also had 450,000 men to stay von Moltke, but after events indicated that the French people had been grossly deceived.

For the beginning of her attempted world conquest, Germany in 1914 mobilized 4,500,000 men and figured upon another 4,500,000 men in reserve. The first army has been disposed of thus as nearly as we can figure it:

| | |
|---|---|
| Dead | 1,500,000 |
| Prisoners | 500,000 |
| Crippled | 2,000,000 |
| In hospital beds | 500,000 |
| Total | 4,500,000 |

There is an additional 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 casualties that with some duplication represent men wounded but returned to the front.

Germany has now a second army of 4,500,000 men, but she cannot raise a third 4,500,000, for including the recruits which have come of age, her reserves cannot reach to half 4,500,000.

Those who talk three to five years of indefinite warfare have to face the argument of the above approximate figures. The length of this European war is dependent more upon Germany's man power than upon her finance or her food. She could not close the war to-morrow and put her people back into industry without an indebtedness of $30,000,000,000, or approaching one-half of her total prewar value. Her mark is quoted in nearby countries at 45 cents on the dollar. But as she fights and finances in a circle within herself, regulating wages and values, saving her men with their own paper promises, her present financial position will be no grave concern until she comes forth again in the international battle of the commercial world.

People can live and fight on far less than their normal rations. Man power losses are final and irreplaceable. Germany has not the men by which to lengthen her fighting line either in Italy or Russia and as to seizing the food supplies of Russia, the people in the inner circle know full well that poor food supplies were at the bottom of the Russian revolution. You cannot summon 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 men to arms even in Russia without pinching the food supply.

Although Russia has suffered in the aggregate the heaviest losses—4,000,000 dead and 4,000,000 crippled and in prison camps — France has had the largest relative loss when total population is considered. Although she "waded in blood" to knock out 500,000 Huns at Verdun, she has under arms more men by 1,000,000 than when she entered the war.

The British Empire still holds the reserve power in the war and the United States will spend $50,000,000,000 long before approaching the present fighting strength of the Briton. The British Empire has swept the seas from pole to pole and belted the earth at the equator. From Scotland to the ice-bound northern pole she guards a waterline of 610 miles day and night so affectively that no German cruiser has yet passed north of Scotland. From the Persian Gulf she has dredged the River Tigris of far-famed Babylon for 500 miles. It is like a romance of the Arabian Nights to contemplate the British moving from Egypt and the Suez canal to Jerusalem in a northern line that may yet meet her forces coming from Bagdad and the east.

The restoration of Palestine and Babylon, their refertilization and the harnessing of their water powers are in sight with the dawn of peace and the loosening of the Turk stranglehold on progress and the waters of the Bosphorus.

Britain has punctured the Zeppelin, crushed the submarine and transported 13,000,000 passengers during this war with a loss of less than 2,500. It only remains for America to reinforce the finances of the allies and the man power defending civilization on the western front and put the liberty metor into the air over Germany in flocks of 10,000 with tons upon tons of dynamite, and the military power of Prussia endangering the peace of the world will be but a matter of history.

Liver Complaint, Biliousness

And Sick Headaches Go Hand-in-Hand and Are Cured When the Action of the Liver is Awakened.

Gananoque, Ont., Feb. 15.—"Biliousness" is the one word used by most people to describe their trouble when the liver gets out of order, leaves bile in the blood, upsets the digestive system and brings on sick headaches and irritatable temper, stomach troubles and irregularities of the bowels.

The trouble begins with the liver becoming torpid and sluggish in action, and disappears when the liver is set right. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cure biliousness promptly because of their direct action on the liver. They thoroughly remove all the symptoms because of their combined action on kidneys, liver and bowels.

Rev. George Alton, Gananoque, Ont., writes: "I had been suffering from bilious attacks for four years. I was very weak, had headaches, and my stomach was so bad that I could hardly eat anything without being troubled by it. I had tried cures, herbs, pills and salts, and was under the doctors care for some time, but instead of getting better I seemed to get weaker. I was unable to fulfill my appointments on Sabbath and had to secure help. I used to take dizzy spells and could not walk across the floor straight. I had almost given up all hope, and my wife said that if I did not get better we would have to quit the work of the ministry. However, in looking over The British Whig, the well-known Kingston paper, I saw Dr. Chase's advertisements in it, and read how Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills had helped others who were troubled as I was. I resolved to give these pills a trial, and I must say that in a short time I obtained relief. I continued taking them for some time, and now I am able to resume my work again. From the benefit I have obtained from these pills, I would recommend them to all who suffer as I did."

(Endorsed by Rev. C. Cunningham, 124 First avenue, Toronto:—"This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with George Alton of Gananoque, and believe his statement with reference to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to be true and correct.")

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, 5 for $1.00, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

Dr. Johnson's Wit.

It is well known, says Outlook, that Dr. Johnson's odd humor crept into some of the definitions in his great English dictionary; for instance, he defined lexicographer as "a writer of dictionaries; a harmless drudge." His dictionary was first published in 1755. Another English dictionary, Bailey's, appeared many years before Johnson's, and it was so popular that several editions of it were printed after its rival appeared. Early editions of Bailey give, under lexicographer, "a writer of a lexicon," etc. In a copy of the edition of 1766, however, picked up recently in New York, there is found added to this, "also, a harmless drudge." Bailey's reviser of 1766, who was apparently not altogether harmless as a drudge, thus copied Dr. Johnson's pleasantry as a new definition!

Whoppers.

Two soldiers, an Irishman and an Englishman, having met in Flanders, began to talk of the hairbreadth escapes they had in battle.

"Well, said the Englishman, "one day in the height of an engagement a shell took the hair off my head. Now, what do you think of that for a haircut?"

"Sure," said Pat, "when I was in a battle a bullet from one of them Maxims whizzed by me and took off every hair of my face. What do you think of that for a close shave?"

Nature Is Outwitted.

The man who invented the sewing machine achieved what he was after when he stopped trying to imitate the human hand. If you go into a factory you will see machines doing things which only human skill could do but a short time ago, but the processes are quite different from the manual method. The inventors have risen superior to the formulae that nature would seem to have laid down for them.

Natural Gas.

Natural gas is probably formed in the earth by a process of nacural distillation from the animal and vegetable remains of past geological epochs, and is nearly the same product as is distilled from coal in the retorts of gas factories, only instead of the heat of fires the internal heat of the earth, aided perhaps by chemical decomposition, has caused its formation on a magnificent scale.

"IT PUT ME BACK ON JOB" SAYS STEVENS

Says It is Astonishing the Way Tanlac Overcame His Troubles

The stomach regulates the condition of the blood and is the fountain head of health or disease as the case may be. Tanlac is intended primarily for the regulation of the stomach and the correction of catarrhal inflammation, but it is no uncommon thing for persons who have used it to find that it has relieved them not only of indigestion, but also of rheumatism, kidney derangements and many other ailments not generally recognized as having their origin in stomach troubles.

The Experience of Albert Stevens, a well known employee of the Archibald and Holmes Construction Company, who lives at 17 Osler Avenue, Toronto, as related in the following statement very forcibly demonstrates the remarkable powers of the "Premier Preparation." Mr. Stevens says:

"Off and on for several years I have been bothered with my kidneys and have had frequent pains in the small of my back. So during the past summer I had an attack which completely disabled me for doing anything in the way of work. I simply had to give up my job, which was paying me seven dollars a day, and go to bed. If my back had been broken it could not have hurt worse. It was something like lumbago and extended all down through my hips and the muscles and the leaders of my legs. I could hardly bear to turn over in bed, the pain was so severe, and the only way that I could raise myself up in bed was by catching hold of the bedpost, and when I did get up I was ranged that the election may not only was laid up this way for two months, and while I tried the best things I knew of. I never did get up and out until I got Tanlac.

"One day I saw a Tanlac testimonial from a man I know personally, so I decided to try it. I was flat on my back in bed when I began on Tanlac, and it may seem astonishing, but it's a fact, by the time I had finished my first bottle I was able to go back to work and I have not lost a day from that time until now. My kidneys do not bother me any more, my back never hurts, and I am enjoying fine health. I have never found anything that did the work like Tanlac and I certainly appreciate what it has done for me enough to tell others about it."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert, by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

To Remove Smoke Stains.

This suggestion will be beneficial to housewives who have not the convenience of electricity or the modern gas fixtures. Frequently the ceiling above an old-fashioned gas jet becomes discolored from smoke and heat. The discoloration may be removed if a layer of starch and water is applied with a piece of flannel. After the mixture has dried it should be brushed lightly with a brush. No stain or mark will remain.

Women Catch Fish With Hands.

Fishing in Samoan seas is often done by the women, and without nets, boats or hooks. They simply wade into the water and form themselves into a ring. The fishes being so plentiful, they are almost sure to imprison some in the ring. These women are very quick and active, and every time they catch a fish with their hands they simply throw it, alive, into the basket on their back.

Translation of Y. M. C. A.

W. Gordon Griffiths of the Y. M. C. A. told an audience at Cefu that he was proud to be a Welshman although he was unable to speak the "language of Paradise." He had, however, learned one thing in Welsh and that was that the letters Y. M. C. A. may be translated to mean "Yma Mae Cyfle Ardercheg" ("Here is a splendid opportunity.")

Coffee a Nutrient.

Coffee is not a stimulant pure and simple, but a very considerable nutrient. Justus Liebig proved that, by taking equal lots of men, working in the salt mines, feeding one lot bread and meat, the other bread and coffee, and comparing results. The coffee squad did more work and came out in better shape than the meat eaters.

Strict Regulation.

Freeman was visiting at his grandpa's home, and as he was a mischievous little chap, was constantly being told, "Don't do this," and "Don't do that." Finally, with a look of disgust on his face, he climbed up into a chair and asked, seriously, "What can a fella do in this house, anyway?"

Spartan Feminine Poise.

Our idea of poise crystallized into definite form when a perfect 36 almost a stranger to us, with whom we happened to be lunching, inadvertently dropped a grape skin down her decollete tage and, except for one slight and almost imperceptible wriggle, gave no sign of nervous disturbance as long as we were around.

Rabbit Hair Supplants Wool.

Rabbit hair is supplanting wool in the felt hat making industry of Australia, where there are thirty factories in operation at present making use of rabbit fur for this purpose. It is said to be superior to the finest merino, and millions of rabbit skins are made use of annually.

How Jugo Slavs Are Tortured

FROM a long report published by the Croatian newspaper Novosti of the speech on the horrors perpetrated by the Austrian Government, delivered by the Jugo-Slav Deputy, M. Tresitch-Pavitchitch, in the Austrian Reichstag on October 19, the following extracts have been culled:

"Mr. Tresitch-Pavitchitch at the outset stated that he had suffered to the uttermost limit of endurance during the time he had spent in prison, and declared that if by any means he should disappear the explanation would not be that he was weary of life, although for three years already death had often appeared to him as a thing to be desired. He proceeded to say that his people were being systematically exterminated by halter, bullet and bayonet, dungeon, deportation, imprisonment and evacuation, by court-martial, by famine, by concentration camps and by intentionally-induced disease. The persecution dated from before the war, and especially from the Serajevo assassination, and as soon as the war broke out the tempest of extermination of all Jugo-Slav patriots began to rage. All whose national sentiment was awake, conscious and honest were arrested, interned, cast into prison, ruined, condemned, executed; all who were too young or too old were doomed to die of hunger, and the rest were intimidated, demoralized and outraged. Preparations had been made long beforehand at a given moment to send all the leaders of the people to the casemates in order to use them as hostages, to cut them to pieces so as to be able to turn the people into helots."

Continuing, he said: "When, after three months of imprisonment in Maribor (Marburg), I was brought up before a judge, the latter said to me: 'I don't know what the charge is against you, and this you will easily understand when you consider that in Dalmatia, Istria and Carniola alone we have arrested more than 5,000 persons.' As we were herded on board in Splaato by the hundred together with criminals of the worst type, as we were led in Rieka (Flume) to the station through a torrential rain, so that we had not a dry stitch left upon us; as we travelled for four days and night via Zagrab and Budapest to Maribor in filthy coaches, without food, without sleep, exposed to the insults of the Magyar mob, exposed, like Siberian prisoners, to blows from rifle butts and curses from the enraged Magyar soldiery—there were many who lost their reason from the shock. With my own eyes I saw one poor wretch leap from the window of the train, going at full speed, out into the darkness of the night and death. At the end of these four sleepless nights we were locked up in the stables of a riding school.

"However, I do not want to speak of Maribor and Graz, because I do not wish to speak of my own sufferings. I must, however, single out Imperial Councillor Doctor Hoffman, prison doctor in Graz, who mercilessly insulted the wretched prisoners and used to tell them that it would be better to poison traitors who were loth to die a natural death.

"But the fate of those who are confined in Mostar, Doboj and Arad was infinitely more terrible. In Mostar the prisoners slept in a basement, on the floor, crowded one on top of the other, together with thieves, brigands and gypsies. The greatest horror of this dungeon was its jailer, Kaspar Scholler. This individual, armed with an iron crook, which he had nicknamed the 'Kronprinz,' used to belabor his charges blindly about the head and shoulders. Blood trickled down the faces of his victims. I refrain from dwelling upon his insults, the gross bestiality of his invective, his fiendish cries of rage. Money alone could for a moment appease the rage of this Cerebus and close his jaws.

"At Arad thousands from Bosnia-Herzegovina were imprisoned in subterranean vermin-infested galleries, where they were packed like sardines. The air was thick with a tepid mist, as in a vapor bath, and the light of the electric lamps shone dimly through the fog. Before long spotted typhus broke out among the prisoners. At first there were only two or three deaths a day; but later on they died in numbers. When the cold weather came they were stripped in order to cover the living who lacked clothes.

"The number of those who died in Arad is estimated at from 3,000 to 4,000.

"Matters were even worse in Doboj. The surroundings of this town constitute the greatest graveyard of the guiltless victims of this horrible epoch. Women, old men, children, were locked up in sheds which had been used previously as a hospital for horses, and were infected with all kinds of equine disease. Lumbar pains, spotted typhus, smallpox and cholera soon made their appearance. Everything was infested by every kind of vermin.

"In accordance with a confidential order from the military commandant, Serajevo, recommending that the prisoners should be treated with the greatest possible harshness and severity, the warders did their best to send their unfortunate charges into the next world. The most convenient and most profitable method was to starve them. Women with four or five children were only given one loaf in five days. The children wailed and cried to their mothers for bread, and the mothers had nothing to give them but tears. Often the mother was already dead, while the child was still shaking her, weeping and asking her for bread.

"According to an approximate estimate by reliable persons, more than 5,000 innocent victims were done to death there."

EGYPT AND THE WAR

HAS ACTED AS LOYAL PART OF EMPIRE.

That Ancient Country Has Been Declared an Enemy of the Hun and the Government Desires That the Part Played in the Struggle Against Autocracy Will Be Duly Noted.

IN looking over the list of those who have done their bit for the Empire, it appears that Egypt has been neglected. This Egypt resents. She is not content to base her fame as the background of the amours of Antony and Cleopatra and as the site of the Sphinx. Egypt has declared herself the enemy of the Hun, and she desires that her efforts in this direction shall be noted. She has stood loyally by the Empire since the beginning of the war. She has resisted efforts of the enemy to inflame her against her Government. She has contributed men and money to the common cause; she has staked everything that she has or is on the success of the war, and she demands some meed of recognition.

Before the war Egypt was not, formally, a part of the British Empire. She was a protectorate. Later on the Khedive was deposed, and fled to Switzerland, where he became openly a part of the German spy propaganda and another Khedive was reared in his stead. Then the fact of Egypt being a part of the British Empire was proclaimed, and she took her place as such. There was naturally much conspiracy on the part of Germany to cause a revolt in Egypt. There had been dissensions there for years previously. The Young Egyptains, whose movement aimed at absolute independence for the country, sent delegates to Switzerland, where they met delegates from India and from other colonies where German money had been freely spent. It semed, five years ago, that Egypt would be retained for the British Crown only at the expense of a bloody war. Well the war came, and Egypt failed to rise, like Ireland. On the contrary, she remained excessively loyal, and rejected the overtures of both German and Turk. In the past couple of years she has done a considerable "bit" in defeating the common enemy.

In Egypt the great majority of the population is the fellaheen, or the small farmers, the peasantry. These citizens might look on indifferently while the Empire fell, just as they viewed with equanimity the decline of the Roman Empire, so long as they were not affected. The object of the British administrators was, therefore, to keep the average Egyptian well fed and well employed. That having been accomplished, he would not give his mind to foreign intrigue; he is not like a Pole, burning with thoughts of national independence, but agrees generally with Tennyson, who said, "What's best administered is best." The rise in the price of practically all commodities helped the Egyptian administrators in this respect. Wages increased. The price of cotton and of various other articles advanced. Law still ruled, and the Egyptians who raised cotton and other crops were permitted to make their reasonable profit. Therefore, when Turk and German agents circulated ideas of rebellion the Egyptian paid no attention. He "carried on" and made a lot of money.

Internal trouble in Egypt might easily have forced the British to employ a portion of their small army more actively than would have suited them in the earlier days. Not only did the peaceful and friendly attitude of the Egyptians relieve the British from this necessity, but they were actually able to use the Egyptian army freely and without even a leavening of white troops for the policing of the frontiers of the Sudan, where, as in times of peace, the British had to deal with tribal affairs. The reconquest of Darfur, for many years a thorn in the side of the Sudan Government owing to the truculence of its Sultan, Ali Dinar, was carried out almost entirely by means of Egyptian troops, the only white men employed being the senior officers, some non-commissioned officers, and the Royal Flying Corps section, which accompanied the expedition and did great work. During the attacks on the canal and the fighting with the Senussi on the western frontier there was an absence of all agitation and disaffection in Egypt. The British task could easily have been made more arduous if they had not had the advantage of the active co-operation of the late Sultan Hussein, who, even before his accession to the throne, had stood out against the reactionary element, and who right up to his death, rendered the British authorities whole-hearted support. Nor must mention be overlooked of the Prime Minister, Hussein Rush di Pasha, who has ably and loyally seconded British efforts.

In Egypt the British forces have been able to recruit [illegible] laborers, whose work was essential for the Allenby expedition. There was no suggestion of compulsion: the men volunteered for both construction work and also for the camel transportation system. Egyptian laborers have toiled in France, in Salonica and in Mesopotamia, and in all theatres of the war they have won high praise. The people of Egypt have also distinguished themselves by the manner in which they contributed to various patriotic funds and to the British war loan. Incidentally, it might be remarked, that there is a great British hospital in Egypt, and that the thousands of men there invalided have been treated with the utmost tenderness. Egypt has remained sound, and there is not now the slightest fear that German gold or German representations will imperil the loyalty of this great colony.

City of the Dead in Czar's Home

"A CITY of the dead." "A living tomb." This is how Harry de Windt, the noted traveller, describes, in the Manchester Guardian, the Siberian town of Tobolsk, to which Nicholas Romanoff, once Czar of all the Russias, and his family have been exiled. De Windt writes:

"Tobolsk is the ancient capital of Siberia, and contains 30,000 inhabitants, largely composed before the war of Germans engaged in the leather and tallow trades. It has been stated that the ex-Czar was conveyed to his place of exile by special train from Russia, which can hardly be correct, seeing that Tobolsk can be reached only by river. I had to travel there for five days from Moscow via Nijni-Novgorod, up the River Volga to Perm, thence across the Ural Mountains by rail to Tiumen, and down the Irtysh river.

"The province of which Tobolsk is chief town is eight times the size of Great Britain, and is sparsely peopled by Russians, Tartars, and furclad Ostiaks and Samoyedes, yet it was once of considerable commercial importance, which, owing to the Trans-Siberian Railway, has now greatly decreased.

"On approaching it from the river and viewed from a distance Tobolsk presents an imposing and picturesque appearance, which is quickly dispelled on closer acquaintance, for the place then assumes a listless, lifeless appearance which sinks into the soul. There is an upper and a lower town, the former being the citadel, which consists of a cluster of white-washed buildings overlooking the river from the summit of a precipitous limestone cliff.

"It is approached by a steep carriage drive, and here the ex-imperial family will probably reside permanently, for the citadel comprises the governor's palace, government offices and a golden-domed cathedral, whence there is a fine view of the river and crescent-shaped city, which chiefly consist of drab-colored, weather-bleached wooden buildings in various stages of decay.

"Neither they nor the streets are kept in decent repair, and as the latter are paved with rough planks which have rotted away in places it is somewhat risky to drive after dark, for the town is but dimly lit. The constant clatter of traffic along these wooden thoroughfares becomes maddening after a time, for it resembles the incessant rolling of thousands of drums, and is generally prolonged far into the night. The best hotel was old, dirty, and comfortless, and permeated, like many of the streets, with an odor of sewage, for the drainage here is of a very primitive description.

"There was a theatre (generally closed) and a so-called cafe chantant, which was unpleasantly suggestive of some low-class dive in New York or San Francisco. Amusements there were none, by day or night, except the arrival or departure of a river steamer, which appeared to afford the inhabitants their only relaxation.

"Some of the shops were fairly good, especially those for the sale of antique jewelry and silver, where sleeve links, scarfpins, and other articles fashioned in the shape of a bell were constantly offered to me. For Tobolsk is as proud of its bell as Lucerne of its lions or Berne of its bears—'the Bell of Ouglitch,' which for tolling the signal for an insurrection was banished here by a czar of the sixteenth century.

"In the Dark Ages Siberian exiles were deprived of their nostrils by means of red-hot pinchers, but this being obviously impossible in the case of the metal offender, its suspenders were publicly removed in the presence of the Czar and a huge concourse of people, and this unique exile has now found a resting place in the local museum.

"Tobolsk presents at all seasons of the year a drab and desolate aspect, especially in summer, when the only trace of greenery is a public garden composed of stunted birch and cedar trees, dusty shrubs, and scentless flowers, intersected by weedy paths ankle deep in wet weather. A dilapidated and deserted bandstand occupies the centre, and near it is a stone obelisk with the inscription 'To Yermak,' the dauntless warrior who with a handful of Cossacks captured Western Siberia three centuries ago from a formidable Tartar force.

"The prison here is the most dismal looking structure, inside and out, which I have ever beheld, yet it is well in keeping with its mournful surroundings. This, in short, is a city of the dead in more ways than one, for Tobolsk has the highest death rate of any town in Siberia, a fact partly attributable to defective drainage and partly to the extensive and stagnant marshes by which it is surrounded, and which are a fruitful source of every malarial disease.

"Look down from the citadel on a summer evening, and the town below you is invariably concealed by a lake of dense, fever-laden mist which has crept in at sunset from the neighboring swamp. Summer is a season of dull grey skies, incessant rain, and swarms of mosquitoes; winter of intense cold, combined with damp, a climatic combination unknown in other parts of Siberia, which elsewhere is invariably sunlit, dry, and bracing. Political exiles have told me that they would rather serve a five years' sentence in the depths of Russian Asia than reside here in comparative freedom for six months, although it is much nearer Europe."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

She Spoke for Herself

By ADIE OLCOTT

(Copyright, 1917, Western Newspaper Union.)

Reverend Doctor Febiger, rector of St. Mark's church, received just enough salary to keep the wolf from the rectory door. Born in England, he had brought with him to America the traditions of the Anglican church as well as English social customs. His eldest child, Lucy, eighteen years old, did most of the housework for the family. She could prepare a tea for her father's parishioners and appear at the table as neat in her appearance as if she had been crocheting.

One morning she was finishing putting to rights the living room when there was a ring at the door bell. Her father was in the hall and opened the door before Lucy could beat a retreat. She therefore ensconced herself behind one of the double doors that separated the living room from the dining room, hoping that the visitor was some vender of wares and would not be admitted, but fearing a different result. She heard the voice of a young man who had paid her some attention, which was very grateful to her.

"Good morning, Doctor Febiger. Can I have a few words with you?"

"Certainly, Mr. Edgerton; step this way, please."

The rector led the way into the living room, thus cornering Lucy behind the door. She considered making a dash to get away, but decided otherwise. She was dressed for dirty work, but she looked as pretty in such apparel as when in her only nice gown. Shame at being caught in such a position was what chiefly detained her. However, as soon as the conversation between the men opened curiosity overruled all else. Mr. Edgerton, who spoke first, was much flustered:

"Mr. Febiger," he said, "you are an Englishman?"

"I am," was the prompt reply.

"I don't blame you, sir. England is a great country."

"The greatest in the world."

"Naturally you cling to the customs of the land of your birth?"

"Naturally."

"Especially in the matter of courtship and marriage?"

Doctor Febiger again assented, this time with some apparent curiosity as to the drift of Mr. Edgerton's remarks.

"In England, I believe," continued the caller, "when a gentleman desires the hand of a lady he proposes to her father—I mean he asks his permission to marry her—that is he does no wooing—"

Mr. Edgerton being quite tangled up in his words, stopped, pressed his handkerchief over his brow, and began again:

"Mr. Febiger, I very much admire your daughter Lucy. I will make a statement regarding my family, income, and then ask your permission to win her."

Lucy clasped her hands in delight; her father looked somewhat crestfallen at the mere suggestion of losing any member of his family, especially Lucy, and remarked coldly that the suitor was pursuing a very honorable course. Mr. Edgerton went on:

"I am of good American stock. My ancestors were pioneers, and pioneers were men and women to accomplish things. I have some property left me by my grandmother, which pays me $2,500 a year. But I don't need to trust to this income, since my salary of $2,000 a year is sufficient for two persons to live on. I can support a wife, and allow my inheritance to accumulate, giving as I have always done, ten per cent to charity."

Lucy expected to see her father throw his arms about her suitor and speak words something like the following: "Noble man, your conduct is in the highest degree honorable. I can only wonder that you care to wed with one so unworthy of you as my daughter." What was her disappointment, her horror, to hear her father say: "I very much regret, Mr. Edgerton, to tell you that it would be absolutely impossible for me to part with Lucy at the present time. There are seven of us in the family, and the salary allowed me by the church is barely sufficient to supply our needs. Lucy is the mainstay of the household. Without her the younger children would be lacking a mother, for my wife is an invalid. Were it not for these facts, I would gladly accede to your request; as it is, I beg you not to speak of marriage to our treasure of the household."

Lucy in her hiding place managed to preserve silence. Mr. Edgerton spoke again, and she became intent upon what he said:

"My dear Mr. Febiger, it would be sheer robbery for me to take away from you so valuable a mainstay. Though it breaks my heart, I will do as you request."

The young man pressed the rector's hand and started for the door. Suddenly he stopped, turned and said:

"Mr. Febiger, I have told you that I possess a property income of $2,500 with such an amount you could employ such assistance as you need to at least partly supply the duties now performed by your daughter. Will you accept this amount, leaving her free to follow her own wishes?"

Suddenly the door behind which Lucy was concealed opened, she stood for a moment like a statue, then her suitor's arms opened, and she flew to its embrace.

WHILE AT WAR

Women Suffer at Home

Toronto, Ont.—"I consider Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription "the very best of woman's tonics. I suffered a severe nervous breakdown. I could not sleep, was weak and tired all the time. I took the 'Prescription' and just a few bottles completely built me up and relieved me of my nervous condition. It is a good medicine and I am glad to recommend it.—Mrs. ALFRED SHEPPARD, 250 Seaton St.

Niagara Falls, Ont.—"I can safely say that 'Favorite Prescription' did me a lot of good. I at one time developed woman's trouble; my nerves were completely shattered, and I became weak. I had severe backache and pains in my side, extending down into my limbs. I doctored, but did not get relieved of my ailment and was down and out when I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and it so completely cured me and restored me to health and strength that I was able to do all my own work and others besides. I do recommend 'Favorite Prescription' to weak and ailing women; they cannot get a better medicine."—Mrs. JOHN LOCKHART, 26 Terrace Ave.

Favorite Prescription is an invigorating, restorative tonic, a soothing and strengthening nervine and a positive remedy for the chronic weaknesses peculiar to women.

This old prescription of Dr. Pierce's is extracted from roots and herbs by means of pure glycerine and is a temperance remedy of 50 years' good standing. Send 10c for trial pkg. of tablets to Dr. V. M. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., or Bridgeburg, Ont.

AWFUL ATTACKS OF HEART TROUBLE

EASED BY SECOND DOSE OF Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills

One of the first danger signals announcing something wrong with the heart is the irregular beat or violent throb. Often there is only a fluttering sensation, or an "all-gone" sinking feeling, or, again you may experience a smothering sensation, gasp for breath and feel as though about to die.

In such cases the action of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills in quieting the heart, restoring its normal beat and imparting tone to the nerve centres, is, beyond question, marvellous.

Mrs. Frank Arseneau, Newcastle, N.B., writes: "I have awful attacks of heart trouble for the past five or six years, and as I had tried many kinds of medicine without getting any better, I decided to give Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills a trial, and to my surprise I found ease from the second dose. I continued taking them until I had used six boxes, and now I feel as well as can be.

"At present my sister is taking them for nervousness, and finds great comfort by their use."

Freedom for Women.

Tartar women in the far Russian provinces have dropped the veil and are freed from sex tyranny as a result of the Russian revolution. In the elections for the local Zemstovs they are voting along with the men.

A letter from Kazan says: "The women's movement here started in the revolution of 1905 as a result of which the women began to go about unveiled. By 1910 a veiled woman was unknown in Kazan. After the revolution in which the Emperor was deposed the Moslem women formed a society and sent delegates to the first All-Russia Conference. Here they presented demands for the abolition of polygamy and the Moslem inheritance law, according to which female heirs receive smaller portions than male. A separate day is set apart for the Tartar women to vote, to satisfy the mullahs and old-fashioned women. About forty per cent. of the women went to the polls on the last election.

"In Kazan one has only to walk through the streets to see that Moslem women are socially the equals of men and have shaken off the shackles of centuries of sex tyranny."

A "Tobacco Line" in Paris.

French tobacco and cigarettes are now obtainable in Paris only once each week, and even then during the space of about thirty minutes. During that half hour the tobacconists' shops present about the same appearance as did the coal and wood yards during the fuel famine last winter. It takes from three to a half dozen policemen for each shop to keep waiting smokers orderly while the weekly supply is being dealt out, and to pacify those that are still in line when the "no more tobacco" sign is hung out.

Easy Drop.

The "lonely" soldier wanted to let down gently the philanthropic damsel who wrote to him three times a week.

"Can you tell me why your eyes are like you and me?" was the query he put in one letter.

"No, dear lonely one, I can't. Tell me, oh, tell me, why, they are thus," replied the maiden.

In the following letter came the answer:

"Because they correspond, but will never meet."

Often Destroyed by Fire.

Time after time, together with the rest of the city of Moscow, the Kremlin has been burned, the last occasion being in 1812 when it was occupied by Napoleon and the inhabitants of the city themselves started the conflagrations in all parts of the city. It was indeed these fires which forced the little corporal to commence his disastrous retreat across the snow-bound steppes of Russia. Napoleon had his headquarters in the Kremlin, and while the flames were not so destructive there as in other parts of the city, yet they forced evacuation.

Compressing Cotton.

Scientific investigation has proved that compression of a high degree does not injure the fiber, and cotton is packed in other countries today at a density substantially three times that of ours by the most economical practice. The Egyptian package has a density of about 37 pounds a cubic foot; the Indian cotton is compressed to 45 pounds per cubic foot; while some Indian and Chinese baling plants effect a density of from 55 to 60 pounds of cotton per cubic foot.

A NECESSITY IN THE HOUSE.

Most of the common ills of life arise from a torpid, sluggish condition of the Liver, Kidneys or Bowels, and because they act on each of these organs in a direct and specific way Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills overcome serious and painful diseases over which ordinary medicines have no control.

Cannot Restore Louvain Treasures

WRITING in the Harvard Graduates' Magazine of "The Loss of Louvain," John Allyne Gade relates an anecdote which he had personally from the Prince de Ligne, whose great-grandfather refused the Belgian throne because his own title and rank as the first nobleman of Belgium seemed to him "quite as good and far stabler than that of king of the little buffer kingdom newly formed out of such different elements by the Congress of Vienna."

The present Prince de Ligne said to Mr. Gade:

"I want to tell you something which I wish you always to remember, and to tell your children. The history of this war will some day be written. However it may be written, here is the truth from me to you. On the evening when the fateful ultimatum was delivered, giving Belgium twelve hours in which to decide whether to allow the German armies to cross Belgium in order to strike immediately at the heart of France, I was sitting with King Albert and the Queen of Brussels. The order was handed to his Majesty. I saw a great wave of emotion sweep through him; he rose and went to his wife. She read what he held. Then she stretched her two hands out to grasp his and I saw, as it were, the soul of one reach out for the other. His Majesty turned to me and said: 'Mon prince, s'il faut mourir, mourons avec honneur!' ('Prince, if death must come, let us die honorably!')"

From the windows of the house of Monsiegneur ——, a professor in the University of Louvain, Mr. Gade looked upon the blackened ruins and turned to ask his host how it was bearable to live among such horrors. The priest answered:

"We leave them yet a little while, lest we forget something.

"Yes, it is better thus, for after all, who could reconstruct from memory all that had been the slow work of centuries?"

"Safe in the vaults of the cellar" of the university library, Mr. Gade's guide drew a photograph from under his robe. It showed the front entrance in relief against a cloud of smoke. To the right of the door was still legible the placard posted there by the German authorities and proclaiming that "artistic monuments, historic edifices and national works will be carefully guarded and respected."

Gaul, Roman, Frank, Burgundian, Spaniard, Austrian, and Dutchman had all passed this way, remarks the American. "The Teuton alone had left the mark of the beast."

Louvain is a free university, Catholic and truly national. When it reopened in 1834 (for the French Revolution had caused its closing) every believer in Belgium was asked by the church to give one franc to the institution. Louvain has had few scholarships and little endowment. She has depended on tuition fees and private generosity. Burn or raze to the ground Oxford or Cambridge; Harvard, Yale, Princeton—any one of a dozen or more American colleges—and the situation would be less desperate, remarks the New York Sun. They would each be able to rebuild and could then proceed to recruit new endowment funds. Must not Germany make reparation, such reparation as is possible?

No reparation can restore to the world the galleries where Charles V., ruler of almost all Europe, pored over old learning. There is no way to replace the 250,000 manuscripts which went up in smoke and ashes on August 27, 1914. Mankind is permanently poorer by the destruction of complete sets of all sixteenth century editions of Virgil, nineteen sixteenth century editions of Terence, ten of Sallust, seventeen of Quintilian, practically complete sixteenth century editions of Tacitus, Seneca, Martial, Ovid, Horace, Juvenal, Livy, Lucretius, Lucian, Cicero, and Cæsar. Rare copies of Aristotle and the imperishable Greeks are lost forever; priceless early Bibles, whole libraries of ecclesiastical history and civil laws, texts illumined and initialled and bordered by the patient labor of Spanish, German, and Low-land monks. "Here lay the whole history of the Protestant faith. Here was the truth regarding the Spanish Conquest and the grip of the Inquisition." There were mathematical treasures also.

Guests Must Bring Bread Cards.

In such sorely pressed neutral countries as Sweden the war has resulted in rich and poor alike being subjected to many restrictions heretofore unknown, says the Popular Mechanics Magazine. An illustration of this—not without its humorous aspect—is found in a Swedish wedding invitation recently received in this country by friends of the bride and bridegroom.

The latter were members of two wealthy families in Stockholm, and the handsomely engraved missive included an invitation to a banquet at one of the finest hotels in the Swedish capital. It was in a notation at the bottom of the page that the hand of war manifested itself, in these words: "Please bring your bread cards." This meant, of course, that well-to-do hosts at a wedding could not provide their guests with bread except in restricted amounts and in the manner prescribed by law.

Large Rice Crop in Lombardy.

Lombardy is the second largest rice-producing department in Italy, being next to Piedmont. The rice-producing area in Lombardy is given at 129,500 acres, against 345,500 acres for Italy. In 1916 the rice crop amounted to 214,700 tons, against 520,300 tons for the whole of Italy, and this year it is given at 200,000 tons, against 512,200 tons in Italy.

The milk of the Bulgarians, well known all over the world for its superior nutritive quality, is made by exposing it to the sun, the rapid development of the germs under the action of the ultra violet rays being such that when it becomes dry they are in highly concentrated form.

Moss Is Valuable.

"Moss" is the popular name for several kinds of small flowerless plants which flourish in damp places. In mountainous and wet districts tracts of moss are of great service in retaining the water and preventing sudden floods.

Too Particular.

The girl who thinks more of her georgette crepe waist than she does of her beau and refuses to permit it to get mussed will never march to the well-known tune of Mr. Mendelssohn.

CHAPTER IV.

Madge Loring had gone out of her way to see me—or so it appeared—and I could not imagine why. I was not at all her type, not at all the kind of woman in whom she would be intersted. I was rather domestic—knew little of society, save the society one always finds in a small town where everybody knows everybody else. But twice since she had called (I had not yet returned it.) I had met her when shopping and she had insisted on taking me home in her car.

Her talk ran constantly upon men, married men, usually. She said many things to which I could not agree.

"There is nothing on earth a man enjoys like starting a flirtation," she remarked against nothing that I could see. "Most men are willing to spend days or weeks or months in stirring up the love flame in a girl's heart, then——"

"Blow it out or let it die a natural death for lack of fuel." I interrupted.

"Just what I was going to say," and to my delight she looked a bit surprised.

"She thinks because I am from a small town and younger than she, that I don't know anything," I thought.

"Or leave it for some other man to extinguish," she added hastily. "We are foolish, too, we women; we usually insist upon raking over the ashes of a dead fire, trying to find a live coal, when there isn't a sign of one."

"So you think that all women are alike?" I didn't know what else to say.

"Yes, and most all men. When a man marries he imagines he has done all that is required of him if he gives his wife a place to live and something to eat and wear. He has proved his love by marrying her; he need not mention the fact. If they are not happy it is always HER fault. It never occurs to him that she feels neglected because he does not kiss her or fails to bring her candy and flowers as he used to when courting her."

She stopped suddenly with a short little laugh.

"What awful things I am saying to you—a bride! Of course, George, is different; rather he has not been married long enough to become careless," and she commenced to talk of other things, the people she wanted me to meet, etc.

But I felt my cheeks burn, and I couldn't help the feeling that, for some reason, this woman didn't like me and was saying such things purposely to make me miserable.

I had an idea that she was popular with men for all her cynical speeches; George had said as much. But I doubted if she were so with women. I know her conversation made me uneasy—put thoughts into my mind that would never have come of themselves, disturbing thoughts which kept recurring and making me unhappy.

That night George and I had a—I won't call it a quarrel—a little misunderstanding. And I cried myself to sleep. In the morning when I referred to it, he said that I had showed bad taste in bringing it up—that he had forgotten it, etc.

"But I couldn't forget, and I slept hardly at all," I returned as I left the table and threw my arms around his neck—causing him to drop his fork, and at the same time, a piece of ham, which made a spot on his waistcoat.

"There! Now see what you have done!" he exclaimed angrily. "I'm late now, and I'll have to change." He was neatness personified—one of the best groomed men I have ever seen—and I knew he would change all his clothes rather than be seen with a spot on them.

"Oh, I am so sorry!" and I kissed him again. "But I was so miserable to think we almost quarrelled. It would be awful if we ever really did, wouldn't it?" and I smoothed his hair before I returned to my place at the table.

"Oh, I don't know as it would be so terrible! most people do quarrel occasionally we probably will be no exception."

"Oh, yes, we will! I should die if we quarrelled. I haven't anybody but you now. I am so far from home it seems as if I were all alone in the world with just you. We never must quarrel, never!" I repeated, and the tears gushed from my eyes at the thought.

"What are you crying for? I should think that I was the one to cry. If you had stayed where you belonged I wouldn't have to change my clothes."

"Oh, just the thought of quarrelling with you me me cry." I said in a choked voice.

"Well, I'll tell you one thing and that is, if you don't stop crying, we will quarrel all right! I never could stand a sniveling, fretty woman. So if you don't want to quarrel, cut out the weeps!"

"I'll try George, but don't speak so crossly. I told you I was sorry I made you spot your vest. But it was because I loved you that I wanted to kiss you, remember."

"That's no excuse for you acting so silly."

To-morrow: Good wives are born; not made.

COULD NOT SLEEP.

Miss Gertrude Pratt, Wolseley St., Barrie, Ont., writes: "I was very much run down and could not sleep either day or night, and my arms and legs ached as that life was very miserable. After using six boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I feel well and strong again."

CONFUSING CITY OF CAGNES

Tourists Find It Advantageous to Learn to Distinguish From Similar Name—Cannes.

American and English visitors to the Riviera soon come to know Cagnes by name, according to Harper's Magazine. It is a challenge to their ability to pronounce French—a challenge that must be accepted, if you are in the region of Grasse or Nice or Antibes. Two distinct tramway lines and several roads lead from Grasse to Cannes and Cagnes. Unless you are very careful you may find yourself upon the wrong route. Once on the Cagnes tramway or well engaged upon the road to Cagnes, when you had meant to go to Cannes, the mistake takes hours to retrieve.

At Nice chauffeurs and cochers love to cheat you by the confusion of the two names. You bargain for the long trip to Cannes, and are attracted by the reasonable price quoted. In very short time you are at Cagnes. The vehicle stops. Impossible to rectify your mispronunciation without a substantial increase of the original sum of the bargain. Antibes is between Cagnes and Cannes. Cagnes is nearer and it is always to Cannes that you want to go. Spell the name or write it on a piece of paper if you are to be sure that you will be taken west instead of east.

GRAIN MARKET

There were but slight fractional changes in prices in oats and corn yesterday, the markets closing about 1-2c higher. For the present it is largely a weather market, favorable weather conditions improving prospects for freer offerings, and to that extent having a bearish tendency. The inability, however, to sudden changes and stormy conditions holding up deliveries tends to keep prices generally firm.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease

CATTLE MARKET

UNION STOCK YARDS—Receipts yesterday, 74 cars, with 660 cattle, 99 calves, 3,533 hogs and 118 sheep and lambs.

Cattle market was very slow yesterday except for the choicest butcher steers and heifers and choice heavy steers. For stale and medium quality butcher the demand was slow and draggy prices barely holding steady.

There was a fair run of hogs in, but with the heavy snowstorms prevailing prospects looked glum for later deliveries. Packers were bidding $19.50, but the hogs were not changing hands.

Jesus bringing peace. Mark 4:35; 5:20.

Golden Text: Jehovah hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad. Ps. 126:3.

1. Verse 35. On which side of the sea did Jesus propose to go?

2. Verse 36. Why would you say or not that taking Jesus on board our ship insures a calm and safe passage to our journey's end? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by the members of the club.)

3. Verse 37. How do you explain that such a great storm could take place while Jesus was on the ship?

4. Verse 37. What reason can you give for believing that God to-day ever changes or modifies natural laws for the safety or convenience of anybody?

5. Why is it that God permits storm, stress and strain to enter into the lives of most of us?

6. Verse 38. What danger, if any, is there to a ship if Jesus is on board?

7. Verse 38. What right would you say, had Jesus to be asleep, when the ship and the passengers looked to be in such imminent danger?

8. Under the circumstances with Jesus on board, were they wise or unwise, and why?

8. No matter what the apparent calamity or danger may be, in the life of a child of God, why is there never any need of being afraid?

10. Verse 40. Were they right or wrong, and why, to administer this rebuke to Jesus?

11. Why would you say or not, that all complaining against God's providence is wrong?

12. Verses 39-41. Why would it, or not, have been better, if the prayer that Jesus answered had never been prayed?

13. Verses 39-41. What did Jesus mean by his kind rebuke of their prayer?

14. Chap. 5, 1-7. What reason is there to believe that violent insanity sometimes gives what may be called super-human strength?

15. How did this poor man probably know Jesus?

16. Presuming that this man was actually possessed with devils, would it have been possible for him to have actually known Jesus other than by ordinary human means?

17. Verses 8-12. What evidence is there if any that to-day some people are possessed with devils as this man was?

18. What is the proof that very wicked and violent men, have by coming to Jesus been made gentle and good?

19. Verses 13-20. What right had Jesus to be the means of destroying 2,000 swine?

Drum Major Necessary.

Indispensable is the drum major of a rural brass band, and the envy of the small boy is he as well. This functionary is about as serviceable as a figurehead on a battleship, writes Zim in Cartoons Magazine, yet his duties are beyond estimation in keeping the tubas and trombones from stumbling into mud puddles and guiding the alleged musicians past refreshment emporiums. His success rests on the extent of his ability to twirl the stick over three-story buildings and catch it behind his back on its descent. He is to the band what the monkey is to a hand-organ. All eyes are upon him while the ears feast on the music. Big city bands often roam about the streets unescorted by a drum major and feel not at all discommoded by his absence, but a country band would not deem itself fit to be seen on parade without this distinguished appendage.

World's Greatest Weavers.

The ancient Indians of Peru are now regarded as the world's greatest weavers. This noteworthy revelation in the history of textile art is the result of the critical examination of many rich and beautiful tapestries and other fabrics executed by the gifted ancient Indian population of Peru. Though buried three centuries or more in the sandy desert after being made with primitive handlooms and other weaving implements, these wonderful fabrics are now found to be superior to those turned out by the automatic looms of the great mills of today. The primitive Peruvian handloom consisted of two sticks, one at the top and one at the bottom.

Commissaries Urge That Holy War Be Declared By Russia

Many of Larger Russian Cities Advocate Arming of Entire Population of Country and Protest Against Signing of Peace Terms--Allied Envoys Have Left Petrograd--Many Successful Raids Are Carried Out By British Troops

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Joseph Shaplen).

PETROGRAD, March 1.—Soviet Commissaries, arriving from many of the larger Russian cities, demanded that a "holy war" be proclaimed against the German invaders. They advocated the arming of the entire population of the country.

The district commissaries who represented Kazal, Kourama, Varatoff, Tsaritsin, Viatka, Uralsk, Sebastopol and other large cities protested against the signing of the German peace terms. Some of the smaller cities and villages favour the peace pact.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

ZURICH, March 1.—Austria-Hungary,, declaring it is acting on the request of the Ukraine, is intervening militarily in that country, it was reported here to-day. The operations are said to have begun yesterday.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PETROGRAD, March 1.—The enemy to-day threw large forces against the Orsha front (323 miles south of Petrograd), it was reported here.

Thousands of armed workmen, from Moscow, dug several miles of trenches beyond Orsha. A battle is expected there momentarily; the civilians are leaving.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

TOKIO, March 1.—The Japanese Ambassador at Petrograd, in a despatch received here to-day, officially notified his Government that the Allied Envoys were leaving the city.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Feb. 28, (Delayed).—A report from the British Headquarters in France and Belgium to-night reads: Early this morning English troops successfully raided the enemy trenches in the neighbourhood of Gonnelieu (?), south-west of Cambrai. Considerable casualties were inflicted on the garrison, a machine gun blown up, and a few prisoners brought back. In a raid last night south of Houthoist Forest, Dorset, Manchester, Lancaster and Scottish troops penetrated the enemy's defences to a depth of 1,200 yards. In addition to 14 prisoners captured, large numbers of the enemy are believed killed. Hostile artillery has shown some activity again to-day at a number of points along our front, particularly in the neighbourhood of St. Quentin, south-east of Armentieres, and in the Zonnebeke sector.

LONDON, March 1.—A successful raid, in which we captured a few prisoners, was carried out by Stafford and Cheshire troops last night, north of the Ypres Staden Railway, the War Office reports. There was some artillery activity on both sides during the night in the neighbourhood of Lavacquerie and east of Ypres.

LONDON, March 1.—The Russian Council of People's Commissioners has decided to return to Petrograd, says an official Russian statement, received here to-day. The removal of the elements of the population valueless in the defence of the capital is being continued, however. Gold and other valuables continue to be shipped away from the city, the statement adds.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 1.—The British and French Embassies have left Petrograd, according to a telegram from the Russian Official News Agency in Petrograd, which bears no date.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, March 1.—Pskoff is in German hands, despite contrary rumours, an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Petrograd declared to-day.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, March 1.—The British merchant steamship Tiberia, of 4,880 tons gross, owned by the Anchor Line, was sunk by a German submarine about February 27, while bound for this port. The crew was rescued.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, March 1.—German troops, continuing their advance in Russia, have reached the Dnieper River, the War Office announces.

Austro-Hungarian troops have begun an advance in the Ukraine.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, March 1.—American naval officers regard today as very serious the threat which the prospective German capture of Russian naval ships means for the United States and her Allies.

Russia has four extremely good battle cruisers, a large number of destroyers, battleships and other craft.

Navy men said the very near possibility of German inroads on the Russian fleet constituted one of the worst menaces which the Allied world has had to face. They believed that Germany would have little or no difficulty in capturing the Russian ships, in view of the utter disorganization of the Slav morale.

The British fleet is in no position to chase the Germans, who are now reported swinging into the Gulf of Finland. It would be trapped by mines and submarines, officials said, and would be certain to suffer heavy losses.

GLENART CASTLE WAS SUNK BY SUB. SAY SURVIVORS

Hospital Ship Was Sent to the Bottom by German Undersea Boat While in the Free Area, a Breach of the German Pledges

153 PEOPLE MISSING

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, March 1.— Sworn statement made independently by two survivors of the British hospital ship Glenart Castle, which went down Tuesday in the Bristol channel, an official announcement says, made clear that she was sunk by an enemy submarine which was sighted in hailing distance within ten minutes of the time the ship was struck.

"It will be noted," the announcement says, "that the Glenart Castle was in free area and was sunk even in the breach of the German pledge as to the immunity of hospital ships from attack in that area."

The total number of persons saved from the ship so far reported is 29. One hundred and fifty-three persons still are missing.

WANTED TO TURN THE HOSE ON W. J. BRYAN

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

TORONTO, March 1.—Bryan came within an ace of being washed off the platform at Massey Hall last night. But for the presence of a newspaper reporter in the gallery with the interrupters the hose pipe would have been turned on the speaker.

When the excitement was at its height one of the veterans spied the fire hose hanging temptingly on the wall. Close to it was the hydrant. With a whoop he was on his feet and made a dart for the hose.

"Say, how about that hose now?" said the veteran.

"Better leave it alone," said the reporter.

"No I'm hanged if I do; lets have it down."

Wise counsel finally prevailed, but the veteran never moved from the hose.

Sir Adam Beck Here On March 6th

Sir Adam Beck will address a public meeting in the Collegiate Institute Assembly Hall next Wednesday night according to a telegram received by Mayor Duncan this morning. This visit has been expected for a long time, and it comes opportunely now, when the Hydro-Electric Railway Association has fixed its determination to arouse the people in support of the programme that has been prominently before the public during the past weeks.

PEACE ONLY ON PROPER TERMS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

JASSY, Roumania, Tuesday— An official note announcing that Roumania has decided to enter into peace negotiations with the Central Powers declares the reports that Roumania will accept peace at any price are untrue. The government, it is added, will only enter into negotiations if assured that they will be conducted on a basis acceptable in every respect.

RESULTS ARE COMPLETE

Returns of Soldier Vote Taken in England Show That Capt. Burnham Received 482 Votes, With 15 Ballots Cast For Mr. Hall

DEPOSIT IS LOST

The result of the soldier vote in England in the recent election has, as was expected, materially increased the majority of J. H. Burnham, government candidate in West Peterborough. The figures show that 497 Peterborough soldiers voted in England, with the following result:

| | |
|---|---|
| Hall | 15 |

The election figures are now complete, and they show that Capt. Burnham has been returned by a total majority of 3,418 votes. Mr. Hall loses his $200 deposit by 227 votes as he required 3,191 votes to equal one-half of the vote polled for the successful candidate.

The complete figures for West Peterborough are as follows:

| | Burnham | Hall |
|---|---|---|
| Civilian vote | 5,186 | 2,904 |
| Soldier vote in North America | 161 | 13 |
| Soldier vote in France | 553 | 32 |

PRESENTATION TO MR. AND MRS. TULLY

Mr. D. W. Tully Is Retiring From Farming—The Address

About one hundred and twenty friends and neighbours of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Tully, of Cavan, called at their home last evening and surprised Mr. and Mrs. Tully by presenting them with an address and a writing desk, Mr. Tully is retiring from farming and has purchased a home in Springville, North Monaghan.

Mr. W. E. Ball presided as chairman. Mr. Thomas McIndoo read the address and Mr. D. H. Wood and Mr. S. L. Connell made the presentation.

Mr. Tully made a very suitable reply and on behalf of himself and his wife and daughter, thanked his many friends and neighbours for their kindness.

A short programme of songs, recitations, readings and speeches, was given, followed by an oyster supper. The evening was an exceedingly pleasant one for all.

The address was as follows:

To Mr. and Mrs. Tully:

We, your friends and neighbours, have gathered here to-night to express to you, even in a small way, the respect we have for you.

Some fourteen or fifteen years ago you came into our midst. During those years, we can honestly say, we have never heard a neighbour say an unkind word about you. What a tribute to lay at your feet. You came into our midst a stranger, but you soon became our neighbour and friend. You won our respect by your kind, honest, neighbourly spirit and you won our admiration by your business ability, your thrift and progressiveness.

As you leave our midst, we want you to know you will be missed. You have been a force in the community and your influence has been for good. As you bid adieu to our community we know there are many who will bid you welcome to theirs. And that these may not sound to you as idle words, we want to endorse them by presenting to you this writing desk. As you sit there, pen in hand, reflecting on the past, remember you have true friends as long as friendship lasts.

Signed by the committee:

S. L. Connell.

Speaks For Itself Says Ben Spence

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

TORONTO, Ont., March 1.—"Last night's meeting speaks for itself and for Hon. W. J. Bryan," said Ben. H. Spence, Secretary of the Dominion Alliance, to-day. "To-day, more than ever before, the accent is on the honorable. So far as we are concerned, the meeting is over, and I don't care to discuss the matter further."

GAS TRENCHES ARE DESTROYED BY SAMMIES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Fred S. Ferguson).

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, March 1.—With the aid of French observers, American artillery probably destroyed the German trenches from which the gas was thrown in Tuesday's attack. Working in a sea of mud, Yankee gunners kept the shells screaming towards the Boches for an hour, at the rate of one a minute.

French observers located special minewerfer trenches, consisting of six double rows of 20 gas projectors to a trench. These are believed demolished by the American fire.

American gas casualties now number 84—six dead and 78 in hospital. There was an additional death to-day.

POLICE GET TWO SOLDIERS OUT OF SIX LUMBERMEN

Arrested on Suspicion of Having Evaded the Military Service Act —One of Them Fined For Carrying Revolver

HOMES NEAR TWEED

Six young men returning from the McCullough lumber camp to their homes in and around Tweed, were arrested by the police last night as suspected evaders of the Military Service Act. Two of them were picked up on George street, and the other four were taken at the C.P.R. station shortly before the midnight train arrived.

The charge against Joseph Collins in police court this morning was that having been granted exemption on national grounds, he had failed to comply with the conditions upon his leave of absence from the army had been granted. He stated that he was exempted at Belleville as a farmer, but had gone back to the lumber camp for a month.

"You're not on a farm," Magistrate Dumble reminded him.

"You can't farm during the winter," Collins replied.

Magistrate Dumble stated that exemption was granted farmers so long as they continued to work on farms. Otherwise it was forfeited. "You must report to the proper authorities and go on duty," His Worship ordered.

"Is there a recruiting office here," Collins asked unperturbed by the court's decision.

"Yes," Chief Thompson replied.

"Well, I want the clothes right away," he stated, and the Chief assured him he would be accommodated at once.

Carried a Revolver.

When arrested Collins had a Smith and Wesson revolver and package of cartridges in his possession.

"You seemed to be ready for war," Magistrate Dumble commented.

Collins pleaded guilty to carrying a revolver without a license. He said he had bought it from a man in the shanty and was taking it home to shoot squirrels."

Mr. Dumble told him that it was not the policy of the law to permit the carrying of deadly weapons. A man might get into a passion, in the heat of which he might kill some person.

"All you need is a good temper," His Worship counseled.

"Well, I've got that," Collins laughed, "the very best."

When he was fined $20 and costs, he said, "I've got the price," and before he gets into khaki his "roll" will be somewhat lightened.

The revolver was confiscated for the Crown.

A Class "C" Man.

Joseph Genore was charged with failing to report for military service.

Chief Thompson said he had been notified by Mr. Newton of the Tweed tribunal, that Genore's exemption card, received yesterday, showed that he was a Class "C" man.

Magistrate Dumble—You must carry your exemption certificate with you or you may be arrested at any time.

UNITED STATES STILL UNDECIDED AS TO SIBERIA

Allies Are Looking to America to Decide Whether There Shall Be Joint Action, a Move by Japan Alone or No Steps at Present

MILITARY MEN DUBIOUS

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Carl D. Groat.)

WASHINGTON, March 1.—American decision as to Japanese or joint Allied action in Siberia still hung fire to-day.

The State Department said this forenoon no determination has been reached. The Cabinet was to meet this afternoon, however, and the problem, containing many serious international aspects, was regarded likely to come up for full discussion.

Meantime army and navy authorities felt no action should be taken in Siberia without American sanction. Officials, however, let it be known that they feared many Russians would join the Germans in case Japan entered Siberia. They said Germany was holding up the spectre of a Berlin-to-Tokio route so that Japan might use it as an excuse for jumping into Siberia.

Other authorities scouted the possibility of a German plot to swing Japan into an alliance with her on the claims that the two nations could control the world.

Those in favour of Japanese action felt that the presence of Japanese forces in Siberia would distinctly be beneficial and would act to hold back any German invasion or uprisings in that section.

They doubted the possibility of a German-Japanese alliance.

In any event they said, Japanese action for the present would help the Allied cause and was very much worth having. United States participation would necessarily be limited by physical difficulties. The problem in the end would amount almost exclusively to a Japanese enterprise, military men declared.

The British Ambassador Lord Reading, called upon Secretary Lansing to-day to discuss the Siberian problem. It was understood that he was informed the American position was not yet defined, but the tenor of the conference was unrevealed.

WASHINGTON, D.C., March 1. — The Government is finding some difficulty in determining its course toward Japan's suggestion for action in Siberia.

The President and Secretary of State Lansing have an open mind on the matter, but it is likely Japan will be answered in a short time. The Allies are pressing for the answer. They are looking solely to the United States to decide whether there shall be point action, lone action by Japan, or no steps for the present.

American participation would probably be extremely small, extending only to some naval aid. The American decision is apparently influenced by a desire to ascertain Germany's probable intentions in Russia.

With her drive slowing up it is possible that the United States will deem action in Siberia less advisable than otherwise, though a distinct Teuton menace will still cloud the east and near east.

Military men doubt the advisability of the move. A Russian Embassy authority suggests that a lone Japanese move would cause trouble and that if action is attempted, it should be joint with a full statement of objectives in advance. In some quarters, however, there was a tendency to let Japan act alone, without involving the Allies and America.

Ex-Secretary of State Is Howled Down by Returned Soldiers When He Attempts to Address Dominion Alliance Mass Meeting.

STATEMENT TO PRESS

Toronto, March 1. — Shouting "What about the Lusitania?" "Get out, dirty German!" "Sauerkraut!" singing patriotic songs, stamping with their feet, shaking their fists over the balcony railings, and ringing bells, an organized body of war veterans last night howled down William Jennings Bryan, former Secretary of State, in the United States, who came to address the Dominion Alliance mass meeting in Massey Hall. At least one of the soldiers wore a gas mask and made himself very conspicuous in the top gallery, waving his arms like a windmill when the soldiers sang "How dry I Am." Others carried the Union Jack and the Canadian ensign, which they waved with great gusto as the National Anthem and "The Maple Leaf Forever" were sung.

Half a battalion of civil and military policemen were present prepared to put the disturbers out of the hall, but Bryan himself refused to permit this to be done. He told Mr. R. J. Fleming, General Manager of the Toronto Railway Company, who presided, that if the returned soldiers were ejected by force, he would not speak. Mr. Fleming warned the soldiers that if they did not subside they would be put out by force, but the distinguished visitor called a halt.

STATEMENT TO THE PRESS.

"Too many men are being injured on the battlefields of Europe," he exclaimed, "and I am not willing that anyone should be hurt in an effort to make it possible for me to speak. My patriotism is satisfactory to the President of the United States, it is satisfactory to the Cabinet of the United States, it is satisfactory to the Congress of the United States, and there is not one single American living under our flag who dares to say that there is a drop of blood in my veins that is not loyal to my country. I don't need the endorsement of anybody anywhere else. There is not a city anywhere in the Union where there is any danger of my being interrupted."

This statement was dictated to the representatives of the press who climbed to the platform when Mr. Bryan was refused a hearing. As the reporters gathered around him with their notebooks the uproar was increased a hundred fold, but the former Secretary of State proceeded to explain his position. "I don't know if I can make myself heard to large number, but I can make myself heard to the representatives of the press, and I beg leave to state my position to the people who will read your newspapers," he said. "I am here by invitation. I come as a representative of 25,000,000 American people who are banded together in various organizations for the prohibition of the liquor traffic. I have spoken at one hall to-night to an audience that gave not only respectful but enthusiastic attention. I am here to speak to this audience. I find that less than five per cent., probably more nearly less than two per cent., of this audience refuses to allow the rest of the audience to hear the speech. Ordinarily those who interrupt a meeting are put out on the theory that no few people have a right to deprive an overwhelming majority of their right to hear, but in this case I am not willing that force should be used to eject the men from the hall. I would rather that the meeting should break up than that force should be used. I am perfectly willing to lose the opportunity to speak, much as I would like to present a great subject to a great audience, rather than have it said that anyone was dealt with physically for any discourtesy that might have been shown to me."

HAS SUPPORTED ALLIED CAUSE

"Two days ago," he continued, "I spoke in the Legislative hall of Albany, the Capital of New York State, and I have travelled through every

PREFERENTIAL VOTING.

A bill introduced in the Ontario Legislature at the present session, and known as "The Preferential Voting Act," has some interesting features about it, and will no doubt meet with a considerable amount of approval. The measure gives any municipal council the power to provide a preferential ballot for use in the election of mayor, warden, reeve, councillor or alderman, where only one office is to be filled, and where more than two candidates have been nominated. The ballot will be so arranged that the elector may not only vote for his first choice for the position, but may also designate second and subsequent choices. That is to say, where Jones, Smith and Robinson are running for office, the elector may mark his ballot for Jones, and vote for Robinson as second choice. The idea is to utilize the votes cast for any unsuccessful candidate by redistributing them after such candidate has been dropped from the contest.

USE RETURNED OFFICERS.

The agitation over the appointment of Capt. Flanagan of Toronto as head of the Dominion Police for No. 3 Military District, brings into prominence a question that has caused many people considerable thought. Why is not more use made of returned officers? At this stage of the war the military positions at home should as far as possible, be held by the officers who have been in the midst of the war game and know the conditions. It is a common experience for an officer to come back after spending a year or two at the front to find himself inferior in rank to former comrades in the militia who have not been overseas and who have profited by remaining at home. There are many fine officers incapacitated for further service at the front who could be advantageously used in some of the comfortable berths at home. General Mewburn should give them a chance.

FISH SCHEME RAPPED.

That the Ontario government is getting into the fish business only for political publicity, and that it is doing the industry infinite harm is the charge made by A. H. Brittain, the vice-president of the Canadian Fishermen's Association and vice-president of the Maritime Fish Corporation, Limited. Mr. Britain says that the essential difference the policies of the Dominion and Ontario governments is this:

The federal government wants to get fresh fish to the people at minimum cost, and to do this it is using the the existing or established channels of business. The Ontario government on the other hand, for political purposes, endeavours to build up an organization that is non-effective, but rather costly. If the Ontario government produced definite results and placed fish in the public's hands at a fair price, there would be no complaint, but when politics are permitted to play too big a part in an industry that is vital to the well-being of the people, and which is expected to fill a gap created by the shipment of necessary foods overseas, it is time the fishermen made their complaint.

"The Canadian fishermen want, and have asked the Ontario government to thoroughly investigate their own fish business, and give a fair and impartial report as to the results of the work; also as to whether production has been increased, and the price has been reduced.

The Ontario government proposes to take 20 per cent. of the fishermen's catch and give him a price that means a loss to him of 3c. a pound; in whitefish the loss is 5c. a pound. The government claims that it will have 9,000,000 pounds of fish for sale this year; this, presumably, includes the 20 per cent. to be taken from the Canadian fishermen.

The normal per capita consumption of fish in Canada is 20 pounds a year, so that the Ontario government proposes to supply three and one-half pounds per person to 2,500,000 in the province, which is a mere drop in the bucket. The matter simply resolves itself into this: The Ontario government is just getting into the business sufficiently to get a political publicity out of it, and nothing more, but it also is succeeding in doing everything to annoy those in the industry.

Further, the Ontario government asks an appropriation of $192,000 to handle the fish, which places a tax of seven and one-half cents per capita for the cost of the three and a half pounds of fish, before it is caught, so that if the government fulfills its promise and leaves the public five cents a pound on fish, the total saving would be sixteen and one-half cents per capita, less seven and one-half cents taxes to handle the fish, or a net saving of nine cents per capita for the year, that is, providing the government appoints a good business man to handle the fish.

But consider the position of the fisherman; if left alone he could have sold these three and one-half pounds per capital for three cents a pound more than the government will pay him, yet it will be cheaper than the government's price, when the latter's indirect tax of 7 1-2 per cent. is taken into consideration, but the government will add more than three cents to the fish before it gets to the consumer.

The fisherman is, therefore, a loser at the rate of ten and one-half cents per capita, in order to save the people nine cents per capita.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The promptness with which the Toronto police acted in the case of Capt. Bailey, Army Medical Corps, who told the Prohibition Convention that ninety per cent. of the Canadian troops at the front were drunk at Christmas will be appreciated by all friends of the boys overseas.

The Examiner joins with his many friends in congratulating Major Garnet Greer, M.C., upon his promotion to the important position of Assistant Deputy Director of Medical Services with the 4th Canadian Division. This young Peterborough doctor went overseas with the 1st contingent, has had over three years' service at the front, refusing the chance of a furlough, and has to his credit also the winning of the coveted Military Cross.

"Store closed; no coal!" reads a sign on a Brock street place of business. Sherman was right.

Officers, many of whom were never in action, travelling first class, non commissioned officers and men coming home on furlough, in the second-class, and wounded N. C. O.'s and men in the roll of steerage passengers is said to be the system in vogue on transports returning to Canada. The Quinney charges should be carefully investigated.

The "Voice of the People" column in the Examiner, last night, demonstrated that there are at least four people in Peterborough who are not afraid to sign their name to a communication intended for publication.

Hon. Howard Ferguson announces that the Ontario Government has wood limits amounting to one million cords of wood along the railway in Algonquin Park available for the use of municipalities. The local Council should waste no time in investigating this offer.

It is a sad commentary on conditions in Canada that there are apparently more people interested in the fate of the Dentals hockey team at Kitchener to-night than there are in the progress of the Germans in Russia.

People in England are now restricted to one and a quarter pounds of meat a week. Sorry to say hundreds of Peterborough citizens consume more than that quantity of meat every week in after-theatre and after-skating suppers.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals, or violent or extreme statements, must, to secure insertion, be signed with the writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I see in last night's paper that Engineer Parsons says Tom Arnott had not cleared Park street drain out properly. Let me say it was dug out good, and nobody had any water in their cellars; not like a lot of the city people that have their cellars half full. The city people can't teach me how to do work.

Thank you Mr. Editor for your space.

THOS. ARNOTT.

February 28, 1918.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—I have no doubt that Mr. T. Tooms wrote what he, and perhaps others, believed to be correct, and for that reason would like to put him right. Almost the whole of his letter is based upon the one complaint of the Council "getting our local coal dealers to do the Council's business through jobbers and middlemen." In that he is in error. The Council received assistance from local coal dealers in getting authority to go into the fuel business as local dealers were anxious that as much coal as possible should be secured for the people in the city. But the Council did not order the coal for its yard through local dealers. It purchased it in the United States and from wholesale dealers in Toronto, and in its endeavour to get coal members of the Council visited the offices of the coal men in Buffalo, which is the centre of purchasing for Ontario and where the mines have offices. It is just possible that if the Council had had experience in and been more familiar with, the business they might have got more coal, but the fact is that they did all that they could to purchase supplies, and succeeded to some extent, although not to the extent that they had hoped.

The Council did not take money from ratepayers for coal on a "safety first" plan, but at the time had ordered coal which they expected to get, and took the orders for that reason. They did not get what they expected and were not able to supply all of the coal. That is the whole reason. The city was not alone in being disappointed in that way, for dealers throughout the country and other municipalities had the same experience, owing to the conditions of the market and of the supply of coal.

With respect to another remark mode by Mr. Tooms, I might say that members of the Council have been without coal not only for days, but for weeks, and, although they have furnaces, had to make shift to get along without it.

Yours truly,

GEO. H. DUNCAN,

Mayor.

EIGHT DOGS ACCOUNTED FOR

Official Dog Catcher is Becoming More Proficient

Early this morning three dogs were ushered into "dogdom" by the official dog catcher. The score yesterday was five and the total is seventeen since Mr. Gates was appointed. The increase in the number of dogs captured is taken as an indication that Mr. Gates is becoming familiar with his duties, and is probably improving his methods of rounding up the curs. All of the dogs caught yesterday and to-day were slaughtered at the incinerator, and subsequently cremated.

ST. PETER'S PATRIOTIC CLUB REPORTS SHOW SPLENDID WORK DONE

Officers Elected at Semi-Annual Meeting—Organization Has Supplied Many Comforts For the Peterboro' Boys Overseas

The semi-annual meeting of St. Peter's Patriotic Club was held in St. Alphonsus' Lyceum on February 27th, 1918, after a most successful half year of Red Cross work. The reports of the treasurer, Mrs. Brue Law, and secretary, Miss I. Doris, were read and adopted. The reports explained in a most thorough and excellent manner the work accomplished by the Club during the previous half year.

The election of officers then took place, and the following were elected:

Hon. Pres.—Mrs. Justus Dunn.
President—Mrs. J. F. Crowley.
Vice-Pres.—Mrs. J. Grisdale.
Secretary—Miss L. Hurley.
Treasurer—Mrs. Bruce Law.
Convenor of Work-room — Mrs. M. Tooley.
Executive—Mrs. Perry, Mrs. N. Tobin, Mrs. J. J. Doris, Mrs. P. Tangney, Mrs. Jos. White, Mrs. A. Sharp, Mrs. Bruce Law, Mrs. McGibbon, Mrs. Kelleher, Mrs. F. Shannon and Mrs. B. Duffus.

The tea-room was opened each Wednesday afternoon from September 24th to November 14th, and the teas were a great success, and thoroughly enjoyed by all. At a meeting in November it was decided to close the tea-room indefinitely.

On October 22nd, four large packing cases containing 125 Christmas boxes were sent to our boys overseas, and many letters of appreciation have been received.

Two very successful 'at homes' have been held, one on November 5th and the other on January 14th.

During the month of December a donation of $25 was sent the Prisoners of War Fund.

An extra line of work has been sent us to be made such as property bags, kit bags, many-tailed bandages, head bandages and stretcher caps.

An appealing letter was received by one of the members asking that reading matter be sent to one of the Catholic camps in England. Several parcels have been sent and more will be sent each month. The Local Council of the Knights of Columbus have kindly offered to help finance this undertaking.

On the afternoon of January 23rd, through the kindness of Mr. F. L. Robinson, the Empire Theatre was placed at our disposal and a goodly sum realized. During the afternoon the large audience thoroughly enjoyed the instrumental and vocal numbers rendered by Misess L. Hurley and Florence Leahy.

With a membership of only 54, and about half that number active members, the work accomplished during the past six months was certainly most gratifying, and the ladies who have been so faithful in attendance are deserving of the Club's most sincere thanks.

The Club has purchased 3 spindles of wool and 72 pairs of socks have been knit, 35 pairs being sent to the Secour National, Toronto, 10 pairs sent to Halifax Relief, and the rest given out to members for friends overseas. Besides this the following work has been handed over to the Red Cross Society, from whom the materials were obtained:

48 grey shirts, 37 pairs pyjamas, 254 sheets, 989 towels, 21 wash cloths, 14 pillow cases, 25 dressing gowns, 100 kit bags, 15 property bags, 77 many-tailed bandages, 30 stretcher caps, 24 head bandages.

Respectfully submitted.

Irene Doris, Sec.

DRINK A GLASS OF REAL HOT WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST.

Says we will both look and feel clean, sweet and fresh and avoid illness.

Sanitary science has of late made rapid strides with results that are of untold blessing to humanity. The latest application of its untiring research is the recommendation that it is as necessary to attend to internal sanitation of the drainage system of the human body as it is to the drains of the house.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatic stiffness; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of lime stone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficent to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Automatic Parcel Locks Installed By Grand Trunk

The Grand Trunk has installed in the waiting room of the local station a system of automatic parcel checking for the convenience of the travelling public. This innovation consists of a series of steel lockers, each large enough to hold two thirty-inch suit cases, a number of parcels, or a club bag. Instructions as to operation are printed plainly on the door of every locker.

The patron selects a locker where the key is in the lock, opens the door and deposits his bag or other property. The patron then places ten cents in the slot of the lock, turning the key to the right, which locks the door, and then removes the key and retains it as a check. The number of each key corresponds with the number of a locker. The traveller, on returning to the station to obtain his property, inserts the key in the lock, and turns it to the left, unlocking the door. The key is automatically fastened in the lock and cannot again be removed until another coin is deposited. The checking service given for the one payment covers a period of twenty-four hours or less.

These automatic lockers are being used extensively on the Grand Trunk System. They have proved safe and sanitary, permitting the patron to obtain service with the least possible delay. The railway in installing them has felt that they will be appreciated by travellers using that line.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Go Into Your Own Kitchen Instead Of Mounting The Platform

Food Problem Would Be Nearer Solution Says Club Woman Who Did It—Women With Children Should Be Only Ones With Servants Now, Says She.

"Just what is the use of our Food Controller pleading with us women to use up all our winter carrots and then let some grocers dangle new Florida carrots in front of us when we go to the shops? It looks to me as if the food department ought to have started this vegetable campaign weeks before."

So declared one Toronto woman who watches the markets, to Cordelia, of the Toronto Telegram.

While another one informs us that it looks as if the Food Board needed some special inspectors to see that its orders about prices were carried out.

"What do you suppose my grocer asked me for onions this week?" asked a woman this morning!" Why, just 8c. a lb."

"Surely you are mistaken —they were not Canadian onions!" gasped we. For at 75 lbs. to a bag this was at the rate of $6.

"Yes, said she, "he confessed he had got them from our own farmers, but he evidently thinks the Food Board's campaign is just a cheap advertisement for him. The country pays for the advertisements, which bring him more business!"

"Yet the women go on paying these prices and holding food meetings. What is the result? Food conditions seem worse instead of better, and what woman or man, with all the talking, can provide a real remedy!"

"I can give you one!" said a well-known Toronto club woman, who incidentally is a good suffragist, just this week: "I think we'd soon see a change for the better if every woman who has no children would go into her own kitchen instead of mounting platforms. I've done both, so I know what I'm talking about. You get nowhere at these food meetings. It's practice, not preaching, we need now. I was one of those that tried the preaching method for months. Then a year ago I let my three servants go, and for the first time in my life I did my own work.

"For ten years before that I've had my breakfast in bed, but now I even scrub my own kitchen if I need to. My husband made a garden, I canned the produce, and this summer we're going to keep two pigs. I never felt better in my life, and neither did he. I use the money I used to pay for the servants and waste for war work, and have more than when I used to be at meetings every day or benefits.

"I'm firmly convinced that every woman who has no children and reasonably good health should now be in her own kitchen. The servant supply is now so limited it should be for the women with little children who will be our future citizens. I don't believe any number of public meetings will solve the food question. It is only the women who go into their kitchens and daily watch the markets and the tricks of the trade that will help! No amount of talk will do as much good as the woman who shows she's ready to practise what she is preaching on platforms."

From other women who have had a minute to think these strenuous days comes an echo of these very words.

107 YEARS OLD BUT WILL RUN A GARDEN

Mr. Joshep Mantell Formerly of Peterboro Ready to do his Share for Greater Production—Talks of Prices When he Came to Toronto in 1837.

The Toronto Star has the following interesting article about Mr. Joseph Mantell, formerly of Peterborough:

"Potatoes 12 cents a bushel, bread 8 cents for a four-pound loaf, eggs 4 or 5 cents a dozen, and these prices were considered high when I came to Toronto," said Mr. Jos. Mantell, who is 107 years old. He was interviewed at 49 Rainsford road, Kew Beach, the residence of his granddaughter, Mrs. Edwards.

"I came to Canada in 1837," he said. "We were six weeks and three days crossing the ocean in a sailing vessel. The trip from Quebec to Montreal to Prescott another eight days. I landed in Toronto two years after this city had been founded."

In spite of his years the Beach centenarian is hale and hearty, his hearing is not of the best, but his eyesight would pass military test, and he scorns spectacles. His voice denotes powerful lungs, and the fact that he intends to "put in" the garden for his granddaughter this spring, as he did last year, proves the soundness of his arms and limbs. His anecdotes concerning the Toronto of 1837 testify to his wonderful memory.

"All Toronto was on King street then," he said. "Our Government House, hospital, Parliament Buildings were there, while close to Church street there was a square, whose four corners were respectively occupied by Court House, jail, Methodist Church, and Presbyterian Church. I worked then on the north side of King street a short distance from Yonge, at David Willison's shoemaking shop."

Mr. Mantell moved to London, Ont., about 1850. He relates an interesting story about a farmer of that day, bringing a load of potatoes which he retailed at 12c a bushel, until he had a few bushels left for which no buyer could be found. To get rid of them he let them drop on the ground, but was quickly ordered by the market clerk to pick them up and clean the "nuisance."

said he was born in January, 1899.

"There is no lack of provender at Tweed," remarked His Worship.

Levi Goulah, a French Canadian, said he was eighteen years old, and was born a few miles out of Tweed. Both Hawkins and Goulah could easily pass for any age between 21 and 25 years.

Mr Newton had informed Chief Thompson that he held a certificate from Rev. Father Quinn, of Tweed, showing that Hawkins was 19 years old. Goulah said he could get a statement of his birth registration at the parish church at Stoco. He was instructed to do, and report to the Chief of Police at Tweed, with whom Chief Thompson will communicate.

Claimed He was Discharged.

Alphonsus Light said he had been exempted as a cripple at Bancroft. He had a weak back.

"Couldn't you throw a 180 pound German out of a trench?" Mr. Hatton asked him. Light did not carry an exemption card, and he, too, must report to the Tweed police.

Goes to the Army.

The sixth man, Corneiller, admitted that he had not reported for service. He was placed in A2 category at Saskatoon, came home in December, and left for the woods on January 4th.

"This man did not notify the authorities of his change of address," Chief Thompson pointed out.

The prisoner will get the mate to Collins' suit of khaki.

WILL LOCATE IN PETERBOROUGH

Mr. E. T. Haynes Will Open a Studio Here

E. T. Haynes, who has been in the photographic business here for five years, leaves the first of January for Peterborough. Mr. Haynes enjoyed a large patronage and brought considerable business to Chesley, for people from many miles around this town came to have their photos taken. The name "Haynes" has become a household one for there are not many homes in which the family photos do not bear this imprint. Mr. Haynes has artistic ability equal to the best city photographers and we predict he will do a big business in Peterborough.—"Chesley Enterprise."

section of the country. I have made more speeches in support of the government in the prosecution of this war than any other public man in the United States, and I have spoken in favour of the support of everything the government has done. I shall continue to do so. My eldest daughter is married to a British Royal Engineer and he has been in the war from the beginning, while my daughter is a Red Cross nurse, who has been nursing British soldiers in the hospitals of Cairo. One of my grandsons is a soldier; another grandson is in the Navy Department at Washington. I say this that you may know that I don't have to apologize to anybody. I simply talk to you that you can make it to the country. I want your people to know that I would not for one moment permit the use of the force that order. I am willing to stay here all order is restored but I shall leave the hall the moment an attempt is made to coerce these people to listen. I want to leave your citizens to be dealt with by the government as it pleases but I am not willing to be the cause of any man's injury."

With this Mr. Bryan concluded his statement to the reporters, and resumed his seat amid continued uproar. The discharged soldiers had been singing, shouting, hissing and hooting all the while that he was dictating what he had to say to the newspapermen. After a brief rest, Mr. Bryan arose and to a few score who gathered close about him he delivered portions of his temperance speech. Meanwhile the disturbers in the gallery rang bells, stamped their feet, shouted all sorts of insulting remarks, and sang "There's a Long, Long Trail." As Bryan exclaimed "We are expecting Chicago to go dry," the crowd in the gallery shouted, "Get out you dirty German," "What about the Lusitania?" "Shut the sauerkraut up," and similar expressions. They then sang "Keep the Home Fires Burning."

Bryan proceeded to condemn alcohol as a poison, which weakened men physically, morally and mentally, and the interrupters spelled out the word "Lusitania," at the top of their voices.

After making an effort to speak, Mr. Bryan concluded amid applause —"I want you to know that I shall not hold you responsible for what has happened to-night, and I want you to know that the United States recognizes you as neighbors. God had made us neighbors, and we will be friends with each other. The same blood pulses through our veins, and closer bonds as we march shoulder to shoulder, as we fight side by side, and as we die together, if necessary, in the hope that when peace is signed, it will be signed on the footstool of God and will sound the death-knell of the idea that might is right and of arbitrary power, and make the ideas of democracy world-wide."

THE WEATHER

Another winter month has gone. While February had not the continued cold weather of January, it had some very cold dips. On the 5th, we had it 29 below zero—the lowest of the winter, and low figures were reached on several other occasions. The precipitation also was above the average, totalling 3.97 inches. Of this 2.27 was rain and the balance snow. One of the features of the month was the sudden and great drop in temperature that occurred on the 20th, when the thermometer went down from 46 degrees to 5 below zero in a few hours. Another great change was on the 23rd, when there was a drop of 45 degrees.—W.P.

Had Been A Resident Here For 54 Years

Mr. John McClelland Passed Away Yesterday at Nicholls Hospital

One of the oldest and most highly respected residents of Peterborough passed away yesterday in the death at Nicholls Hospital of Mr. John McClelland. The deceased came to Peterborough in 1864 and had been a continuous resident of this city ever since, being widely known and most highly respected.

Many years ago he served Peterborough most faithfully as a member of the Council and also on the School Board. He had been connected with the Board of Nicholls Hospital ever since its inception, while he was a member of the Board of Managers of St. Andrew's Church for many years and had shown the greatest interest in all things pertaining to the welfare of that Church.

He is survived by his wife and by two daughters, Mrs. Thomas of New York and Miss Lucy at home, and two sons, Mr. Chas. McClelland of Peterborough and Mr. Wm. McClelland of Cleveland, O.

The funeral, which will be private, will take place to-morrow (Saturday) afternoon. Friends are requested to please omit flowers.

The funeral will take place to-morrow at 2 o'clock from the family residence, 301 Boswell ave.

Government's Majority Is Now 68 Seats

(Canadian Press Despatch)

OTTAWA, Ont., March 1.—The returns of soldiers' vote taken in England for Ontario and Alberta received at noon to-day by W. F. O'Connor, General Returning Officer, complete the election results. Leaving out the Yukon in regard to which there is a dispute over the soldiers' vote, and Nelson, Man., where the election is deferred, the Government now has a majority of 68.

To-day's figures for Ontario put South Perth and Nipissing counties in the Government column. Harold, the Liberal-Unionist, has been elected for Brant over Cockshutt, the straight Conservative.

There are no changes recorded for Alberta.

In South Renfrew Pedlow, Liberal, holds the seat by a majority of 51.

Hon. Frank Oliver has been defeated in West Edmonton by a majority of about 2,700.

In South Perth Dr. Steel, Government, received 138 soldiers' votes in England, giving him a total of 2,790. Forester, his opponent, with only three soldiers votes, has a total of 2,713.

Harrison, the Government candidate in Nipissing, with 408 soldiers' votes, has a total of 6,411. Lapierre, his opponent, with only fifty, has 5,367, a majority of 44 for Harrison. Harold in Brant, received 249 soldiers' votes in England, making his total 2,107. Cockshutt, with four soldiers' votes, has fallen behind with a total of 2,023.

THE P. C. I. LITERARY ENTERTAINMENT TO-NIGHT

If you want to enjoy a pleasant evening come out to the P. C. I. Literary Society's delightful entertainment to-night in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute. The programme, which has been in rehearsal for some weeks, consists of prightly musical selections, vocal and instrumental, by the Glee Club section of the Society, including a "Soldiers' Chorus" from Faust. A strong attraction for the evening will be a pretty play entitled "A String of Pearls". The entertainment is in good hands and ought to be well patronized.

"FINISHED MYSTERY" LITERATURE SEIZED

Toronto, March 1.—Inspector Boyd of the Provincial police, has made a large seizure of censored literature of the International Bible Students Association in the district of Haliburton, including "Studies in the Scriptures," "The Finished Mystery," and a number of other tabooed works.

In Peterboro a large number of copies of "The Finished Mystery" and other works, have been turned over to the police, but there are still a number outstanding. Within the past two days the local police have added several names to the list of persons who are known to be in possession of such literature. The big drive is due to commence any day now. If circumstances warrant, the provincial police will be asked to assist in the round up, unless the owners of such books promptly turn them over to the police.

M.H.C. Plans 900 Bed Orthopedic Hospital

National Cash Register Property in Toronto Secured For Great Orthopedic Centre

Much significance attaches to the announced acquisition by the Military Hospitals Commission of the National Cash Register property at Christie and Dupont streets, Toronto. The property consists of about seven acres of land on which most up-to-date buildings have been erected. It was inspected and approved by the board of consultants to the Army Medical Corps.

The existing building has accommodation for about 400 patients but the Commission plans to add two stories which will give an ultimate accommodation for between eight and nine hundred patients in the main building.

Chief Centre of Orthopedics.

As it is contemplated that this shall be developed as the chief centre for Canada for the treatment of orthopedic cases, much valuable equipment will have to be installed and on account of the difficulty of duplicating such equipment in more than one centre, it is considered likely that additional standard ward wings, such as those at the Davisville, Winnipeg, Halifax, St. Anne, Moose Jaw, and other hospitals, will be added for the accommodation of any additional number of patients which it may be found necessary to concentrate at the orthopedic centre. Predictions as to the length of the war and the probable number of cases which will ultimately have to be cared for are felt futile, and the adjacent acreage permits almost unlimited expansion, so that an institution of ultimately 1,500 patients is not an unlikely development.

Sell To Advantage.

In acquiring this property, Mr. S. A. Armstrong, director of the Military Hospitals Commission, announced that the Commission had made a radical departure from its usual policy, as it had, up to the present, refused to buy land. In the case of the National Cash Register property it was found on careful examination that the buildings and site were so superior that at the expiration of the war the entire premises could be sold for more than has been paid. The property is situated in a rapidly growing industrial portion of the city of Toronto, adjacent to the railway, so that there is every expectation that the cost to the country of this vast hospital accommodation will be practically negligible. The erection of a temporary hospital to give the same accommodation and facilities would have cost, it is estimated, nearly a million dollars, a circumstance which appears to justify the Commission's decision to depart from its usual practice of refusing to buy property.

The present orthopedic hospital in Davisville Avenue, Toronto, will continue to be employed as an auxiliary to the new orthopedic centre.

Men's Sunday At George Street Methodist Church

Next Sunday, March 3rd, will be Men's Sunday at the George Street Methodist church.

The pastor, Rev. A. J. Thomas will speak both morning and evening. At 11 o'clock he will speak on "A Man at Each Corner," and in the evening "The Problems of Middle Age." In the evening there will be a short song service led by a male chorus of 40 voices. The male quartette will also sing.

In the afternoon the mens' Bible Class, which meets in the church parlors at 3 o'clock, is aiming at an attendance of 100. All men of the congregation and others who do not attend church and Bible class regularly are cordially invied to be present and enjoy these services.

Men, this is your day; make it a great success. A hearty welcome awaits you, your friends, your family, your neighbors and all.

While the services will be specially interesting to men, everybody is welcome.

Victim of His Own Short-sightedness

(Canadian Press Despatch)

NEW YORK, March 1.—The Evening Sun says editorially: "In the unpleasantness attendant upon his appearance before a Toronto audience last night, former Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan found himself the victim of his own short-sightedness. To the Canadian mind, particularly to the mind of soldiers who were on their way to France in September, 1914, Mr. Bryan was a pro-German. His record as an ardent pacifist could not be overlooked, and to those members of his audience pacifism and pro-Germanism are synonymous. It was a clear case of the evil that man does living after him."

Hospital Canteens Get Tobacco Duty Free Now

"Smokes" free from excise duty in e canteens of the military convalescent hospitals and clearing depots as caused general jubilation among e wounded men returned to Canada for treatment. The news that the Governor-General, in Council, had ordered that the hospital canteens be granted the same privilege enjoyed by the canteens in camps and be allowed to sell tobacco and cigarettes free from excise duty has made the convalescent men see double. Their income is automatically increased, and life looks twice as bright.

LONG AGITATED.

The question of duty free tobacco in the hospital canteens has been a long mooted question among the men. They could not see why they who had been overseas and done their part in the fight should not have the privileges as those extended to the men who had not seen service overseas. Considerable friction has arisen on the subject. The complaints registered with the officers in charge of the institutions were sent to Military Hospitals Commission headquarters.

The matter was taken up and upon the joint recommendation of the President of the Commission, the Minister of Inland Revenue and the Minister of Militia and Defence His Excellency, the Governor-General issued the order.

UNIVERSAL "PAIN KILLER"

The effect of the order is not a saving for the men particularly, but the elasticity it adds to their allowance is a great boon. Nicotine is not listed among medicinal drugs, but to the wounded man it is the universal "pain killer."

NEW DICTIONARY IS READY FOR READERS

Third of First Series of Dictionary Coupons Complete For Exchange

MAILED OUT OF TOWN

"New Universities" Distribution Begins—Rich With Helpful Features

To-morrow will be the opening day of this paper's distribution of The New Universities Dictionaries to its readers. Three coupons clipped from the columns of this paper must be presented at our office with the application for one of the volumes. It is specified that these be from papers of three different days. Therefore to-day is the first day for the completion of the first set. A small fee of 98 cts. is required, the only condition asked of those who seek one of these excellent educational books.

For out of town readers of this paper a special mail arrangement has been made. These may send in the three coupons by mail, together with the 98 cents and the necessary postage to pay the mailing charges on the dictionary. For their benefit, instructions are given elsewhere as to the amount of postage necessary. This is done so that all readers of this paper may share in the distribution of the New Universities.

There are more than 1200 pages to the volume, including 25 supplementary dictionaries. The book is handsomely bound in flexible seal grain, and profusely illustrated, many of the reproductions being in color. Pictures of various types of aeroplanes are given so that when you read about a Bleriot monoplane you can turn to this section in the New Universities, and see how it differs from the others in use.

EVERYDAY READING

Is justification a lower standard than sanctification? No. God's standard is sanctification, and this being the case, no man can be justified in an experience short of it. When we appeal to the Scripture, we find they teach justification by faith. But we do not find a single Scripture that teaches that it is possible for a man to be justified before God and, at the same time, be full of sin. Many are teaching that a justified man has inbred sin in his heart, that he has the old man in him. This is contrary to the plain teaching of the Scripture. The misunderstanding seems to be as to what justification really is. Scripture teaches the old man or old nature is dead in Christ. Faith in Jesus quickens us into newness of life, and makes Romans 8:1 real to us. "There is therefore now no condemnation to those who are in Christ Jesus." The condemnation rests upon the old man or old nature. "But if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature." Old things (the old nature or old man) have passed away, behold all things have become new. There is no condemnation for the new creature in Christ. The old man (or old nature) was full of sin, and the new man is free from sin. The old life is lived, because, ruled by the old nature. The new life is lived because controlled by the new life (that is by the Holy Spirit). For as many as are led by the Spirit they are the children of God. How many get into a state of uncertainty by taking heed to false teaching? The idea that man can be in a state of salvation and yet committing sin every dy, is absurd. As much so as the grocer that tried to prove 18 1-2 pounds of sugar was equal to 21 pounds he advertised. When will men think and act for themselves? I send forth the entreaty "diligently harken unto the voice of the Lord thy God." Methinks some are waking up and shaking themselves free from false teaching and ecclestiastical domination. Hope is beginning to live. There is a rift in the cloud. The ramparts of wrong teaching and wrong doing are showing signs of decay

VICTOR.

Music & Drama

"THE WHITE FEATHER"

Albert Brown, who opened the Grand this season in "The Love of a King," returned to Peterborough last night in the play in which local theatregoers first saw him, "The White Feather," and added to the laurels he has already won here by his finished work as Christopher Brent, the man who stayed at home. This is undoubtedly the best role in which Mr. Brown has been seen in Peterborough. The story of the play is too well known to require any lengthy synopsis in these columns. It will be remembered that Brent, posing as a brainless idler, apparently taking no interest in the war, is in reality a shrewd, clever service agent, who rounds u pa dangerous gang of German spies and saves the British transports en route from France from destruction by a German submarine. The part fits Mr. Brown like the proverbial glove, and his presentation of the role is a masterpiece. Although not many of the company originally seen here in the production are now members of the cast, the supporting company is fully as strong as before, and Mr. Brown is given everya ssistance by a capable cast. Particularly good work was done by Charles Welsh-Homer, as John Preston, the choleric old British [illegible] of the Peace, by Joseph de Stefani, as Carl Sanderson, one of the spies, and by Lenore Phelps, as Molly Preston, while Sara Perry, who has been seen here in several of Mr. Brown's offerings, was splendid in the part of Miriam Lee.

Some of the Chorus in 'Furs and Frills" here on Monday night with Richard Carle.

Speaking of the performance in Brantford on Tuesday last, the "Expositor" says:

Manager Whittaker of the Grand Opera House announced a few days ago that the attendance at "Furs and Frills" would be taken as an indication of what the theatregoers of Brantford wanted. The attendance last night told the manager that Brantford theatre-goers wanted the best, and would pay for it willingly. A crowded house greeted Richard Carle and his merry band of singers, dancers and comedians, and every member of the audience went home enthused. "Furs and Frills" tells the tale of a Russian sable coat, bought as a bargain, stolen, purchased again, given away in error, and finally returned to the original owner. It served to carry an excellent array of comedians, a comely chorus, a quartette of violin players, a pair of dancers, all of whom combined to make the evening a most enjoyable one.

Lavishly staged with costumes which made many of the ladies in the audience feel a thrill of envy, and with scenic embellishments which drew forth applause in each case when the curtain went up, and once in an interlude in the second act, "Furs and Frills" can rank as the best offering of its kind this season. Richard Carle was himself.

The duets—principally recitative, for Richard is hardly a grand opera singer, though he gets the house just the same—"You Can't Take it With You When You Die" and "Always Take Mother's Advice"—the latter generating into a quartette before it was ended, after a number of recalls—were the song hits of the evening, while "The Tale of a Coat," by the quartette, also scored. In every particular the cast was an excellent one. Ruth Smalley, as Polly the stenographer, being especially winsome, and with a sweet soprano voice which made many friends for Miss Poll. Milt Dawson, in the character of Jones, assistant music teacher, was clever, while Miss Barry and Miss Knight gave several "society" dances which were warmly applauded.

Taken all through, "Furs and Frills" was a production which met with popular favour, and richly deserved the house it received.

Free Pants TO MEASURE Saturday & Monday

Another Opportunity

For Men Who Could Not Get Here Before

According to our usual custom we are going to give those who failed to get served or waited on, or for any reason were unable to get here last week, another opportunity to get in on this wonderful FREE PANTS OFFER. Never in our history have we had such a great day of selling as last Saturday and Monday. People seemed to come from everywhere. Why? Because we have the goods. Because this is a truly wonderful offer. At this time when the scarcity of woollens is almost a tragedy.

Do you think we make money off this deal? Scarcely. With the present high price of woollens and a pair of Pants ABSOLUTELY FREE there is no money in it for us. But we are keeping faith with you as we have always done. Twice a year it has been our policy to include the FREE PANTS with every Suit or Overcoat ordered, and we stand by our principles—by the promises we make. Now just another word or so. Let it be understood that YOU CAN COME IN AND PICK ANY CLOTH YOU FANCY FOR SUIT OR OVERCOAT OR SPRING TOPCOAT and YOU GET AN EXTRA PAIR OF PANTS ABSOLUTELY FREE. You can have the pants from the same cloth as your suit or any other cloth of the same value. POSITIVELY THE LAST OPPORTUNITY YOU WILL HAVE.

There Will Not Be Any More FREE PANTS Sales This Season---So Get in on This.

This Is Something No Man Should Miss. You can Pick From the Finest Fabrics—No Old Stock—All New Spring Weaves.

Your Garments will be strictly Tailored to Measure—you can have any Style of Sack Suit or Overcoat made to your Individual Measure, as you want it.

Trousers Off the Same Cloth as Your Suit If You Wish

Remember For SATURDAY & MONDAY Only

OUT-OF-TOWN MEN If for any reason you are not able to come personally and share in this offer, we are going to allow you the privilege of sending your order by mail. We shall hold the offer open to you until the last mail on Tuesday night, and, if accompanied by a deposit, we shall at once mail you samples from which to choose your Suit or Over coat, including the FREE PANTS.

SPECTACULAR FINISH GIVES GEO. MORROW WIN OVER KAY

Last Stone Made a Seemingly Impossible Billiard Shot For Three Counters—Semi-finals To-nigh

The semi-finals of the skips' bonspiel will begin at the curling rink tonight at 7 o'clock with P. D. Fitzgerald and L. Bowes in one game, and W. G. Morrow and R. M. Waddell contesting in the other.

The big game last night was George Morrow's victory over Alex. Kay. It was won with the last shot, as the following score shows:

| | |
|---|---|
| C. J. Snider | J. E. Smith |
| J. K. Costain | A. M. Laidlaw |
| J. H. Connal | W. T. Hall |
| W. G. Morrow | A. C. Kay |
| Skip . . . . . 12 | Skip . . . . . 11 |

Score by ends—
Morrow . . . . . 2000120031 03—12
Kay . . . . . 0112001200 40—11

Morrow's shot was one of the most spectacular seen around the rink in many a moon. On the tenth end he had a lead of two, but Kay put over four on the eleventh and went ahead with a nice margin of two, and apparently had the game stowed away in his locker. Coming home, Andy Laidlaw stuck a counter on the inner ring and Kay called for guards. Jim Connals' stone, that was intended to reach the entre, stopped short on the outer ring, and Kay seemed to have his shot bottled up tight. When Morrow came to play his last stone, and the last of the game, there was practically only one shot open and seemed impossible. The right side of the rink was a blank, but a draw shot was out of the question. The possible but unlikely shot was a double raise on the two stones in the outer ring that had to be perfect or it meant nothing, and fast enough to knock out Kay's counter. And that is just what Morrow accomplished. He delivered a bullet that wobbled down the rink, a true Morrow speeder, and went straight to the mark. When the stones came to rest the three nearest the centre were Morrow's.

"It was well worth waiting for," was the voice of the gallery.

Kay played a fine game throughout, but the last stone shattered his vision of the finals.

"Eights"—Primary Round.

Consolation Round.

Archibald, 12; Brighman, 4.
Hicks, 11; Giroux, 8.
Metheral, 8; Best, 11.
Campbell, 18; Foote, 11.
Oke, 14; Lang, 10.
Benor, 12; Brown, 5.

To-nights Games.

Primary Semi-Finals, 7 p.m.
Fitzgerald vs. Bowes.
Waddell vs. Morrow.

Consolation.
Archibald vs. Hicks.
Best vs. Eason.
Campbell vs. Oke.
Benor vs. Kay.
Thompson vs. Patterson.

Walter Oke skipped a good game to beat "Pete" Lang. When Lang scored a five end, Oke came right back and plastered a big even over the score card in the following end.

Bill Campbell's fat margin over Harry Foote includes two "fivers," almost enough to win an ordinary ten end game.

Herb Martin worked overtime in the Hicks-Giroux game.

Remedial Gymnastics Started At Davisville

Extension of the "functional re-education" work of Hart House to the hospitals of the Military Hospitals Commission has taken its first step. Lieut. C. V. Scott, C.A.M.C., and four sergeant instructors have been installed to carry on this class of work at the Davisville Military Hospital, North Toronto. All were trained at Hart House and are the first graduates to proceed from the research training centre to the actual hospital.

Space has been provided in the entertainment hall erected by the M.H.C. adjacent to the hospital and the works branch is busy installing equipment.

Remedial gymnastics and curative games are to be largely employed at the outset, and later will be followed by the full re-educational system with its set of twenty pieces of apparatus designed at Hart House and manufactured at the M.H.C. Industries, Guelph.

Games For Amputation Cases.

At the Davisville hospital, where amputation cases have been assembled from all over the Dominion, special attention is paid to this phase of treatment. By attaching billiard cues, croquet mallets, squash racquets, etc., to the stumps of amputated limbs the men are able in playing these games to develop control and strength in the stumps, a necessary procedure before success in the use of an artificial limb can be hoped for.

Curative exercises for postpral curves developed from protecting one injured leg are to be prescribed for men suffering from this very common form of disability among orthopedic cases. Feet weakened by gunshot wounds are also to be strengthened by a specific set of exercises.

Swedish Drill Unsuitable.

The principle underlying much of this work is that instead of protecting and saving an injured limb the patient should practice using it as much as possible in order to improve and restore its usefulness. Ordinary Swedish drills are held to be unsatisfactory because of their uniformity. No two men have exactly the same wound, it is pointed out.

The group system is employed in the competitive games, however. Men having similar disabilities are divided into groups such as the shoulder group, the elbow group, the wrist group, etc. Three or four men of similar types are pitted against each other in contests of various kinds prescribed by the medical officer and rigidly supervised by the sergeant instructors. Instead of forgetting their injuries the men are urged to concentrate on and conquer their disabilities.

The success of these methods depends upon careful prescription of the specific exercise or game for each individual case and on the close supervision of all activities. (5)

BOWLING On Water St. Alleys

High Rollers Win From West Ends.

In the ten-pin league at the water street alleys last night, the High Rollers annexed all three games from the West Ends. The total pinnage was: High Rollers 2,418, West Ends 2,143. Solomon and Kelley were the heavy-hitters for the High Rollers with 586 and 545 for three-game totals. Solomon had high single of 213. For the West Ends G. Green was high man with 451. The scores were as follows:

| West Ends— | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Cocks | 178 | 144 | 120 | 442 |
| Routley | 143 | 131 | 154 | 428 |

Young's Point Items Of Interest

YOUNG'S POINT, March 1.—Mr. R. Young, Jr., returned home on Monday after spending the last couple of weeks the guest of friends in Ennismore and Peterborough.

Mrs. W. J. Riccaby of Toronto is spending a few days at Young's Point being called here by the illness of her sister, Mrs. Michael Moher. Mrs. Moher is making satisfactory improvement and is on the way to recovery from her recent illness.

Pte. Levi McNaughton returned to Kingston on Saturday, where he is undergoing medical treatment.

Mr. Harry Kearney was in Lakefield on Monday on a shooting trip.

There has been good skating at the Point during the past week. A number of young people from Smith and Selwyn took advantage of it and journeyed over to the rink on Saturday evening.

Messrs. James and McDonald of the Grove School passed through the Village on Monday on the return journey of a snowshoe expedition up Clear Lake.

Mr. Ben. Nichols, who sold his farm at Young's Point last spring, and who has recently been living in Peterborough, has purchased a farm in Dummer and moved on last week to begin spring operations.

Miss Nellie McAuley of Peterborough is spending a few days in the Village, this week, the guest of her sister, Mrs. P. M. Young.

Miss J. Kearney returned home last week after spending the last few weeks visiting her sister, Mrs. F. G. Young, King street, Peterborough.

The death occurred on Monday, February 25th of Mrs. Thomas Hockaday, relict of the late Thomas Hockaday, of Young's Point. She was in her seventy-seventh year, and died after a comparatively short illness. The late Mrs. Hockaday had not been enjoying good health for the past couple of months. She was a woman of a conscientious, retiring, affable disposition, and was highly esteemed by all who knew her. In her death Young's Point loses one of its oldest and most highly respected residents. She leaves to mourn her loss Messrs. Harry, William and Fred Hockaday, of Young's Point, and Mrs. Wannamaker of Lakefield. The funeral will proceed from the family home on Thursday to Hillside Cemetery, Lakefield, for interment.

Mr. P. J. McAuley has returned to Peterborough after spending the last week visiting Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Young.

Messers Harry Richardson, W. J. Goheen, of Pontypool, were in Millbrook on Thursday on business.

Only Two Counties Have Not Adopted Good Roads Scheme

Peterborough and Northumberland ade the two solitary counties in Ontario that remain aloof from the Government's Good Roads scheme, according to the report of the Hon. Findlay Macdiarmid at the Good Roads convention in Toronto yesterday. After successfully opposing Victoria County's private bill to load two-thirds of the cost of maintaining the Burnt River bridge near Kinmount, the delegates from the Peterborough County Council passed on to the Highways convention, where, with the township across Rice Lake, they were the pariahs in the goods roads community.

No Official Connection Say G.W.V.A.

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, March 1.— The Great War Veterans' Association repudiate any official connection with the howling down of W. J. Bryan in Massey Hall last night. It is admitted that there may have been some members of the Association among the returned men who caused the trouble, but they were there merely as individuals and not as members of the G.W.V.A.

"So far as the general consensus of opinion is concerned," said Col. Hardy, President of the Association, "I think all our members strongly resent Mr. Bryan being brought to Toronto, but they took no official action with regard to the matter. They were not consulted by the members of the Dominion Alliance."

Mr. J. C. O'Connor, secretary of the Toronto branch, says: "I think they were very ill advised to bring Mr. Bryan here. The returned soldiers had no kick on the question at issue, and if it had been any other American of the Roosevelt type, and not of the pro-Hun type, I am sure the returned men would have given him a magnifient reception."

Premier Hearst stated to-day that he preferred not to comment on the Bryan incident.

Other opinions were:

Hon. I. B. Lucas, Attorney-General: "It was a very regrettable incident. In view of the general public opinion it was, in my judgment, a serious mistake to invite Mr. Bryan to address a popular gathering."

Mr. William Proudfoot, Leader of the Opposition: "I think the incident brings discredit to the city, to the province and to the soldiers who took part in the disturbance."

Despite the treatment, Mr. Bryan shook hands with Detectives Alex. Montgomery and Robert Croome, who were detailed by Inspector Kennedy as a personal escort to Mr. Bryan, and thanked them for their kindness and courtesy during his brief stay, and stated he wished his thanks to be conveyed to Chief Constable Grasett.

MUST SELL APPLES TO PREVENT DECAY

Were Bought at a High Price Last Autumn.

HALIFAX, N.S., Feb. 28. — That much of the Nova Scotia apple crop purchased last fall at a high price and being held in Toronto and Montreal is not maintaining its condition, is the opinion of Roy A. Jodery, who has just returned from the upper provinces after endeavouring to dispose of large quantities of fruit.

The holders of the fruit in those provinces do not wish to dispose of it at a loss. He says they were being compelled to do so because of many of the varieties threatening decay.

Mr. John Crane has been confined through an attack of grippe to Nicholls Hospital for some days.

WEDDING BELLS

NEALS—PRESTON.

A very pretty wedding took place at the residence of Mr. T. H. E. Preston, of the township of Manvers, on Wednesday, Feb. 20, when his daughter, Alice Pearl, was united in marriage to Mr. Henry E. L. Neals, son of Mr. Wm. Neals, also of the township of Manvers.

At the hour appointed, the bridal party entered the artistically decorated drawing room to the strains of a popular wedding march. Miss Olive Preston, a sister of the bride, presided at the organ, the groom being supported by Mr. Charles E. Staples, while the bride was attended by her sister Miss Mary Preston.

The bride looked charming, gowned in white silk with shadow embroidery and wore a bridal veil and wreath and carried a sheaf of white carnations.

The ceremony ws performed by Rev W. T. Wickett, of Bethany, in the presence of about fifty relatives and friends of the bride and groom. After congratulations were extended, and while the register was being signed Mr. Bernard Preston sang an appropriate solo.

The presents were numerous and costly as well as useful. The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful set of white fox furs, while her father's gift was a beautiful large Bible.

After all had done justice to the sumptuous repast provided, the evening was spent in social intercourse and in due time the happy young couple left on an extended trip, amid showers of good wishes. After their return they will reside in Manvers township.

OBITUARY

MRS. H. SWANSON.

Ann MacDonald, relict of the late Hugh Swanson, died this morning at 6 o'clock as a result of a few days' illness from bronchitis. She was born in Vermont, U.S., in 1840, where she resided until eight years of age, when the family moved to Cobourg and from there to Garden Hill. She was married in 1867. Mrs. Swanson's kindliness as a friend and neighbor and devotion to her family won for her a warm place in the hearts of all who knew her.

There are left of the immediate family two sisters, Mrs. E. E. Austin and Miss Elizabeth McDonald of Vancouver and seven children: Mrs Wm. Roberts, 168 Stewart street, at whose home Mrs. Swanson died; Mrs Fred Froom, Cobourg; Mrs. Wm. Bridges, Port Hope; Mrs. Henry Lockington, Port Hope; Edward of Bethany; Donald of Midland, and Gilmour of Peterborough.

The funeral will take place from Mrs. Roberts' residence, on Monday, to the noon train to Perry Township, Hope Township, where interment will take place in St. Paul's cemetery. Rev. Mr. Grobb will officiate.

White, head of the combined missions, said he expected to see the number of recruits trebled in the next two months.

NO B. C. OF L. HERE.

TOKYO, March 1.—Even the policemen in Tokyo are sharing in Japanese war prosperity. Of the 5,000 bluecoats in the capital, 3,683 have had their salaries raised, so that now an ordinary every-day "copper" draws from $7.50 to $12.50 as his monthly stipend. This is an increase of about $1 per month. Even richer remuneration is given the senior policemen, who now receive between $10 and $14 monthly, while the salaries of the assistant sergeants, under the new order, will range as high as $12 and $16.

Mob's Fury Leads To Murder In Russia

Ensign Roudof Describes the Murder of General Dukhonin —The Body Was Propped Up Against a Railway Car While the Crowd Gave Itself Up to a Series of Monstrous Amusements.

TORE OFF HIS MEDAL

The following story, written by Ensign Rondof, an eye witness of the tragedy, is interesting as showing the extreme limits to which Russian anarchy will proceed to satisfy its thirst for blood, and also as showing the utter inability of Krylenko, commander in chief of the Russian armies to enforce an order. The events occurred at Mohilev in the Ukraine, at that time headquarters of the Russian revolutionists:

At noon time there were about sixty of us officers assembled for dinner at a hotel where one of the principal bureaus of the general staff was located. We were just leaving the table when we were informed that a mysterious train had dashed into the station without regard for warning signals, bringing the Bolsheviki to the number of several hundred, with Krylenko at their head. They were there to carry out Lenine's orders.

"What are we to do?" asked a captain, and Dukhonin shrugged his shoulders. "Give them the whip," he replied quietly, as he sipped his coffee. "We have here about three hundred Chevaliers of St. George, without counting others" — then he gave certain orders.

But an extraordinary thing happened. Not one of the officers stirred. They looked at each other, and hesitated. I ran toward the door, but it was already too late. The stairs and the vestibule were crowded with armed men from the Finnish regiments, Red Guards and sailors. How had they succeeded in making their way there? How explain the sudden inertia which fell upon our own men, these Chevaliers of St. George, who, in 1914, had swum across the icy Vistula and crushed the German line, but who to-day dared not bar the road to a crowd whom a single whiff of grapeshot would have sent into flight?

As Krylenko appeared in the doorway a number of officers rushed towards him and assured him anxiously that they were not counter revolutionists and that they were ready to submit to the will of the people. Krylenko looked upon them with astonishment.

Wanted Only Dukhonin.

"Don't put yourselves out," he said. "No one will bother you. Dukhonin alone is under arrest, and he is to go with me to Petrograd." He then ordered the chief of the archives to take possession of the code books and certain other documents, and thereupon requested Dukhonin to follow him to the train.

General Odintsef, three other officers and myself accompanied our chief, and, together with Krylenko, we took our places in the dining car. In silence we were waiting for the departure of the train, when a mob of soldiers, sailors and Red Guards rushed on the platform shouting, "We want to see Dukhonin. Where is he? We shall not let him get away." The general appeared at the car door.

"Throw us your epaulettes," yelled the soldiers, "or we shall kill you." Kryenko entreated the general to obey, but Dukhonin refused. "To the devil with them," he cried. "Let them kill me." A bullet smashed the window, and then another; whereupon Odintsef approached Dukhonin and gently removed his epaulettes. He threw them to the crowd, which tore them to pieces and stamped on them.

"Now his medals," shouted the soldiers. His two crosses of Saint George were cast to the mob. For a moment we thought that the general's life had been saved, when all at once a number of soldiers smashed open the door and rushed into the car. They seized Dukhonin by the shoulders, pushed him out on the car steps, and then down to the station platform. Krylenko ran after them. At the sight of the general there was an outbreak of yells.

"Kill him at once!" the mob shouted. "It is enough that Kerensky and Korniloff have got away from us. This must be beaten down on the spot." The crowd began to surge closer around Dukhonin.

"You Cant Stop Them."

In vain Krylenko shouted orders and entreaties, he was not heard. Rifle butts flew up into the air. Then came a dreadful sight. Krylenko entreated the mob to spare the unhappy man, but out from the crowd jumped a tall sailor, whose cap bore the name of the cruiser Aurora, and shoved Krylenko back.

"Look here, you, if you mix into this business, we will settle with you, too."

Then, with a single blow of his musket, he beat Dukhonin to the ground. The general immediately leaped up, his face bathed in blood, and tried to speak, but he was immediately transfixed by a dozen bayonets, and then upon that bloody body a fury of blows descended. The crowd fought to get nearer to the body. It was stripped of every stitch of clothing. Scenes of grotesque horror were enacted. Two soldiers, having each snatched one of the generals boots, fell upon each other with curses and blows.

Finally the body, entirely naked was propped up against the railway car and, laughing like madmen, the crowd gave itself up to a series of monstrous amusements. Sailors, Red Guards and soldiers threw snowballs and mud at the head of the dead man.

I could no longer stand the sight, and I ran into the car where Commander-in-Chief Krylenko had taken refuge. He was sitting with his head between his hands. As he looked up I saw that he was deadly pale.

"Look at them," he said in a whisper. "You can't stop them. The same fate is in store for myself and the rest of us."

---

It is a disgrace to Canada that wounded and invalided private soldiers should be brought back in the steerage of any ship. The steerage is the best that the country can offer the soldiers on the outward voyage. The soldiers en route to the fighting line have health and comradeship and hope that makes them forget the hardships of the steerage passage. Soldiers on their way back to Canada are sick, wounded, and shell-shocked. Yet these Canadian soldiers are doomed to suffer the miseries of a steerage passage across the Atlantic.

Smith Township Couple Honoured

An address and presentation was made to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McMullen of Smith Township. Mr. and Mrs. McMullen are moving from the second line to the fourth line of Smith Township. About 50 friends were present, and cards and music were enjoyed during the evening. The presentation of two chairs was made by Mr. Fred Cann, and the address was read by Mr. Bert Middleton.

THE ADDRESS

The address follows:

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McMullen and Seward,
Smith Township:

Dear Friends: We have met here on the eve of your departure, to spend a pleasant evening together, not to say "good bye" but "Au Revoir."

You have always been ready and willing to assist in every way possible in our Sunday school and "Red Cross Work," and we shall greatly miss your kindly help and advice. In times of trouble and sickness you have always proved yourself true friends, and good neighbors in every sense of the word, and we are thankful to know that you are not moving very far away, hoping to have the pleasure of seeing us very often.

Please accept the accompanying offering as a small souvenir of our past pleasant associations and our personal esteem, and wishing you all the success you could possibly wish yourselves in your new home, and trusting that you may enjoy the blessings of robust health.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbours,

Wm. Steinkrauss,
Fred Cann.

NEW HEALTH AND STRENGTH FOR WEAK GIRLS AND WOMEN

WEAK, WATERY BLOOD RESPONSIBLE FOR MOST OF THE ILLS FROM WHICH GIRLS AND WOMEN SUFFER.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Actually Make New, Rich Red Blood, and Through This New Blood Restore to Health Weak, Despondent Sufferers.

If every young girl and every woman would realize that the majority of common diseases are due to weak, watery, impoverished blood, and that in this condition health can only be regained by enriching the blood, there would be fewer pallid faces, and nervous, breathless folk in the land. Thin blood means starved nerves, weakened digestion, functional troubles, headaches, heart palpitation, and a feeling of extreme weakness at the least exertion. It has been proven in thousands of cases that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the best medicine in the world for renewing the blood and strengthening the nerves. That given a fair trial they fill the arteries and veins with new, rich, red blood that means good health, and even life itself; that they make weak, despondent people bright, active and strong.

CONSTANT HEADACHES.

Mrs. E. C. Taylor, Ascot Ave., Toronto, says: "A few years ago I was so run down with anaemia that I could scarcely walk about the house, and was not able to leave it. I had no colour. I was constantly troubled with headaches, dizzy spells and general disinclination to move about or do anything. I tried many medicines, but none helped me, and my friends thought I was in a decline. One day a friend who was in to see me asked if I had tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had heard of this medicine often, but had not used it, so I determined to give it a trial. I certainly got a pleasant surprise, for after using two boxes I could feel an improvement in my condition. Continuing the use of these pills I began to regain my health, the headaches and dizzy spells were disappearing, and I began to gain in weight. People began enquiring what I was taking and I was not slow to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the credit. I took the pills for less than two months, and completely regained my old-time health and strength. I hope my experience may convince some doubting person as to the great merit of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, as I have cause to be a firm champion of them."

COULD SCARCELY WALK.

Miss Hannah Hamilton, Everett, Ont., says: "After an attack of la grippe I was so run down and anaemic that I could scarcely walk. I had no colour, no appetite, and constant headaches. The medicine I was taking was doing me no good and I had almost lost hope of getting better. I was asked to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and it was not long until I could feel that they were helping me, and after taking them for a couple of months I was completely cured. I now never fail to recommend these pills to anyone needing a blood builder."

ALWAYS FELT TIRED.

Miss A. Sternburg, Haileybury Road, New Liskeard, Ont., says: "I have much reason to be grateful to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as they restored me to health, if, indeed, they did not save my life. In 1914 I began to feel run down, and the doctor who was called in said that mine was a bad case of anaemia. I lost flesh, always felt tired, and I got so nervous that I could scarcely hold a cup to take a drink. My heart would flutter alarmingly. The doctor did not seem to be able to help me at all and my family and friends all thought that I was in a decline and could not recover. I was in bed for some weeks when an aunt came to see me and urged that I try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. My father got a supply, and by the time I had taken three boxes there was a noticeable improvement, and from that on I steadily progressed toward recovery. I continued using the pills for some time longer, and they restored me to my old-time health and strength. I shall never cease to praise this medicine, and to urge all weak run-down girls to give it a fair trial as I have proved in my own case their great merit."

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

Mrs. Alex. Gillis, Glenville, N.S., says: "I cannot praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills too highly. They are really a wonderful medicine. I was very much run down, suffered from frequent dizzy spells, and had an almost constant severe pain in the back. My home work was a source of dread, I felt so weak, and life held but little enjoyment. Then I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and the result was almost marvellous. They made me feel like a new woman and fully restored my health. I would urge every weak woman to give these pills a fair trial."

GAINED FORTY POUNDS.

Mrs. N. E. Tompsett, Ottawa, Ont., writes: "For several years I suffered terribly from nervous debility and was scarcely able to do a thing. During that time I consulted several doctors, and many medicines without getting any help, and I began to think that I would never get better. One day I saw Dr. Williams' Pink Pills advertised and thought I would try them. After taking four boxes I was much better, but I continued using the pills for several months when I was again in the best of health. When I began taking the pills I weighed only 100 pounds. While under their use with my renewed health I now weigh 140. I recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to every one whom I know to be ailing."

PALE AND BLOODLESS.

Miss Dorina Bastien, St. Jerome, Que., says: "For over a year my health was gradually failing, my blood had seemed almost to have turned to water, my cheeks were pale, my lips bloodless, and the slightest exertion left me breathless. I suffered frequently from severe headaches, my appetite failed, and my friends feared I was going into consumption. I had been doctoring but did not derive any benefit, and finally I had to give up my work and return home. It was at this stage that a friend brought me a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and urged me to try them. By the time the box was used I thought they were helping me, and decided to continue using the pills. I took a half dozen boxes more, when my strength had completely returned, my appetite was restored, my colour returned, headaches had disappeared and I was feeling better than I had been for years. I would urge every weak and ailing girl to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial."

Do not be persuaded to take a substitute. See that the full trade mark name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People is printed on the wrapper around the box. If you cannot get these Pills through your dealer they will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Found New HEALTH

Of greater value than gold and silver is health restored. Up in the mining district of Larder Lake, Ont., Mr. Sid Castlemen discovered something—that the high words of praise given to Gin Pills are true. Here is his story, in part.

"I had heard of your

and decided to give them a trial at once, as I had been suffering for some time with my kidneys and urine. I sent my chum out to get them (about 10 miles) and I am pleased to inform you that in less than 6 hours I felt relief, in two days the pain had left me altogether. . . . To-day I feel as well as ever I did and my kidneys are acting quite naturally." (Full testimonial sent on request together with FREE SAMPLE of Gin Pills.)

"THE CLUE IN THE AIR"

It was obvious that the Foxes had anticipated no immediate intrusion on their privacy. The slatternly maid was not in evidence, the remains of an unappetizing breakfast, still languished on the dining room table, and the couple themselves were in a Sabbath deshabille of more than customary untidiness.

Mrs. Foxe's eyes narrowed with apprehension as she recognized her visitors, but she led them without hesitation to the living room where her unshaven husband luxuriated on the shabby couch, in a welter of cigarette smoke and newspapers.

"Mrs. Foxe," Terhune began without preamble, "it will save time if I tell you that some additional facts have come to our attention which make it necessary for me to ask you to repeat to us word for word just what took place between you and Miss Collins when you met her at the station on her departure for Chicago."

"Why I hardly remember!" she faltered. Her furtive glance sought her husband's but he was gazing at the detective with curious intentness. "I—there was only a moment, you know, and the gates were on the point of closing——"

"Did one word pass between you, Mrs. Foxe? I want the truth. Did you see and speak to your friend that night?"

Grafton Foxe rose slowly and went to his wife.

"I do not think you need answer that question," he said with grave tenderness. "Sit down, dear. I believe that Mr. Terhune has something to tell us instead."

Her pale face went a shade more white and she dropped limply into a chair, clinging to her husband's arm, and drawing him to her side.

"What is it?" Her voice was a mere toneless whisper. "I will tell the truth. We saw Ivy, but we could not get near enough to speak to her. She hurried past the crowd and through the gates just as they were closing. We could not catch her eye. What have you come to tell us?"

"You saw Miss Collins," the detective repeated slowly.

"Are you sure, Mrs. Foxe? You recognized her clothes, perhaps, but did you see her face."

"Mr. Terhune!" She put her trembling hands out as if seeking to ward off a blow. "What is it that you are trying to say? Do you mean that it was not Ivy that we saw! That it was the other! My God, it wasn't Ivy who was killed!"

Terhune bowed his head.

"Ivy!" The tears were raining down her face. "I knew it! I knew it all the time, but I could not let myself believe! That other girl, and the change of clothes; I could not understand, but I felt it! Oh, my poor girl! Why would she not listen! She was reckless, mad! She had had one lesson, one warning——"

Her breath caught in a sob and she pressed her hand convulsively to her shaking lips. Her husband's hand upon her shoulder had tightened until his knuckles showed white.

"Leola! Don't try to talk now, my dear," he said hastily. "The shock has been too great! Poor Ivy! It must have been an accident, a frightful mistake which we shall, perhaps, never understand fully." He turned to Terhune. "Please don't ask my wife any more. Miss Collins was like our own sister to us and your terrible news has quite unnerved her. You can see that we are both unfit for any collected thought now. If you will return later or let us come to you——"

"I am sorry, but I am afraid I must ask Mrs. Foxe to talk now, and tell us all that she knows of her friend. The time for evasion and subterfuge is past." Terhune spoke with quiet firmness. "Surely, for the sake of your friend's memory, you will wish to do all in your power to help clear up the mystery of her death. The shock is not a wholly unexpected one, as Mrs. Foxe has just admitted, and unless you speak frankly you must realize that your own motives will be questioned."

"Our motives? Do you wish to insinuate we had anything to do with her death?" demanded Foxe. Such a suggestion is damnable, sir. But, faugh! it isn't worth a reply. You know where we were from seven until one, if it comes to that, but if you are not a complete ass you ought to be able to see the truth. How or why the two girls met and changed clothes is beyond me, but it is evident that someone was after that Rowntree girl and mistaking her for Ivy killed her! You will learn nothing from harrassing my wife in her grief; for we don't know anything that could possibly help you."

"Nevertheless, Mr. Foxe, I must assure myself of that."

Terhune turned to Mrs. Foxe with a courteous but unmistakable air of command. "Will you tell me, please, how long you have known Miss Collins, and where you met her?"

Her tempestuous sobbing had quieted, and she was obviously making a supreme effort to control herself and marshal her scattered faculties.

"I—I will tell you anything that I can, of course." She pressed her handkerchief to her eyes. "It won't be of any use, though, for my husband is right; a frightful mistake must have been made! Let me see, I have known Ivy for ten years. She was a child performer, then."

"On the stage. I have had the records of theatrical bureaus and organizations searched, and none carry the name of Ivy Collins."

"She was known as Mme. Yvonne, and she was never on the stage." Mrs. Foxe paused. "Ivy was a circus performer."

"Ah!" Terhune shot a quick sidelance at McCarty. "And you met her——"

"I was an animal trainer in the same show," Mrs. Foxe raised her head. "It was the biggest three-ring circus in the west and I am not the least ashamed of it. I told you before that I was an actress because, well, it looks more dignified on Grafton's account. He is getting on splendidly, and soon he'll be a well known playwright. It wouldn't look well if the people knew that his wife had been in a circus. I have been on the stage, too, for afterwards I showed my cats in vaudeville in a big star act. Grafton had written a sketch which was on the same bill, and that is how I met him."

"Cats?" repeated the detective.

"Leopards. They are beauties, too. I was known as La Belle Leola. Perhaps you heard of me a couple of years ago."

Terhune nodded mendaciously, thinking that she was not unlike the creatures she had ruled, with her sullen tawny eyes and glorious lithe body.

"I don't know where Ivy came from or who her people were. She was one of a troupe of acrobats and later she appeared alone in a star number. She was so strong and clever and daring! She risked her neck in a thousand crazy stunts and never thought of danger. Fear or nerves did not exist for her. Oh, I cannot believe that she has gone!"

"She still followed her profession, up to the time of her coming to visit you?"

"She finished last season out with the show—the Frawley and Welt's, they close down in the winter you know. Ivy went back last spring and just before they opened, she—she had an accident?"

"What sort of an accident?"

"I—I believe a gun exploded, or something." Mrs. Foxe bit her lip.

"Please be more explicit! Surely you know the details?"

"It was a mistake that has not been fully understood," Foxe himself interposed smoothly. "The starter's pistol for the chariot races was accidentally loaded with cartridges that were not blank. One of the other performers picked it up and it went off, a bullet grazing Miss Collin's side. It was not serious, a flesh wound, a mere scratch, but the management thought that she had better rest up a few weeks, so she came to us."

"I see," aisd Terhune slowly. "Are you sure Miss Collins herself believed it to have been a mistake? Not an hour before her death she is known to have said that the only accident about it was that it did no do for her."

"She—she said that?" cried Mrs. Foxe. "To whom, Mr. Terhune? Oh, it must have been to that other girl! You have found her!"

"And you had better ask her how Ivy came to her death than to hound us!" her husband exclaimed. "She knows! If she did not kill her herself Ivy was killed in her place! Her precious family were glad enough to claim the body as hers and hustle it underground before it was cold!"

"Mr. Foxe you will gain nothing by trying to balk my investigation." The detective spoke sternly. "We know that Ivy Collins was in a desperate state of fear; fear for her life! We know that she anticipated an attempt upon her and did her utmost to escape it. She was killed by a man in this room, flung from that window, and we have an eye witness to the murder!"

Mrs. Foxe gave a stifled scream and buried her face in her hands while her husband leaned as if for support on the back of her chair, his own face suddenly gray.

TROUBLED FOR YEARS WITH BRONCHITIS
Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup GAVE INSTANT RELIEF

Bronchitis is a disease which is very prevalent during the late winter and early spring, when there are sudden atmospheric changes. It is a condition of inflammation of the bronchial tubes which produces mucous or phlegm. This irritates the throat and causes you to cough in order to get rid of it. The cough may be tight or loose according as to whether this mucous is sticky and hard to remove, or soft and easily expelled.

Bronchitis is not really dangerous but the complications which are liable to follow makes it necessary get rid of it at the first sign. This you can do by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. A remedy that has been on the market for over 25 years.

John D. McFarlane, Jr., S.W. Margaree, N.S., writes: "I was troubl for years with bronchitis, and cou not find any relief. I was especia bad on a damp day. I went to a dru gist, and asked him for something stop the constant tickling in m throat. He gave me a bottle of Dr Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which found gave me instant relief. ## The Angel

By MARTHA MITCHELL

(Copyright, 1917, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"But she can't wait forever for him to propose, plan for their house and ask to have the wedding day named," said Mrs. Cogdal. "I believe a word or two put in wisely might suggest the thing to him."

"Yes, I know, Jennie," sighed her daughter, the Angel, "but you promised when Dan first began coming here that you would not spoil Beauty's prospects with him by hinting at our poverty."

"Poverty, nothing!" snorted good-natured, voluble Jennie; "don't you know Howard has said a dozen times that he and Bess might have had their comfortable bungalow a year before they did if he had realized that five of you were dressing on an income hardly sufficient for three."

"Yes, dear, I know, and thanks to your clever fingers, we four are still fairly decent on that same income 'hardly sufficient' for three." She patted her mother's fat hands lying idle in her lap as she spoke. "You know Dan isn't like Howard. Howard had skimped along at home and, anyway, he loved Bess better—"

"Well, doesn't Dan love Beauty, I'd like to know?"

The Angel turned to her. Jennie was irritable for once in her easy-going, pleasure-loving life. The Angel could not understand it. Her mother had always been so far from irritable and had been so much of a regular chum that her girls fondly called her "Jennie," with no thought of irreverence or disrespect. "Mother" simply didn't fit her; she was "Jennie," with a heavy mop of faded goldish hair above a face still childishly pretty and fair. But her body didn't agree with her face, for she was frankly fat and pudgy. Her feet were always a trial; they were numbers too small to support the weight of her body. "Jennie" was seldom in evidence when company was about, but her presence was always felt, and she was referred to as often and as fondly by all the sisters as if she had been a seventh wonder. The Angel regarded her severely. "Why, Jennie, you are actually peevish, and, judging by your tone, one would think you doubted Dan's affection for Beauty."

"Well, Beauty is getting restless, and that young reporter on the Star, Ted Hammer, keeps hanging around. Beauty must have a new dancing frock for the Millard's ball, and I don't know where it is coming from." She sighed heavily. "Honestly, Angel, I sometimes feel that it isn't worth while to try to catch a wealthy husband. Just a medium one ought to satisfy even Beauty. I doubt if she would be any happier in a fourteen-room house than she would be in a four-room one. If she loves Dan and not his money, four rooms would be sufficient, and if she doesn't, why forty-four wouldn't make her happy."

The Angel laughed outright. "Why, Jennie Cogdal, who ever heard of you philosophizing thusly—you who are a living, sunny philosophy all by yourself. Get up and don your most comfortable bedroom slippers, and we'll sally forth for a stroll around the vegetable garden! Mayhap the sweet spring breeze, the babbling brook and the singing of many birds will restore you to your former care-free state of mind, and—"

Jennie seized her and shook her roughly. "If it weren't for your foolishness and fun, the Cogdal family would be a staid bunch of beauties," she said.

"Well, Jen, if we couldn't all be beauties, we surely needed to be foolish." She smiled her impish, crooked smile. "There is just one good thing about being homely, and that is that one needn't worry about losing one's beauty; and if one's complexion happens to be the color of delicious weak tea, why, faded lavender crepe de chine plus a packet of diamond dye a la golden brown, transforms weak-tea complexion into rich cream." She patted down the folds of a miraculously transformed dress which had been discarded as "impossible" by an elder sister. The Angel was honestly, undeniably homely. Her hair was of no particular color and did not curl; her nose nondescript like the rest of her face; her teeth even, but not white. In most stories all homely girls have beautiful dreamy eyes, but the Angel's eyes matched her face; they were neither gray nor blue, but in between the two. True, she had a mellow contralto voice, but nobody ever thought of asking her to sing except after a picnic supper around a campfire, when every one else was too well content to do anything except listen. And, too, she had her inimitable crooked smile.

As unlike her as it is possible for a twin to be was the Beauty—tall, graceful, with fair, wavy hair, deep, innocent blue eyes, full, red lips and a skin of baby fairness. From early babyhood she had been called a beauty, and, in order to defend the homely twin, their mother had always said, "Yes, Eunice is a beauty, but Lulu is an angel!" Thus they had been known, until now, at nineteen, nobody thought of them as Eunice and Lulu, but as Beauty and Angel.

By her beauty and grace the Beauty had walked into the hearts and homes of the city's most exclusive set, and when at seventeen, she was singled out by Dan Ames, the one really unattached man of the town, her sisters had coaxed, threatened and bribed Jennie to forbear mentioning how her daughters' cleverness at household management and sewing kept them well dressed on their tiny income plus the salaries of Mary and Edith, who taught school. Beauty might as well have their chance, and Dan was well worth any girl's time, from many points of view. For two years he had been impartially nice to all four of the girls. They all adored him. His high-powered motor car was ever at their service. Beauty always beside him on the front seat. But lately Beauty had grown restless and Dan seemed preoccupied and uninterested, unless it was at a picnic supper.

The Angel never refused to sing, because Dan, at least, didn't talk while she sang. Often he didn't laugh at her jokes and stories, either, and one night when she convulsed her audience with a recital of her feelings when her first "special article" had been accepted by the Morning Star, he did not even smile. She had had various "specials" since then, but she never mentioned them before Dan. "Money and success are so trivial to him," she said, with a mock shudder. It was as if he had said, "Don't ever mention your elation over a bit of money, young lady; it is so plebeian."

Tonight there was to be another picnic, and Jennie had decided that she would take the situation in her own hands and mention the fact that Beauty was nineteen now—a year older than she had been when she was married.

Beauty had gone away with Ted Hammer and had promised that she would meet them at the park, where they were to have the picnic, so she said that the Angel or Jennie might have her seat beside Dan this once.

The Angel made many delicious sandwiches and salads; deviled eggs and squeezed lemons, keeping up a rapid-fire of jest and fun the while; so when Dan's car drew up at the door the hamper was packed and Jennie's good humor was restored.

If Dan felt any discomfort or disappointment at the Beauty's nonappearance and promise to meet them at the park, he did not show it, and he promptly assisted the Angel to the seat beside him.

The picnic was gay enough except that the Beauty and Ted Hammer did not appear; and Jennie was undeniably nervous, laughing hysterically at the Angel's sallies, and watching Dan closely.

Dan was having a good time; there was no denying that when he dared the Angel to run him a race to a certain crooked tree far around the bend of the pond. He outran her shamelessly and stood laughing, hat in hand, as she staggered up. Seizing a dead branch, she bore down on him while he dodged off and around the tree, saying, "Now, Angel, don't, really; you just can't run, that is all," and, his tone changing, "Come here and sit on this crooked limb. I want to tell you something."

The Angel looked at him quizzically. "All right, fire away; but I'll tell you now you will get no sympathy from me. I'm not to blame for her running away with Ted, but if I had been you she would not have gone—"

"Oh, yes, you are to blame, Angel." She listened; had he said "Angel?" It didn't sound like it, but that was surely what he had said. "You surely are to blame for Ted's raise from fifteen per to twenty, because a man may not reasonably be supposed able to take care of a wife on fifteen dollars; but twenty is a different matter."

"But, Dan, I didn't ask the editor of the Star for a raise for Ted—"

"Oh, you didn't; you didn't? Well, what does that impish, adorable, crooked smile mean, then, except that the dearest, most adorable, beautiful Angel might be induced to marry a duffer like me if Beauty were safely bestowed on somebody who loves her? Angel, Angel, there are so many beauties, but just one— Let's make it a double wedding?"

The Angel's inevitable mirth twinkled through her crooked smile as she said, "What a 'special,' Dan; what a story this would make!"

Suffered Great Agony
FROM PAIN IN STOMACH
FOR OVER 5 YEARS

Most of the misery and ill-health that humanity is burdened with arises from disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels. If you are feeling out of sorts, have pains in the stomach, especially after eating, bilious spells, headaches, sour stomach, coated tongue, sallow or muddy complexion, specks floating before the eyes, you should take a few doses of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills and note the change.

Miss Ida Hogan, Dunrobin, Ont., writes: "For over five years I have suffered great agony from pains in the stomach. I tried several remedies but got no relief until a friend advised me to take Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. I started with two vials and before I had one quite used, I found much relief. I continued until I used four vials, and they have completely cured me. That was fourteen months ago and I have not had the slightest return since. The best praise I could give them is not enough."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

To give sweater coats a new lease of life

Now that sweater coats are getting more expensive, it is more than ever desirable that you wash yours with LUX. Of all things a sweater coat, which is seen so much, must be kept soft, fluffy, fleecy and "new" in appearance. You can keep yours that way and wash it again and again if you do this:

Pour boiling water over LUX flakes—pure essence of soap—allowing 3 or 4 tablespoonfuls for every gallon of water you use. Whip into a creamy lather—a few seconds is needed. Then put in the garment and stir it about. Let it soak until cool enough for your hands to squeeze the water out of the coat—the dirt just runs away. Rinse in two or three relays of tepid water, and hang to dry.

Very simple. Anyone can do it—just a few minutes' work and you get a result that the most expert French cleaner might well envy.

LUX won't shrink woollens. Won't hurt any fabric or color that pure water can safely touch.

Has The Globe's Message Reached You?

For the past six weeks

THE GLOBE has been presenting certain facts to the readers of this paper. The object has been to convince the people of this district that Canada's National Newspaper has :

1. A telegraphic and cable service unrivalled in Canada. This includes exclusive rights to all cables of The London Times, The London Chronicle, The New York Times and The Philadelphia Ledger.
2. A "War Summary," based on the world's most authoritative information, and giving the reader a clear and concise survey of the situation on all fronts up to the time of going to press.
3. A domestic news service that is truly national, with unbiased reports from Ottawa and Toronto press galleries featured during Parliamentary sessions. The Legislature is in session now; Parliament meets in March.
4. Financial information and market reports that put THE GLOBE in a class by itself; a full page daily of editorial matter; a special section devoted to the latest news of sport.
5. A Woman's Department, a daily feature supplemented on Thursdays with a Homemakers' Page. THE GLOBE, with its strict censorship, is a particularly desirable family paper.
6. An Industrial and Business Section every Tuesday, and Farm and Country Life pages on Wednesdays, both of them invaluable features, and constituting premiums to be had only with THE GLOBE.
7. Saturday features, such as the Young People's Page, the Religious Outlook, and other special departments, that make THE GLOBE of Saturday morning worth the full subscription price.

Give Your Order to Your Newsdealer To-day

Are you convinced that Canada's National Habit is something to acquire right now ?

More than 80,000 people are subscribers to THE GLOBE daily—how many more would be regular subscribers if they realized how small was the cost ! —1.28 cents per day when mailed to your address.

SLOW TRAVEL IN MANCHURIA

Better Progress Is Made in Winter Than in Summer by Antiquated Methods.

Although it is much easier to reach Manchuria now than it was ten or fifteen years ago, the man who would travel in the interior of this primitive part of China, as soon as he leaves the few railroads must rely upon means that were standard a century ago.

If it is winter he will rattle over the frozen mud in a cart drawn by three horses. At night he will stop at an inn where he must supply his own bed and a large part of his own food, unless he is willing to be satisfied with a little boiled corn. The walls of his room will be of paper and eyes will peer at him through holes hastily punched for the purpose. In the morning his driver will awaken him before daylight and start him on another long day of jolts and freezing.

In the summer travel is easier and pleasanter, but also much slower. A boat may be taken upon one of the rivers. It will crawl along between pleasantly shaded banks and green fields, every little while coming to rest upon a sandbar; so that progress is unbelievably slow, even going down stream. Against the current the boat is laboriously poled and dragged with heavy ropes.

By these means the traveler may penetrate into a region where change is unknown and the principles of Confucius still rule. He will meet natives who have never seen a watch or a railroad train, although they nominally belong to one of the oldest civilizations; he will see the squalor and dirt and disease that go with ignorance.

The fact will be forcibly brought home to him that modern progress travels over good roads.

Influence of German Scholars.

In France, as elsewhere, there are difficulties in the way of educational reciprocity. But in France as elsewhere, these can easily be removed by joint committee action such as I have mentioned. The enemy has endeavored to confuse the issue. You have to go to Paris to realize the wideness and the intricacy of German "bother" to the world. The manifestos of German scholars, scientists and theologians have had some weight. Some Canadians who have studied in years past in Germany may be found among the pacifists who still retard the settlement necessary before there can be world-wide peace. What they got from Germany is not what Germany is now trying to compel the world to make its own.

Culture is not culture if it is compulsory. When Germany took to the sword she broke with what other nations have found worth while in German universities. The roots of Kulture may be found in Fichte, but from Fichte to the ruthless Nietzsche, the brutal Bernhardi, and the tribal Treitschke, is a long, long way. Kant, who died in 1807; Beethoven, whose death took place in 1827, and Goethe, who died in 1832, never learned to sing "Deutschland Ueber Alles," or to cry "Gott Strafe" anybody. The hands are Esau's, but the voice is Jacob's, even though to hear it may be difficult among the booming of big guns. The German people have been fooled. No matter if the siren voices of the aged Eucken and the seductive Harnack whisper in our ear, we must not be fooled. The allies must stand together.

"WHO IS THIS DR. CHASE?" we are sometimes asked by persons who know his medicines, but are not familiar with his interesting life story.

The boyhood days of Dr. A. W. Chase were spent in the vicinity of Buffalo, N.Y., and as he had early decided to be a medical doctor, he took the first opportunity of attendance at the University of Michigan, located at Ann Arbor.

After graduation he began the practice of medicine in Ann Arbor, Mich., and, at the time represented in the illustration, his reputation as a physician of exceptional skill had spread far beyond the confines of his State, and people came to him for treatment from many miles around.

As he was accustomed to travel across western Ontario to his native city of Buffalo he frequently stopped over at Canadian towns and cities for special consultation, and in this way made many friends in Canada.

The character and personality of, Dr. Chase was such that to know him was to love him. He inspired confidence and respect, and made lasting friends wherever he went.

And thus it happened that when Dr. Chase placed his most successful prescriptions on the market, so that the people might obtain them more readily, they met with a reception in Canada as well as in the United States.

This letter from Mr. Parish will give you some idea of how Dr. Chase's Medicines became known throughout Canada.

Went to Dr. Chase in 1867

"In the year 1867 I was very bad with my kidneys. I could not work on account of my back being lame, sore and painful all the time. Though I carefully followed the directions of our family doctor he was unable to do me much good. At this time Dr. A. W. Chase was becoming known as an especially successful physician, and on the advice of my uncle, Charles Williams, I went to Dr. A. W. Chase at Ann Arbor, Michigan, and he gave me a box of his pills for kidney disease.

"You can scarcely imagine how much good they did me. They helped me so much that I went back to the doctor and bought a dozen boxes. In my mind there is not a medicine half so good as DR. A. W. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS for kidney trouble and headache. We always keep them in the house as a family medicine, and I would not think of using any other."—Mr. G. W. Parish, Sturgeon Bay, Ont.

Dr. A. W. Chase's medicines are for sale by all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

Note that the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author, are on every box of his medicines.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

GOOD WIVES ARE BORN NOT MADE

CHAPTER V.

I wanted to tell George what Marge Loring had said to me, but he showed no inclination to talk further, and finished his breakfast, his nose buried in his paper. Then he went up stairs and changed. I waited for him to come and kiss me good-bye, but he came down so quietly I heard nothing until the front door slammed. I ruhesd out and called, but either he did not hear or was in too much of a hurry to stop; for he did not turn his head.

I swallowed hard to keep back the tears. But the thought that he had left me without the morning kiss, that he could leave me so, brought on another fit of weeping.

"How can he do so if he loves me, how can he?" I asked myself over and over. To my immature mind that morning kiss, or the omission of it, meant either a day of happiness or one of miserable unhappiness or one of miserable unhappiness. It was such a little thing it took but a second; yet it had already become a task to George. What could it mean? What had changed him so?

He used to beg for my kisses—tease me unmercifully because I was so chary of them—and now, when I gave them willingly, he cared nothing for them.

It was raining hard and after I had given orders for dinner I went into the library, my favourite room in all the house, and picked up a magazine. It fell open and the title of a story caught my attention: "Good Wives are Born not Made."

I read it avidly. It did not bring me comfort—quite the contrary. It implied that unless a wife were a born diplomat she might as well give up; that her efforts to hold he husband, to be happy herself with him would never succeed.

Was I so hopelessly old-fashioned to think that when people were married they still should show affection for each other? Was it out of reason to expect a little of the attention I had before I was a wife? I had not changed. I was the same girl that I was a few months before. Did marrying a man mean that he was exempt forever from paying the girl he married any of the little attentions he gave so gladly before she became his wife?

Oh, it was all so complicated, so horribly hard to understand. Had mother lived near I could have gone to her—not complaining, but to ask some of these questions which troubled me. But I could not write them; they wouldn't sound the same and she would think I was unhappy; I wasn't really—not all of the time. I was too young too full of life, to be constantly depressed.

But often when I was feeling happiest and would in my exuberance tell George of my great love, kiss and caress him, he would either passively endure, or tell me not to be silly!

Was it silly to love — to love the man whom you had married because of all those you had ever known, he seemed the most worth loving? Oh, if only I could have answered the questions I constantly asked myself!

"Shure it's too bad it's rainin', you ain't no right to be sittin' here alone, a young thing like you," Mary said when she came to ask about a dessert I had heard George say he had eaten at the club, and that he particularly fancied.

"But I don't know anyone, Mary. I haven't any place to go—only to the stores."

"Why don't you go and see that lady you brung into my kitchen when it was messed up?"

"Now, Mary, you know it wasn't 'messed up' as you call it. And I believe that's what I will do if it stops raining after lunch. I'll return her call."

"Do that!" and she left after we talked of the dessert. I thought I heard her mutter "poor thing."

I ordered the car in case it stopped raining. George had given me a lovely sedan for a wedding present. I had not yet learned to drive it because he objected to a woman's driving a car.

"It looks mannish," he said, "something I hate in any woman, and will not endure in my wife."

But I had not given up hope that he would allow me to learn. More and more were women driving their own cars—fashionable women who were neither mannish nor common. It would have an effect. Until then, I would not annoy him by urging my way. Yet I would so have enjoyed running it myself! It would have given me something to do. I cared little about riding with the chauffeur for company; so seldom used the car save when I went shopping, or on Sundays, when George went out with me.

The rain continued, so I did not go out, but along about four o'clock the telephone rang, and Madge Loring said:

"I am giving a little impromptu dinner to-morrow night. Will you and George join us?"

"Unless he has some other engagement, yes." I answered, wishing at the same time that she wouldn't call him "George." It sounded so dreadfully intimate.

To-morrow—Mr. and Mrs. Loring call.

GRAIN MARKET

Manitoba cash oats, basis Fort William, are quoted 1 1-2c lower yesterday. A weaker tone in the cash and speculative markets generally prevailed, due in part to improved prospects of freer spot offerings and to some falling off in buying for export. Ontario oats remain steady, with small offerings. The scarcity of mill feed is further emphasized from the fact that neither middlings nor feed flour are quoted. Grinding is on small scale owing to the difficulty of obtaining wheat. The demand for flour is very active.

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 Northern, $2.23 1-2; No. 2, $2.20 1-2; No. 3, $2.17 1-2; No. 4, $2.10 1-4; including 2 1-2c tax, in store Fort William.

Manitoba oats—No. 2 C. W. 95 3-4, No. 2, 92 3-4; extra No. 1 feed, 91 1-4, store, Fort William; No. 1 feed 88 1-4 cents.

American corn — No. 3 kiln dried, $2.05, track Toronto.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, 97c to 98c, nominal; No. 3 white, 96c to 79c.

Buckwheat—$1.78 to $1.80.

Ontario wheat — No. 2 winter, $2.22, basis in store, Montreal.

Peas—No. 2, $3.70 to $3.80, according to freights outside.

Barley—Malting, $1.68 to $1.70.

Rye—No. 2, $2.08 to $2.10.

Ontario flour—War quality, $10.70, Toronto-Montreal, $10.70, new bags.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered, Montreal; shorts, $40; bran, $35; feed flour, not quoted; middlings, not quoted.

Hay—Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 1, $17 to $18; No. 2, $14 to $16; mixed, $13 to 16; straw, car lots, $8.50 to $9.

CATTLE MARKET

Milder weather and prospects of improving traffic conditions, with freer deliveries operated early in the week to pull down cattle prices about 25c. lower than the previous week. At this level the market remained practically steady during the balance of the week. That the market was steady was due more to another change in the weather, with storms holding up deliveries for practically one whole day, rather than to any inherent strength of the market itself. For, notwithstanding the holding up of receipts, there was no evidence of increased activity in the demand. Trade, in fact, developed a distinctly slow gait and only for the lighter runs, prices would in all likelihood have registered still further declines. As it was, with just fairly moderate runs for the week-end markets, cattle prices held barely steady for the choicer qualities, while trade became distinctly slow and draggy for stale and medium quality.

Choice fat cows and butcher bulls held comparatively firm all through the week.

Choice calves steady.

Sheep and lambs steady to firm.

Stocker cattle trade slow.

Hogs again disappointed all expectations as to numbers reaching the market. The looked-for big runs never materialized, with the result that prices held extremely strong and closed at the week-end 40c. to 50c. higher than the week before.

Cattle Receipts.

Union Stock Yards—Total receipts this week, 380 cars, with 5,144 cattle, 593 calves, 10,429 hogs, 424 sheep and lambs, and 157 horses.

City Cattle Market—28 cars, with 429 cattle, 140 sheep, 469 hogs, 16 calves, and 54 horses.

PETROGRAD, March 2.—Petrograd is facing her "battle of the Marne." The Germans last night were three hours from Luga (100 miles south-west of Petrograd, on the Riga-Petrograd railway), which is only five hours from Petrograd.

Petrograd is stripping for action. A special commission is clearing out the useless Bourgoise, except the able-bodied trench diggers; ousting the old, young, invalids, unwilling soldiers and suspected war prisoners.

The enemy line is in a fan formation, Pskoff the stick, and Dno and Ourieff the wings. Walk is the chief food base and Pskoff the base of advanced operations. No movement of the Germans towards Luga was reported during the night, however.

Lake Chudno is frozen over. The Germans may find no difficulty in thus crossing this barrier, dragging heavy atrillery and supplies with them.

Bologoye wires that German troops have fortified Pskoff and begun a movement towards Petrograd. The Russian railway has been ordered to destroy the bridge between Bologoye and Porchovo.

Heavy forces of German troops are reported moving towards Novo-Sekolini, attempting to cut the Moscow-Petrograd Railway. The Russians are stiffly resisting. The Moscow workmen's and soldiers' organizations have passed resolutions declaring that the German peace terms are unacceptable, and demanding a continuation of the fighting. The Pan-Russian Trade Unions have taken similar action.

Arno Doach-Fleurot, of the New York World, and I are the only American correspondents remaining in the city. Most of the British newspapermen also have gone.

The railway exits from the city are closed. We are provided for a quick getaway with sledges.

The Soviet Commissaries have announced they will remain until the last moment. Only the most important institutions, valuables and gold are being evacuated.

In the event of German occupation, the Government will proceed to Moscow.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 2.—(Official):—German troops made an onslaught on the portion of the line held by Portuguese in Northern France early to-day, but were ejected with heavy losses. In other respects comparative quiet prevails on the Western front.

Several raiding operations by the Germans were conducted last night. In one case, near Hargicourt, every German who succeeded in reaching the British trenches was either killed or captured. The British troops took prisoners in raids in the Armentieres region and near Arleux en Gohelle.

After a heavy bombardment carried out early this morning on the wide front of Neuve Chapelle northward, strong hostile raiding parties attacked and entered the Portuguese front trenches in this area. The enemy was promptly ejected by an immediate counter attack, which completely restored the situation. Other hostile raids in the neighbourhood of Ypres, Comines Canal and south of Houthoist Forest also were repulsed with loss to the enemy.

We captured a few prisoners and a machine gun. The enemy's artillery has shown considerable activity during the night in connection with his raids, and also in the Passchendaele sector.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

AMSTERDAM, March 2.—In the capture of Pskoff by the Germans, one of the German battalions suffered heavy losses through an explosion caused by the retreating Russians, according to a Berlin despatch printed in the Volks Zeitung of Cologne.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 2.—Premier Lloyd George has had several personal conferences with American Ambassador Page, presumably about the Japanese in Siberia, and it is believed the United States will agree to let Japan handle the Siberian situation alone.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

VOLOGDA, Russia, March 2.—The interior of Russia, following the example of Moscow, declares strongly against a separate peace with Germany. Workmen's and Soldiers' Councils in many Provincial centres are issuing mobilization orders proclaiming a fight to a finish in behalf of the Revolution.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, March 2.—The Germans refuse to cease hostilities before Monday, Russian peace delegates at Brest-Litovsk reported in a proclamation.

"We order nothing to be given up without fighting," the proclamation said. "Our last word is that we must make an effort to drive the Germans back as far as possible to the West."

ROME, March 2.—Teuton artillery was active on both sides of the Brenta River. The British batteries brought down an enemy aeroplane.

MONTREAL MEN FOR NOBEL PLANT ALL HAD PAPERS

Seventy-five of Them Grouped at C. P. R. Station This Morning Attracted Police and Military Authorities

NOT A SOLDIER AMONG THEM

When P. C. Dainnard saw a crowd of strangers, the majority of them of military age, at the C.P.R. station this morning, he notified Chief Thompson, who passed the report on to the authorities at the armouries. Major Watt, accompanied by a detachment of soldiers, responded at once, and found the visitors to be a group of French-Canadians, who had come in on the early train from the east and were leaving on the Port McNicholl train for the explosives factory at Nobel, near Parry Sound. Every man produced exemption papers except those who were manifestly under or over the draft age. Those who produced papers showed that they had been placed in categories other than the desirable A2.

In short the investigation failed to produce one soldier. There was no excitement beyond an anxious searching of pockets for the official certificates.

CCNDENSED MILK PLANT MACHINERY BEING INSTALLED

Mr. T. A. McDonald, of Ingersoll, has commenced the installation of the machinery for the condensed milk plant of the Peterborough Creamery. The work will be rushed to an early completion, and it is expected that this department will be operating not later than May 1st. Farmers who intend to sell milk to the condensing plant are reminded that they should put in supplies of ice for the cooling of their milk. The milk condenser should prove a boon to the dairy industry of this district. This has been the experience in other sections of the province, and is assured for Peterborough.

CANADIAN KITCHENER LEAGUE.

There will be a meeting of the Canadian Kitchener League in the Y.M.C.A. on Monday night, March 4th at 8 o'clock. Mrs. A. Mowat, representing the Local Council of Women, will give an address on some phases of the food question. All members are requested to be present.

SIGNS OF OFFENSIVE

Considerable Increase of Activity on Western Front Where Raids by Germans at Many Points Over Wide Front is Reported

ATTACK COMING?

Canadian Press Despatch:

NEW YORK, March 2.—Later despatches to-day indicate considerable increase of activity along the western front, and it is again thought in some quarters that the long expected German attack is about to begin.

Hostile raids by the Germans are reported at points over a wide front in the west. In most of these, it is thought, they were largely for the purpose of obtaining knowledge of the weight of resistance on the Allies' front. In practically all these raids the Germans left prisoners and material in the Allies' hands. The British and French have also been active in raiding and have taken many prisoners and machine guns.

U. S. Steamer Sinks Submarine

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, March 2.—Battling a German submarine for two and a half hours, the American steamship Nyanzas' armed guard probably sunk its opponent, according to a report of Chief Gunners Mate Benjamin H. Groves, made public to-day.

The Popular Majority 326,008

(Canadian Press Despatch)

OTTAWA, Ont., March 2. — The Government majority over official Opposition alone was 326,008. Ontario's vote was 510,241 in favour and 268,218 against Union Government. Quebec's vote was 75,990 in favour and 243,473 against Union Government. Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island also gave a small popular majority against Union Government, but all other provinces strongly in favour.

The Biggest Majority On Record

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, March 2.—With the soldiers' vote finally in, the Unionist government is now seen to have a majority of 69 seats, the largest for any government since Confederation. The nearest approach to any such figure was in the election of 1878, when the Conservatives held 137 seats and the Liberals 69. Four years later a Conservative government was returned with 139 sheets and the Opposition with 71.

Says Huns Will Never Gain A Real Foothold In Russia

Trotsky-Lenine Regime Will Be Overthrown, Prophesies Meyer London and a Coalition Socialist Government Will Be Formed

RUSSIANS WILL FIGHT

WASHINGTON, D.C., March 2.—The Trotsky-Lenine regime will be overthrown and a coalition socialistic government formed.

The Russians will keep up continual guerilla warfare as long as German invaders try to seize their farms and homes.

Germany will never gain a real foothold in Russia.

These are the predictions for the immediate future of kaleidoscope Russia, as given by Representative Meyer London, Socialist, one of the best informed men in Congress on Slav conditions, to the United Press today. London lived under the Czar's rule until he was twenty years old, and is a personal friend of many Russian factional leaders.

ANYTHING MAY HAPPEN.

"Almost anything may happen suddenly in Russia," London said, "but the Kaiser will find to his sorrow just what Napoleon and other ambitious war lords learned by experience. For the Germans to gain complete control of Russia seems to me just as impossible now as Napoleon found it.

"When German leaders seize little farms, destroy little thatch roofed homes and other property as they are certain to do in their advance, the great mass of the peasantry will fight and will fight as if fighting for their lives," he emphatically asserted.

"They will lack organization, but they will fight bitterly in guerilla fashion harassing the Germans as much as possible."

SOLIDIFIED BY ATTACK.

The Socialist factions will be solidified by the German advance, London believes, and will join in the fight against the invader.

"The Socialist oath against war is only against wars of aggression, but when a foe strives to take away their homes and property it is of defence and they will fight."

Admitting that he dislikes Trotsky and Lenine because they are of an opposing faction of Socialists, London claims the German advance into Russia will make it necessary to relieve many Social Democrats and intellectual leaders imprisoned by the present rulers. These men, he says, unless other events interrupt, will bring about the downfall of Bolsheviki regime, which, London claims represents less than one-fourth of the people of Russia. Then, "with their ranks solidified by the on-marching Teuton" will come coalition Socialist government, London thinks.

Among leaders in the overthrow, London suggested Max Lieber, now imprisoned, but a constructive worker, who, he says, was able, while in power, to prevent a separate peace between Gemany and Ukraine.

Lenine, London says, is sincere and desirous of causing a Bolsheviki revolution in Germany and Austria, but thinks peace should come before the revolt.

WANT ALL THE ALIENS PROHIBITED FROM COAST

BELFAST, March 2.—The Belfast Branch of the British Empire Union has adopted the following resolution:

"Owing to the sinking of the steamer Tuscania with American troops aboard, urgent steps should be taken to have all enemy aliens, naturalized or not, removed at once from every coast town and seaport, and prohibited from approaching within ten miles of the coast."

The resolution asks all important civic bodies in Belfast to take similar action and to forward resolutions to the Premier.

JAPANESE LEADERS CONFER OVER THE RUSSIAN SITUATION

Naval Minister Kato and Admiral Togo in Consultation With the Mikado To-day Over Action to Be Taken by Japan in Siberia

CONSIDER NEW POLICY

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Ralph S. Turner.)

TOKIO, March 2.— An important conference, bearing on the situation in Siberia, was under way at the Mikado's Villa in Sayama to-day. Foreign Minister Motono, Naval Minister Kato and Admiral Togo were in conference with the Emperor.

The decision of the Allied diplomats to withdraw from Petrograd is tantamount to a severance of diplomatic relations, it was generally regarded in local official circles to-day.

Premier Motono told the Diet that Japan is negotiating with the Allies for a new policy towards Russia.

Significance is placed on the hurried departure for Vladivostok of Rear-Admiral Tanawa, former attache at Petrograd.

Naval Minister Kato's visit to the Imperial Villa at Hayama is to report to and confer with the Emperor regarding the Russian situation.

SKATING TO-NIGHT AT BROCK ST. RINK

This May Be The Last Saturday Night's Skating.

If those who enjoy skating desire to take advantage of the ice while it is still good, they should be on hand at the Brock street rink to-night. From present appearances of the weather there will not be many more good nights skating. In any event the skating nights next week will only be Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Rink is not open on Monday. On Wednesday a hockey match in aid of the G.W.V. Association, with skating after the game. Be on hand to-night, sure.

NOT GIVEN FAIR CHANCE

Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Ont., March 2.—The explanation given by the Countess of Ashburnham and Mrs. W. H. Jones, of New Brunswick, who walked out of the women's conference with the government, is that the Ontario and western women so dominated the conference that they felt the Maritime provinces were not being given a fair showing.

JACK MUNRO OF PRINCESS PATS STRIKES IT RICH

Famous Prize Fighter and Mayor of Elk Lake City Ont., Receives $20,000 For His Story of the Great War

WILL LECTURE TOO

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, March 2.—Jack Munro, the man who sprang into fame by knocking Champion Jim Jeffries down one day at Butte, Montana, during the height of the champion's career, has at last struck it rich. Munro, examiner, ex-prospector, ex-mayor of Elk Lake, ex-soldier, struck it rich as an author. Can you imagine that Jack Munro as an author?

That's it.

Munro enlisted with the famous Princess Pats and was with them through all the terrific fighting of the first year of the war. His shoulder was smashed by a Hun missile and he was returned and discharged with a crippled right arm and was given a job as messenger at the Parliament Buildings, and while tinkering around there commenced to write a book.

Now, as an author, Jack is a good prize fighter, but a New York publishing house heard about his literary efforts, sent a man to Elk Lake to see Munro and his M.S.S." It was rough and ready, but it was a gripping, red blood story that promised Jack London style and force when it was licked into shape, so they offered Munro $20,000 for the right.

Munro seized it with alacrity and now he and his faithful dog are in New York drawing a thousand a week for 20 weeks telling tells of the Princess Pats to expert writers, and when he gets through spieling to the dictagraph he tackles a lecture tour at $100 a day.

Petition To Save The Lives Of Sentries

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

DALLAS, Tex., March 2.—Petitions were started here to-day among the mothers of Dallas, asking President Wilson that the sentences of the four United States' sentries who went to sleep at their posts in France, be commuted from death to imprisonment.

Art cannot be measured in specific dollars, and a good workman is worth more than a careless one. Style is the intimate portrayal of art as applied to dress. Careful styles that breathe the spirit of the times are in evidence in our style portfolio. Dignified elegance and refinement, coupled up with masculine strength of line, can be studied in this book. A gentleman's coat, when tailored on artistic lines, with correct finish, will hold its shapeliness and be in good form for several seasons, in direct contrast to the pronounced effects and loud patterns which quickly pass. ### THE MESSAGE OF MARCH.

As winter relaxes, with scarcely perceptible gradations, its lingering discomforts and the memories of its rigours that seem still a palpable presence, obscure the advent of spring. The year has turned from the negation of the season of long nights to the hope and promise of new life, impregnated by the passing snow, the rains of April and the warm austral winds of to-morrow. If winter served no other purpose it intensifies by contrast the returning joys of spring and summer. The hush of January will be broken and forgotten in the first robin's call, and February's sombre grays will be painted out with the verdure and early blossoms of May. There is sadness in the retrospect of recent years, but spring bears a sweet anodyne for heavy hearts. Let us go out to meet it half way with ears attuned to catch the whispers of the wind-borne spirits that bring a message of courage and hope. An old saying attaches to the month of March the motto, "Courage and strength in time of danger," and bids us open our hearts and minds to its inspiration. We have emerged from mere negation to the positiveness of a new opportunity, that offers not only hope but demands our supreme faith.

A NOBLE AGENCY.

Of all the reports that, from time to time, appear in the local press, none excels in importance, and none deserves more careful and sympathetic reading, than the annual report of the Peterborough Health Association. Not only are these reports evidence of the splendid nature and scope of work of the Association, but —especially that of this year—eloquent evidence of the jealous, painstaking and efficient character of the direct ministration of the Association.

No one can read the fairly thrilling, interesting and important report of the work of Miss Edith Hamilton, city nurse of the Association, without being deeply impressed with the actual help and healing carried to the suffering, but also with the extent of the disease seething below the surface of our social and civic life, unknown to most of us, and to be unknown and uncared for, but for the work and revelation of the work of the Health Association.

But what should most largely impress the thoughtful and the altruistic is the fact revealed of the existene of social and sanitary conditions that constitute a menace to the social and sanitary welfare of the community. It is simply appalling to learn that in this prosperous city, with so fair an outside; with so generally prevalent prosperity; with so generally prevalent intelligence, there should exist conditions in which children are starved into permanent disease, underfed or improperly fed to the extent that constitutional disease of life-long permanence is produced, and innocent children doomed to be cripples for life and burdens upon themselves, upon their families and society.

The case which Miss Hamilton mention, of a child in which rickets had developed from improper and improperly prepared food—defective nourishment—and unwholesome housing and improper clothing, is a challenge to the most earnest interest of us all. That such calamities, preventable as they are, should exist in a Christian community, is a reproach to the direct influence of our Christianity and to the effective organization and application of civilized methods of dealing with sanitary and social problems.

Considerations such as these should lead us to a direct recognition of the indispensable value of the functions and work of the Health Association—not only of its splendid reparative work, but of its educative and preventive influence; and should impress the wisdom and necessity of closer co-operation with the Board of Health and the City Council, as responsible agencies for the improvement of sanitary conditions, and not only of these, but of every intelligent and patriotic citizen.

The most important point in these things is to get the public to think. If they think rightly, they will appreciate. If they rightly appreciate, they will act. If they rightly act, the Peterborough Health Association will be greatly encouraged and strengthened in its noble work; and a wider popular appreciation of the importance of the public health will inspire better directed effort and immensely improved results.

One can hardly think of a more inspiring stimulus to duty than Miss Edith Hamilton's last annual report. It should not only be read carefully, and as carefully heeded, but be preserved and frequently consulted, so that our sense of duty may be kept quick and our interest unabated, in one of the most vital interests of our civic well being, present and future.

THE PATRONAGE EVIL.

"The Veteran," the official organ of The Great War Veterans' Association, contains the following timely editorial:

When the Union Government assumed office, the electors of Canada were told on a hundred platforms that there was to be no more patronage, that political favouritism in appointments was to be as extinct as the dodo and that all lobbying and intrigue for posts were to be sternly frowned upon and discouraged. But to-day the Government has at its disposal a variety of appointments and as a result "where the carcase is, there are the vultures gathered together." Every train brings to Ottawa one or more supplicants for jobs, preceded, attended or followed by their sponsors and patrons. The whole brood establish themselves in the Chateau Laurier and from this base of operations, proceed to pester and infest every Minister to whom they can secure access. A Minister can scarcely greet an old friend with ordinary enthusiasm and courtesy, for apprehension lest he come in search of a job. Recently one Westerner, whose circumstances did not necessitate any change of occupation, cauled on an old friend who is now a Cabinet Minister. He walked directly into the room and after shaking hands, immediately announced that he had come for a job. The Minister's face assumed a funeral air and he wearily asked, "What sort of job do you want?" The reply cleared his brow, "I want the job of clearing out the Chateau Laurier, all those heelers and grafters who are looking for appointments and obstructing public business."

There is only one way of purging Ottawa of this selfish and greedy gang and that is by publicity. If the Cabinet are serious in their professions of eliminating all political favouritism in their appointments, they should make a public announcement that they will expose in the press, the names of all who apply for jobs, the names of the individuals who back them either by word of mouth or letter; they should even go the length of publishing letters received in support of the lobbyists. President Wilson once put a summary end to an insidious lobby at Washington by threatening such a course and Sir Robert Borden could do the same. Let him run in the leading newspapers, every day, a column with some such announcement as this, "Applicants for the post of Land Settlement Commissioner, Mr. Rowland G. Charles, of Skiddunkville, Sask. —sponsors, Senator Blether and Mr. Ballatstuff, M.P.; letters received from Col. Howley and the Rev. Mr. Bleating. Applicants for Railway Commission, Mr. Wallace Grafter, of Toronto—sponsored by Senator Trimble and Mr. Graball, M.P.P." Put every man who pesters Ministers with requests for a job in such a list and within two months there would be no need to publish it. But it is intolerable that the present state of affairs should be allowed to continue and that Ministers who are laden and harrassed with a variety of onerous duties and cares should have to waste their precious time in attending to the begging supplications of people who cannot get a decent living on their own initiative.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Before criticising the returned soldiers for howling down William Jennings Bryan in Toronto, there are three other parties who should be condemned first: The Dominion Alliance for inviting him, Bryan for coming to Canada, and the Toronto press for stirring up the agitation.

That was a peculiar case in police court yesterday when a man was arrested for not wanting to carry a rifle and fined because he was carrying a revolver.

Austria announces that she is "intervening militarily" in Ukrainia. Now wasn't that a nice mild way of putting it?

CHAIRMEN MUST ASK FOR TENDERS

Important Recommendation Passed by Finance Committee

At a meeting of the Finance committee of the City Council held last evening, it was decided to recommend that the chairmen of various committees of the Council be instructed to secure all supplies for their respective departments by tender if possible, except the emergency cases, when they should secure competitive prices from local dealers. tI ha slong been realized that the city pays the highest price for everything, and the foregoing recommendation if adopted will to a large etent, correct this evil.

Taxes Remitted.

A letter was read from City Solicitor Gordon saying the Quaker Oats Company had been granted remission of taxes upon application to the County Judge. The committee recommended that a cheque for $585.60 be issued in favour of the company in accordance with the order of Judge Huycke.

Oh! The Charm of Beauty

Let Stuart's Calcium Wafers Restore the Colour to Your Cheeks and Remove the Cause of Pimples, Black heads, Etc.

Every one envies a beautiful skin, just as everyone envies a healthy person. Unsightly faces filled with pimples, discolourations, blackheads, etc., are nothing but unhealthy faces due to blood impurities. Cleanse the blood and the facial blemishes disappear.

"Life to Me Now Is a Beauteous Thing, for I Have Made All Skin Troubles a Thing of the Past."

You must not believe that drugs and salves will stop facial blemishes. The cause is impure blood filed with all manner of refuse matter.

St uart's Calcium Wafers cleanse and clear the blood, driving out all poisons and impurities. And you'll never have a good complexion until the blood is clean.

No matter how bad your complexion is, Stuart's Calcium Wafers will work wonders with it. You can get these little wonder-workers at your druggist's for 50 cents a package.

FOOD { Conservation Substitution Production

This Column is Written in Connection With the Food Campaign Now Being Carried on by the Local Council of Women

The Central Committee for the carrying on of the conservation campaign met last Saturday afternoon at the home of the convener, Mrs. W. R. Morris. Practically every member was present and much enthusiasm was shown in discussing and planning the work.

The existing committees reported progress in their various lines of work, and a new committee for the purpose of stimulating interest in practical gardening, was formed.

This committee is to be known as "The Girls' Garden Service Committee," and will be under the joint convenorship of Miss Marion Rush and Miss Lilian Pearse. They intend to consult with any organizations of men who are planning for greater production, so that there may be no overlapping of effort, and the greatest efficiency may be reached.

No vacant lots should go untilled this summer, and if they do, somebody will be guilty of aiding the enemy, by barring the way to the very highest limit of production possible.

It is probable, too, that this committee may be able to arrange for help from among the girls for the local market gardens if they require it. A second new committee was formed for the purpose of holding demonstrations in canning, cooking, and other things which would aid in economy and thrift.

QUESTIONS.

The following questions have been received and will be answered in this column next Saturday:

1. What are some things which can be substituted for meat in a workingman's diet?
2. Is the "Cash and Carry" system proving a success?
3. Do the soldiers in England get sufficient bacon?
4. Have the men of Peterborough yet made any orgonized effort for securing and cultivating vacant lots?
5. Is it really necessary for Canadians to economize in sugar?
6. What is done with the bread, buns, cakes, pastry etc. left over in retail grocery shops on Saturday night?
7. Can garbage be utilized for feeding hogs?
8. Is the food controllership designed primarily to conserve food for Britain and the allies, or is it to cut down prices for the people of Canada?
9. Will seed left over from last year be of value for planting this year?
10. Could any substitute be used for wheat flour in making bill-posters' paste?

WHAT THINKING MEN AND WOMEN ARE SAYING.

J. B. W. Gardiner, in the "World's Work" says: "There was never a time when it was so necessary for a people to realize the truth, and to grasp the elemental facts surrounding our present-day life. Failure to do so, may involve us in future disaster, and drag down with us our present allies, who have given so generously of their riches and of their blood."

((From a statement made by the British Ministry of Food).

"War is making bare the world's cupboards; the granaries are being emptied, the flocks thinned, the herds butchered, the mines scraped. War is making everything dear, except human life; the destructive monster is consuming more food essentials than it is producing. Want follows hard in the wake of the chariot wheels of Mars, and the whole world is threatened with hunger, the menace of which will become greater with the prolongation of hostilities. Victory will go to the combatants who are best fed and nourished. The food question is now paramount. Food production is as essential to victory as food saving.

The spade and the hoe must befriend the rifle and the bayonet."

Dr. J. W. Robertson, Chairman of the Central Advisory Council to the Canada Food Board, says:

"If we all eat and waste this year and next year, just as we used to eat and waste, there will be still greater privation among our allies—privation which may mean starvation for women and children, and the weakening of our position in the war."

Mrs. Herbert Hoover says: "There is some individual who is unknowingly dependent upon you for life. It may be a soldier in the trenches; it may be a little child; it may be a peasant woman who will not have anything to eat next spring if you do not think of him or her, now."

SHEEP KILLED IN FREICHT CAR

Upper Deck of Car Collapsed and Animals Were Crushed to Death

LINDSAY, March 2.—Mr. Fletcher, a farmer from Bobcaygeon, met with a heavy loss Thursday, when fifteen sheep were killed while in transit via railway to Eldon Township, where Mr. Fletcher is locating.

It appears the car contained some forty sheep, while Mr. Fletcher built an upper deck to accommodate grain, furniture and other articles. On raching Lindsay the car was transferred from the C.P.R. to the G.T.R. Thursday the upper deck collapsed, fifteen fine young sheep being crushed to death. They were valued at $250.

MR. ALEXANDER MUNRO

R.R. No. 1, Lorne, Ont.

"For over three years, I was confined to bed with Rheumatism. During that time, I had treatment from a number of doctors, and tried nearly everything I saw advertised to cure Rheumatism, without receiving any benefit.

Finally, I decided to try 'Fruit-a-tives". Before I had used half a box, I noticed an improvement; the pain was not so severe, and the swelling started to go down.

I continued taking this fruit medicine, improving all the time, and now I can walk about two miles and do light chores about the place".

PRISONER CLAIMS TO BE PETERBOROUGH MAN

Man Giving His Name as J. A. Burnham Arrested For Issuing Worthless Cheques

Orillia News Letter: A couple of weeks ago the banks here were notified that one J. A. Burnham, had been issuing worthless cheques in St. Catharines, Galt and a number of Western Ontario towns, and gave a description of him. A man over seventy, six feet in height, and weight about 200 pounds. One of the clerks in the Dominion Bank spied such a man in the Gladstone House a day or two after, and notified the police He was placed under arrest by Constable Lee and held at the hotel. The following day was extremely cold and when the constable went out of the hall to an adjoining room to get warm, Burnham slipped out. It was a bitterly cold night, and stormy, and it was felt that he could not go far, but no trace of him could be found. On Friday word came to the police that he was stopping at Simcoe Lodge at Atherly, and Constable Lee went over and brought him back. Burnham claims that Peterborough was his former home and that thirty years ago he was a member of Parliament. He is a lawyer and says he is 78 years of age, and has been a widower for over fifty years. He was taken to St. Catharines on Monday.

The prisoner is travelling under an assumed name. John Burnham was a lawyer in Peterborough, and was also member of Parliament for East Peterborough back in the eighties. He has been dead nearly thirty years.

REMOVE CLOSED STALLS

London Aldermen Heed Request of Large Delegation.

LONDON, Ont., March 1.—At a meeting of the Finance Committee the Aldermen acceded to the request of a large delegation of citizens asking that all closed stalls be removed from restaurants. Young girls had been seen coming out intoxicated, it was stated, and various women speakers declared that such places were a menace, and created immorality.

VIMY

Won by Canada—Rebuilt by Canada

Our own Canadian boys thrilled the civilized world when in April, 1917, they stormed Vimy Ridge and pushed back the Hun.

Individual feats of heroism are too vast in number to be commemorated singly. Nor would our heroes desire us to waste money on useless monuments.

But every veteran of Vimy Ridge will approve of Canada's rebuilding Vimy as a token of our love to France and as an enduring memorial to the boys who fought and died there.

The Canadian Secours National obtained from France the privilege of rebuilding Vimy. The Secours National will receive the funds to carry on this inspiring work. But it is you and your fellow Canadians who will really rebuild Vimy, rehousing the homeless, providing for a destitute people at least a part of those comforts that we enjoy daily as our normal right. Don't hesitate. Though your contribution may seem small to you, it will loom large to the homeless!

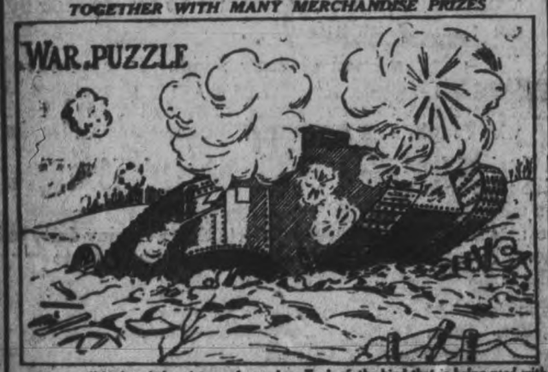
1st Prize, $80.00 in Cash. 2nd Prize, $40.00 in Cash
3rd Prize, $30.00 in Cash. 4th Prize, $25.00 in Cash
5th to 9th Prizes—Each $10.00 in Cash.

TOGETHER WITH MANY MERCHANDISE PRIZES



Above will be found the picture of a modern Tank of the kind that is being used with such success in the present war. At a glance the Tank appears to be all there is in the picture, but by careful scrutiny the faces of several soldiers will be found. There are 11 of these in all. Can you find them? It is no easy task but by patience and endurance can be accomplished.

You may win a cash prize by doing so. Many have done this as will be shown by the names and address which we will send you. If you find the faces mark each one with cut X, cut out the picture and send it to us, together with a slip of paper on which you have written the words "I have found all the faces and marked them." Write these nine words plainly and neatly, as in case of ties, both writing and neatness are considered factors in this contest.

This may take up a little of your time but as TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS in cash and many merchandise prizes are given away, it is worth your time to take a little trouble over this matter. Remember all you have to do is to mark the faces, cut out the picture and write on a separate piece of paper the words, "I have found all the faces and marked them."

WE DO NOT ASK YOU TO SPEND ONE CENT OF YOUR MONEY IN ORDER TO ENTER THIS CONTEST

Send your answer at once; we will reply by Return Mail telling you whether your answer is correct or not, and we will send you a complete Prize List, together with the names and addresses of persons who have recently received over Four Thousand One Hundred Dollars in Cash Prizes from us, and full particulars of a simple condition that must be fulfilled. (This condition does not involve the spending of any of your money.)

Winners of cash prizes in our late competitions will not be allowed to enter this Contest.

This Competition will be judged by two well known business men of undoubted integrity, who have no connection with this Company, whose decision must be accepted as final.

Upon receipt of your reply we will send a complete list of the names and addresses of persons who have won $4,120.00 in Cash Prizes in recent contests held by the publishers of this advertisement. Although these persons are entirely unknown to us, they are our references. An enquiry from anyone of them will bring the information that our contests are carried out with the utmost fairness and integrity. Your opportunity to win a good round sum is equally as good as that of anyone else, as all previous winners of cash prizes are debarred from entering this contest.

VETERANS PUT SALESMEN THROUGH THIRD DEGREE

Motor Mechanics Students in the M.H.C. Course inspect New Models

With life generally reduced to essentials, it was the "chassis," the bare skeleton of the motor car, stripped of its camouflage of supplementary elegancies designed to catch the eye of the rich, which held the centre of attention at the big Motor Show in Montreal while the luxurious limousine sulked in the corner.

In consistent contrariness it was the maimed soldiers with empty sleeves or crutches who displayed the keenest interest in the show while the barons of big business who placed their orders in other years at this time, were content to talk tires with an accessory man.

DOWN TO TECHNICALITIES.

The salesmen from the New York show accustomed to expatiate on the depth of the upholstering, foot warmers and time pieces added since the previous year for folk who would keep up with the "Joneses," found that they had to deal with technical near-experts when they faced the veterans.

The soldiers for the most part were students in motor mechanics under training in the Montreal Technical School, where the vocational re-education courses are being carried on under the Military Hospitals Commission. They knew a nut from a valve. They were interested in the interior workings. The chassis was the thing they wanted to see. In their courses they had taken motors apart and reassembled them. They knew all about carburetors, transmission and cooling systems. Their work had been chiefly on decrepit models but catalogues and "first aid" rendered to late models at various times had given them an insight into the advance of motor mechanics and they were eager to see.

Croup

"I don't think there is a more anxious time for parents than when their children have croup. Without they are prepared with Chamberlain's Cough Remedy they must wait for the doctor and listen to the choking, metallic cough and watch their little one gasping for breath.

"Granny" Chamberlain

You know the great danger of croup is the formation of a false membrane in the larynx, and until this is expelled relief cannot be obtained, and the spasmodic choking continues. Give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in frequent doses. It will loosen this membrane and cause the child to expel it by vomiting.

FOR BABY'S TENDER SKIN.

A child's skin is tender as well as beautiful and eczema may be caused by chafing of clothing, the use of poor soap, exposure to cold or sudden change of temperature. Probably no treatment for eczema has ever proven so successful as Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this applies particularly to baby eczema. This ointment is delightfully soothing, stops the itching and consequently prevents scratching. Gradually the sores are healed up, and the skin is left soft and velvety.

NO WASTE AT RECEPTION

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, March 2.—There is no food wastage allowed in the home of Lady Hearst, wife of the Ontario premier. This is her answer to the criticism following the annual reception of members of the Legislature and their wives and friends. She said that the entertainment was of the simplest nature, not a crumb of white bread being wasted.

The question of holding a reception this year was discussed at some length before it was held, she said. It was found to be the only way of bringing the out-of-town members together in a social way.

Lady Hendrie, wife of the Lieut-Governor, backs up the statement that there was no waste. She said that the members and their wives could not have been invited without giving them some refreshments. Lady Hendrie herself has thought it wiser to give up big entertaining, even the usual afternoon reception being curtailed this year.

At Government House Thursday neither soup, fish nor meat was used on the table.

NEW CREAMERY AT HAVELOCK

Farmers of the vicinity of Havelock and surrounding country, will be pleased to know that the new creamery which is being installed by Mr. Southworth, will be ready for business at once.

Mr. Southworth is putting in a modern plant. It should be of particular value to the farmers, as it will give them an opportunity of using the skim milk for the feeding of calves and hogs.

The plant will be in operation immediately.

NO MEETING.

There will be no meeting of St. John's Girls' Auxiliary on Monday next owing to the absence of Mrs. Conway, the president. Annual meeting on Monday, March 11th.

SAYS POPE IS NECESSARILY A NEUTRAL

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, March 2.—In a strong pastoral letter to be read in all the Roman Catholic churches of this Archdiocese to-morrow, Archbishop McNeill declares that the Catholic church is the only international power remaining unbroken in the present conflict of nations. The Pope is necessarily neutral, says Archbishop. Any other course would place millions of Catholics in the agonizing necessity of choosing between their country and their church.

THE PROBLEMS OF MIDDLE AGE

On Sunday evening the pastor of the George street Methodist church will preach on The Problems of Middle Age." A hearty welcome will be given to all and a special invitation is extended to men. Music will be rendered by a male quartette and a large male chorus. The men's Bible Class are aiming at an attendance of 100 at 3 p.m.

The marking of the Church Attendance Band of George Street Methodist Church will be resumed on Sunday morning.

QUIT SNIFFLING, STOP SNEEZING, CURE YOUR COLD NOW!

THOUSANDS OF CASES PROVE THE QUICKEST CURE IS CATARRHOZONE.

When germs attack the lining of the nose, make you sneeze and gag — when later on they infest the bronchial tubes—how can you follow them with a cough syrup?

You can't do it—that's all. Cough syrups go to the stomach—that's why they fail.

But Catarrhozone goes everywhere—gets right after the germs—kills them—heals the soreness—cures the inflamatmion—mtkes the Catarrh disappear.

"Nothing I ever used gives the warm, soothing sensation of Catarrhozone," writes Isabel Fry of Seguin Falls, Ont. "I was in a frightful way with catarrh of the nose and throat—bad droppings, hard breathing, bad breath and indigestion. Catarrhozone relieved at once and cured me thoroughly. It is invaluable in colds, sore throat and bronchial troubles." Not difficult for Catarrhozone to cure, because it contains the essences of pine balsams and other antiseptics that simply mean death to catarrh. Large size costs $100, and contains two months' treatment; smaller size, 25c and 50c, all druggists and storekeepers, or the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

REQUEST REFUSED

Premier Hearst Declined To Accede to Demand for Stronger Beer in Ontario

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

TORONTO, March 2. — Premier Hearst declined to-day to accede to the request of a monster reputation of Toronto and Ontario labour men to amend the Ontario Temperance Act so that beer of two and a half per cent. alcohol could be sold in place of the present strength of 2½ per cent. proof spirits.

Six thousand workmen and returned soldiers paraded.

A large delegation arrived this morning from outside points in the province to join the delegation.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally if You Eat Meat Regularly

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Splendid Variety Of New Spring Suits

All our New Spring Suits have received our personal attention and the materials, styles, trimmings, workmanship are the very best. Smart tailoring and individual self trims are their outstanding characteristics while a decided change in the skirts is noted—they are becoming much plainer and narrower.

ONE STYLE has the new bustle-like flare at the back of the coat below a shaped waist line, belt across the front and small buttons on back and sleeves form an effective trim. The skirt carries out the bustle effect in the coat, just a little more pronounced, then drapes into a plain rather severe front. This model is made of the finest quality gabardine in the new Russian green shade, and sells for ..... $35.00

TRICOTINE is being used extensively in the Spring garments and this beautifully finished cloth shows to best advantage in an attractive sand colored suit. The trim consists of beltings of the same cloth and small, smoked-pearl buckles with a modish shawl collar and bell-shaped sleeve. The skirt is plain with an unpressed pleated back and finished with a narrow belt. As the prices are to-day this suit is exceptionally good value at..... $45.00

ANOTHER style is artistically designed in a charming clay shade and is being sold at the moderate price of $29.00. This model is semi-tailored with a pleated back below the waist line and part belt. It has smart pockets and tailored sleeves and collar with silk over collar. The skirt enhances the beautiful lines of the coat by its plainness and neatness, the only trimming being a wide soft belt and set in pockets.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE CONCERT GREAT SUCCESS

Splendid Programme Given Under the Auspices of the Collegiate Glee and Dramatic Club Last Evening.

A CROWDED HOUSE

At the Collegiate Institute last night the Glee and Dramatic Clubs of the school presented a patriotic concert which, besides being exceedingly clever and interesting, was a great success financially. The hall was full to capacity at eight o'clock, and it was found necessary to bring in scores of chairs to accommodate the late arrivals.

The Programme.

The programme was very cleverly and originally carried out. Each number was announced by Mr. Stanley Braund, who in the costume of a page, made an admirable crier.

The first number, "O Canada," by a chorus of the Collegiate girls and boys, conducted by Mr. Brown, bore evidence of splendid training. The girls' voices were good and the collection of pretty faces and dresses afforded a most striking effect. Miss Isobel Baird was accompanist for the number.

The folk dances presented by a number of the Collegiate girls, and trained by the physical science teacher, Miss Lenore Sanderson, were well received. The quaint costumes worn by the girls represented a world of work and ingenuity. Miss Jessie Pollard accompanied this number at the piano.

Mr. Otto Gliddon was enthusiastically applauded and encored for his piano solo.

O sword dance followed by an encore of the higland fling by Gordon Yeaman, accompanied on the bagpipes by his father, Piper Yeaman, proved a most acceptable number.

Miss Isobel Baird, a clever little artiste, was enthusiastically received, and her brilliant rendition of most difficult piano selections heartily appreciated. Her selection was followed by a dance by some of the girls of the Collegiate in "The Dance of Spring." About 20 little girls took part in this artistic number and being exceedingly well trained and having an evident natural aptitude for dancing, besides the daintiest of costumes, the number was a pronounced success. Miss Isobel Donnelly, accompanist.

Too much cannot be said in praise of the Collegiate orchestra. The girl and boys are not only decidedly talented but marvellously trained by their leader, Mr. Otto Gliddon. The number rendered by the orchestra was one which called forth enthusiastic and well-merited praise.

Miss Emma Worth, whose voice has been much admired during the past couple of years, was heard at her best last night. Although a child in years she possesses a magnificent voice of unusual power and sweetness. Professor Renwick accompanied her.

A String of Pearls.

The clever little sketch 'A String of Pearls,' was most amusing and well presented, the cast all showing decided histrionic ability.

Mr. Madison—Doc. Young.
Ethel Madison his daughter—Lenore Lyall.
Peggy Madison—Clare Mason.
Aunt Phoebe—Vera Stock.
Anthony Waterbury— Simcoe Scadding.
The Maid—Miss Thorndyke.

The plot centred about an attempt of Ethel Madison to impress her lover Anthony Waterbury with her family's sense of the fitness of things. Her chief objection is the reception accorded to visitors by her old fashioned and brusque father and the manner adopted by the inmates of the house of opening the door to such. Her little sister Peggy volunteers, for the slight consideration of the loan of a string of pearls, to open the door to the latest and most stylish suitor, Tony Waterbury, impersonating a French maid. All goes well until Ethel neglects to fulfil her promise of the pearls, and Peggy gave away the whole scheme. All ends well, however.

The last number, the Soldiers' Chorus, from Faust, made a most successful conclusion to a charming evening.

A surprising number of people presented coupons for the New Universities Dictionary, saying as they did so that the twenty five supplementary dictionaries of special activities appealed to them with greater force. In one book, besides all the other aids to studying modern English, are special dictionaries of words used particularly as Americanisms and in automobiling, aviation, golf, baseball, commerce and law, football, lacrosse lawn tennis, war, music, photography, polo, wireless telegraphy and yachting. Besides these are dictionaries of atomic weights. Christian names, classical abbreviations, every-day allusions, foreign words and phrases, forms of address, most common abbreviations, noted characters in literature, state names and meanings and words of opposite and like meanings.

"FOOD, FUEL AND FAITH"

"The relation of Food and Fuel to Faith" will be the subject at Murray Street Baptist Church on Sunday evening. It may have been generally noticed thot the Director of Public Information at Ottawa has, with his Advisory Council, urged the ministers of Canada to give their co-operation by speaking on such subjects as the above. The Food Controller has this week addressed the Canadian Ministry, pointing out the spiritual nature of this particular work. The message of the Murray Street pastor will be one which should be heard by all who have the necessities of life during these days of the "reign of terror" and also by those who have them not. The full choir will render suitable music and Miss Florence Scott will be the soloist of the evening.

VITAL STATISTICS FOR THE MONTH

The vital statistics for February, 1918, show a decided slackening in the death toll in the city from the same month last year, also considerably fewer births and marriages.

| | 1918 | 1917 |
|---|---|---|
| Births | 26 | 36 |
| Deaths | 26 | 34 |
| Marriages | 11 | 16 |

The building permits have also fallen off considerably, two being issued in February, 1918, amounting to $1,230.00; 4 in 1917 amounting to $13,428.

REMIT by Dominion Express Money Order. If lost or stolen, you get your money back.

Daylight Saving Wave Is Gathering

Mayor Duncan received the following telegram yesterday morning from Mr. George Peacock, president of the Orillia Board of Trade: "If the Bill introduced in the Legislature by Major Hartt gets strong backing, daylight saving will be ensured for Ontario this season. If you agree with me that daylight saving will be a great boon to material and garden production, will you please wire your member or Major Hartt or the government expressing approval of the Bill."

Peterborough Council has already taken the action suggested by Mr. Peacock.

Make Your Own Cough Syrup and Save Money
Better than the ready-made kind. Easily prepared at home.

The finest cough syrup that money can buy—costing only about one-fifth as much as ready-made preparations—can easily be made up at home. The way it takes hold and conquers distressing coughs, throat and chest colds will really make you enthusiastic about it.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth). Pour this into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Shake thoroughly and it is ready for use. The total cost is about 55 cents and gives you 16 ounces—a family supply—of a most effectual pleasant tasting remedy. It keeps perfectly.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the inflamed or swollen throat membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough will disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, whooping cough or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract and is known the world over for its prompt healing effect on the throat membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

READY!

In the newspapers there recently appeared articles telling of the arrival of the American fleet at Queenstown—telling how the Officers of the English Navy had gone to Vice-Admiral Sims and asked him when he would be ready for action. Every American thrilled with pride at his answer—

"WE CAN START AT ONCE."

"READY TO START AT ONCE"—What a wonderful motto for every man, and yet how many of us realize that at any moment we may suddenly be called away from Business, from Home and Friends, from this world of ours to pass in to the Great Beyond.

Are you Mr. Reader, "READY TO START AT ONCE?" Have you made provision for those dependent on you should the call come?

"READY TO START AT ONCE." No man can do more—we cannot afford to do less.

If your loved ones are not already protected against such an emergency you had better act while you have the opportunity. To-morrow may be too late.

The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada will protect your Dependents providing you do your duty while the opportunity is yours.

WRIST WATCH TO MR. JOHN A. SMITH FROM CONGREGATION

The congregation of Knox church, of whose choir he has been a member for six years, presented Mr. John A. Smith with a farewell address and wrist watch in recognition of his valued services. The address follows:

Feb. 28th, 1918.

John A. Smith, Esq.,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Brother Smith,— The congregation of Knox church, Peterborough, have much pleasure in asking you to accept this wrist watch as a small token of their appreciation of the valuable services you have rendered the church at all times. The songs of Zion as sung by you have been the means of cheering many a heavy heart and helping them to a clearer outlook on life's pathway.

May the voice which the giver of all good gifts has bestowed on you help many a hero who is far away from home, and who is willing to give back the life that has been given him to raise this old world to a higher plane of civilization.

Mr. Smith was bass soloist at Knox church and has assisted in many concerts, at which his singing showed steady improvement. He will be missed by a host of friends, whose best wishes will follow him into the service overseas.

An Excellent Medicine For Little Ones

Baby's Own Tablets are an excellent medicine for little ones. They sweeten the stomach; regulate the bowels, break up colds and simple fevers, cure constipation and make teething easy. Concerning them Mrs. E. Quinn, Parame, Que., writes: "Baby was troubled with constipation and nothing helped him till I began using Baby's own Tablets. They are an excellent medicine for little ones." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

TO-DAY'S PRICES ON THE MARKET

The market prices this morning showed an inclination to coming down to normal.

Butter sold at 45c to 50c per pound.

Eggs 35c to 37c per dozen.

Chicken 25c to 26c per pound.

Potatoes came down from $2.25 to $1.90, and were apparently of splendid quality.

Apples sold at $2.00 and $2.50 per bag.

Dogs Were Shot On The Street

James Gates Carries Out Council's Order to Kill Dogs on Sight If Necessary

James Gates, official dog catcher, this morning introduced a new method of ridding the city of these renegade pests. Armed with a double-barrelled shotgun and a pocketful of cartridges, Gates followed in the wake of a garbage wagon that was cruising in the neighbourhood of McDonnel street. Inside of a couple of hours five dogs were disposed of by the shotgun route. As each canine was despatched he was hoisted into the garbage waggon to be transported to the crematory. Five dogs kicked the bucket yesterday and the total for the two days makes quite a respectable sum.

LOWER PRICES FOR FRESH EGGS

Number of Advances in Grocery Lines During the Week

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs appeared in Canadian Grocer this week:

Of prime importance in the grocery market is the possibility that ample supplies of sugar are likely to be forthcoming in the near future. Some of the refiners are now selling on the basis of free shipment for March and April. This indicates that supplies of raw sugar are near enough at hand to allow the refiners to be reasonably sure that they can make delivery in the time specified. The situation has been acute during the past two or three weeks, but there has been no actual want or sugar famine. Retailers and wholesalers have distributed their supplies judiciously and have made the stocks go round.

Of considerable interest to the consuming public is the fact that the United States Department of Food Control evidently intends to allow further supplies of margarine to come into the Canadian market. Some shipments came through during the week and permits have been issued for the shipment of additional consignments.

New Laid Eggs.

The market for new-laid eggs exhibited considerable weakness during the week. Production is mounting rapidly upward in Canada and the same state of affairs is reported in the United States. In the latter market a big decline was recorded during the week and Canadian importers were able to bring supplies of these eggs into Canada. With continuation of weather favourable to the hens there will in all probability be considerably lower prices for eggs in the Canadian market within the next few weeks.

Grapefruit is in very strong market due to the fact that steamers plying from Cuba are not permitted to carry this fruit as the tonnage is being utilized to carry the raw sugar to the United States markets. Price of grapefruit in the primary market doubled in price during the week. There are fairly good supplies of oranges in whole salers' hands at present, but consumption of this fruit is being curtailed.

A number of advances were recorded during the week, including those on rice, lima beans, cornflakes, rolled oats in bulk, shoe polish, stove polish, bluing, cocoanut, certain brands of soap, tacks, bi-carbonate of soda, Japan teas, jams. Business with wholesalers has been good during the week. Shortage of supplies is the great obstacle to trade at the present time.

Canada's militia department, the hospitals commission, and the other affiliated agencies seem dominated by that accursed phrase, CANADIAN TOMMIES. Canada wants nothing to do with the patronizing, supercilious insolence that classifies soldiers who do not hold commissions as a set of semi-human beings inferior to the soldiers who do hold commissions. The democracy that destroys military efficiency leads to the worst sort of autocracy. The snobocracy that fails to treat soldiers according to their claims on the nations justice and gratitude is the curse of Canada's military administration. That snobocracy has its centre in Ottawa and its offshoots in all the military districts in Canada. It is this theory that anything is good enough for the CANADIAN TOMMIES that permits a boy who went to the front at the age of eighteen to be treated as a deserter by khaki-clad authorities who were never at the front at all. It is the theory that anything is good enough for the CANADAIAN TOMMIES that drove Corporal Wm. Varley to justifiable but unavailing indignation at the spectacle of Canada bringing sick, maimed and wounded soldiers back to their own country in the steerage of a troopship.

TORTURE OF SCIATICA CURED QUICK! "NERVILINE" A SUCCESS EVERY TIME

Stops the Pain Quick—Acts Like Magic—Is Harmless and Pleasant

STOPS THE PAIN QUICK—ACTS LIKE MAGIC—IS HARMLESS AND PLEASANT.

Sciatica is the most severe pain man can suffer. The great sciatic nerve is deeply placed and you can reach it only by a pain remedy, as penetrating and powerful as NERVILINE.

The glory of Nerviline is in its strength—in its marvellous power of penetrating deeply. In severe pains such as sciatica and neuralgia, NERVILINE demonstrates its superiority over every other remedy.

Extraordinary pains, such as rheumatism or sciatica, can be overcome only by a remedy as extraordinary as Nerviline. In many lands it has shown itself to be the best for little pains, best for big pains, and best for all pains.

When one has acute rheumatic pains, stiff joints or a stiff neck, don't experiment — seek a remedy that cures. Like lightning in rapidity, as sure as fate in its certainty of relief, Nerviline can never be surpassed for the removal of pain, no matter what advance science may make. It is perfection in its line.

Do no trifle with ordinary or oily liniments, use Nerviline. Prove its efficacy—its the one liniment that rubs right into the core of the pain.

A large 25c bottle will cure the aches and the pains of the whole family. Sold by all dealers everywhere, or the Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

Wear Rubbers

For the Sake of ECONOMY

WHEN you consider the enormous advances in the prices of everything we wear and eat, the wonder increases that Rubbers cost so little.

As a matter of fact, Rubbers have advanced less than any other commodity of general use.

They are a very real economy for every member of the family.

On the grounds of HEALTH

RUBBERS mean dry feet—and when your feet are dry, and warm, you are safe from cold and grippe.

Everything points to an unusually wet Spring, this year.

Look to your Rubbers.

See that those you are wearing now are in good condition, or get new ones at once, and be ready for the Spring thaws.

Because of their COMFORT

SO insure foot ease and comfort by having the right Rubbers for your shoes.

Don't buy a shapeless pair that can be pulled over any boot—but get the exact style and shape for each pair of shoes you have.

Trim-fitting Rubbers are easy on the feet—wear better themselves—and make shoes wear better, too.

There's a style and shape for every shoe—for men, women and children—in these six brands of staunch, well-fitting Rubbers, carried by the leading shoemen:

"Jacques Cartier" — Jacques Cartier
"Dominion"
"Merchants" — THE MERCHANTS RUBBER CO. LIMITED
"Maple Leaf" — THE MAPLE LEAF RUBBER CO. LIMITED

For Ton Trucking Purposes

Ford
ONE-TON TRUCK

$750
F. O. B.
FORD, ONT.

Supplied as chassis only

BUSINESS men everywhere who have hauling or delivering problems to consider—whether operating a wholesale business, a retail store, or a farm—will welcome the arrival of the Ford One-Ton Truck.

Heretofore, the Ford user who wanted to carry loads up to a ton found it necessary to get one of several special attachments or extensions which were on the market. Now the standard Ford truck is available—a car that can withstand the drudgeries of commercial use, and yet lacks superfluous weight, and is easily handled.

The truck differs from Ford passenger cars in that it is specially designed throughout in proper pattern and strength for heavy-duty service. It has a final drive of the worm gear type, so that all gears are enclosed. Rear wheels are equipped with solid tires. Front tires are pneumatic. Standard Ford motor, transmission and ignition.

The largest truck and automobile company in the British Empire, with an organization of more than 700 Canadian dealers stands back of every Ford truck purchased.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

KITCHENER CAPTURE THE O.H.A. CHAMPIONSHIP AND THE ALLAN CUP

KITCHENER, March 1.—The Kitchener Hockey Club are the senior O.H.A. champions and Allan Cup holders by viture of their 3 to 0 victory here to-night in the final game, giving them the round by 7 goals to 4. A packed rink, representing practically all points of Ontario, saw the Dentals' senior O.H.A. champions for 1916-17, and Allan Cup winners, go down to defeat and to their first loss of the season, and also the title with it. The winners proved far more aggressive on the slushy ice, and on the play were easily the best team and deserved the honours. It is the first time in ten years that the John Ross Robertson Cup, emblematic of the senior title, has ever been held outside of Toronto, and it is twelve years since this town had the silverware.

In the first game at Toronto the teams played a four-all tie and it was generally conceded after the finish of that battle that the Kitchener team were the best. The appearance of Willard Box in a Dental uniform once more, was declared would change the issue, but it did not. The slushy ice did much to dull the edge of the Dentals' speed and although they did not tire as much as in the first game they were confronted with misplays at nearly every move through overskating the puck or slush stopping the puck or making it roll, setting at naught their puck-carrying ability.

The new champions, however, travelled with very little offsets in this regard and carried the attack in on Charlie Stewart with a consistency that earned the respect of all and a victory that stands out as unprecedented this season.

Kitchener showed splendid team play and generalship and forced their opponents to play a very strong defensive game to keep their forwards from bombarding their goal all the time. Hainsworth was not given half the work that Charlie Stewart was, but he took care of everything that came his way. Stewart, on the other hand, played an exceptionally strong game and earned much applause by his spectacular stops. Of the three goals that beat him, he had little chance to stop two of them, and the other was a fluky one that bounced over his stick from a bad angle. The Kitchener defence looked very good, especially in blocking rushes. They barely left their positions, while the Dental defence tried unceasingly to get through and score goals. Several times the Kitchener forwards caught either Sheldon or Laflamme missing and gave the Dental goaler heaps of trouble on these occasions. The two defences were very even on checking, but the Dental work division was best on offensive play.

Kitchener Line Strong.

The strength of the new champions lay in their forward line. They shot and stick-handled with a precision that was pretty to see, and back-checked with such ferocity, aided by the stick, that the Dental forwards were almost held in their tracks. Hillier was the star of the game and proved a fearless battler in spite of a heavy defence, while Parkes, his side partner, was none the less in the limelight. Solomon was at his best and took good care of Smylie until near the end of the game. Leroux was not used at all. Summing up the winners, they had the team play and the heart, and abetted by a home crowd were not to be denied. The championship is theirs. They won it fairly, and it is hoped that for the honour of the O. H.A. they can retain the Allan Cup against the Western challengers.

From the standpoint of the losers the ice did not enhance their chances.

FINALS.

Waddell 12, Fitzgerald 11.

Forced into an extra end to beat George Morrow, R. M. Waddell won the final game of the skips' bonspiel last night from Percy Fitzgerald with one shot to spare. They were rattling good games providing an interesting evening for the gallery.

The rinks with the score by ends follow:

The Finals' Score.

| | |
|---|---|
| Waddell .. .. ..... | 3*12*42*—12 |
| Fitzgerald .. .. .. ..... | 11*423—11 |

Waddell's draw that gave him the extra end game with Morrow instead of going through for the shot he seemed to be trying for nicked another of his stones and game him the single counter that beat Morrow's rocks that looked like safe shots. However, the game closed with all the decisiveness of a single shot. They are not infrequent endings. Kay was eliminated in much the same way on Thursday night.

The final went only ten ends to enable some of the players to catch the midnight train for Montreal. Fitzgerald drew away with an early lead, but Waddell's four in the tenth end followed by two more opened up a lead that could scarcely be retrieved in one end. Fitzgerald made a grand bid for it but three was all he got. However, he has more than justified his election to the position of skip by his work in his first season of responsibility.

Consolation Round.

Last night's games resulted as follows:

Archibald 11, Hicks 10.
Best 8, Eason 16.
Campbell 8, Oke 11.
Benor 5, Kay 15.
Thompson 9, Patterson 5.
McDermid drew a bye.

Play in the "Sights."

Archibald and Eason play to-night.
Oke 8, Kay 11.
Thompson 6, McDermid 11.
Morrow 16, Bowes 15.

The Semi-Finals.

The semi-finals and probably the finals will be played on Monday night, Kay meeting the winner of the Archibald-Eason game, and Morrow and McDermid.

PATTERSON TROPHY ARRIVES FOR VICE-SKIPS BONSPIEL

The silver trophy donated to the Curling Club by Mr. E. G. Patterson to be awarded annually to the rink winning the vice-skips' bonspiel arrived this morning. It could scarcely have reached here more opportunely, for the vice-skips' bonspiel opens on Tuesday night. Next week's programme of course depends upon the weather, but it is expected that a too warm spell will break at this early stage.

THE FIRST DRAW.

The Tuesday night draw for eight o'clock is as follows:

W. P. Adamson vs. C. S. Browne.
Geo. Hill vs. J. H. Connal.
L. G. Dobbin vs. R. L. Dobbin.
A. J. Grant vs. A. L. F. Hall
W. G. Menzies vs. J. T. McCabe.
C. H. Pennefather vs. J. C. Read.
W. G. Read vs. C. J. Seymour.

IT HAD TO COME!

The Brunswick just had to be. In every industry the law of evolution applies, and, sooner or later, perfection is attained.

Just as we have seen the automobile perfected in the last fifteen years, so those in the talking machine industry have watched for the "Final Phonograph."

The Brunswick Phonograph, manufactured by a concern with millions at its disposal, that has watched and waited for fifteen years, marks the highest development in the phonograph field.

The Brunswick IS "All Phonographs in One"—an unusual phonograph that has frankly adopted the best features of all, and with some added refinements of beauty and finish, is priced to you without the necessity of charging for discarded models or experiments.

IT PLAYS BETTER, LOOKS BETTER, AND COSTS YOU LESS.

Country Rousing To Hydro Demands

GUELPH, March 2.—Mr. T. J. Hannigan, Secretary of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association and the Ontario Hydro-Radial Association, has received from all parts of the country, encouraging messages in connection with the demand of the municipalities for the nationalization of the Grand Trunk and the amendment of the Railway Act, to prevent an electric company using the streets of any municipality without its consent.

Mr. Lyon Optimistic.

Mr. J. W. Lyon, one of the Hydro fathers, is busy every day in connection with the campaign. He also spoke hopefully of the outlook. "There is a healthy feeling in all parts of the country," he declared. "The Hydro Associations are getting strong support in their demand that the Grand Trunk be taken over and electrified by the Government. One message that came to the office of the general secretary stated that from the coal standpoint alone the nationalization of the Grand Trunk was a necessity. "If the Railways were electrified in this province," he said, "it would mean a saving of three and a half million tons of coal annually."

This will be one of the questions discussed by Sir Adam Beck in Peterborough next Wednesday night.

Ohio Man Is Modern Wizard

Discovers magic ether compound which loosens a corn so it lifts right out

Good news spreads rapidly and druggists here are kept busy dispensing freezone, the ether discovery of a Cincinnati genius, which is said to loosen any corn so it lifts out with the fingers.

Ask at any pharmacy for a quarter ounce of freezone, which will cost very little, but is said to be sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You apply just a few drops on the tender, aching corn and instantly the soreness is relieved, and soon the corn is so shriveled that it lifts out without a particle of pain. It is a sticky substance which dries when applied and never inflames or even irritates the adjoining tissue.

This discovery will prevent thousands of deaths annually from lockjaw and infection heretofore resulting from the suicidal habit of cutting corns.

A Clergyman's Wife Wants Women to Know Advantages of Internal Bathing

If women could only see the thousands of letters Dr. Tyrrell has received from grateful women in all parts of the world, thanking him for his wonderful invention for Internal Bathing, they would soon discard the medicine bottle and look to the cause of their trouble. 95 per cent. of all human ills are due to accumulated waste in the Colon or Large Intestine. Warm water, properly used with the "J. B. L. Cascade," will relieve the cause of your troubles and perfect health will follow.

A Winnipeg clergyman writes: "My wife is naturally sensitive about having her name appear in public print, yet is anxious that others should know what the 'J. B. L. Cascade' has done for her. It has really given her a new lease of life. For years she had been doctoring for Constipation, which became worse each year. Since using the 'J. B. L. Cascade', first about 4 years ago; she has not been sick a day, and has become robust and strong again. Should any person wish this letter confirmed, you are at liberty to give my name in private."

The "J. B. L. Cascade" is an invention perfected by Dr. Chas. A. Tyrrell of New York, and has done more during the past few years to restore health and lesser disease than all other means combined.

The "J. B. L. Cascade" is shown and explained at Warne Drug Co., Peterborough. Ask for Booklet explaining all about Internal Bathing and what it has done for others. It is free.

OBITUARY

FRANCIS McCLIGGOTT.

Francis, the little ten-year-old son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Michael McCliggott died last night after an illness of some months' duration. One sister, Madelyn survives. His parents pre-deceased him eight years ago.

Funeral from the home of his aunt, Miss Teresa McCliggott, 216 Woodbine avenue, to-morrow afternoon.

GOT RID OF BRONCHITIS.

Mr. W. H. Walker, Calmar, Alta., writes: "I am pleased to say that Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has done much good to myself, wife and children. My eldest girl, seven years old, had bronchitis and the doctor who attended her did not seem to do much good. We got Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine for her and she soon got well. We always keep this medicine in the house now ready for use and find that it soon cures coughs and colds."

APPLES ARE ROTTING WILL HAVE TO SELL

HALIFAX, March 2.—That much of the Nova Scotia apple crop purchased last Fall at a high price and being held in Toronto and Montreal is not maintaining its condition is the opinion of Roy A. Jodery, who has just returned from the Upper Provinces after endeavouring to dispose of large quantities of fruit. The holders of the fruit in those provinces do not wish to dispose of it at a loss but, he says, they were being compelled to do so because of many of the varieties threatening decay. It is Mr. Jodery's opinion that Winnipeg and the West will take care of a good many thousand barrels of the fruit now in the Annapolis Valley and that there will be a strengthening of the Montreal and Toronto markets after the stock there has been disposed of.

NO CONSTRUCTION BY C.P.R. IN 1918

VANCOUVER, March 2. — The C.P.R. is not going to undertake any construction this year, according to Grant Hall, Vice-President and General Manager of the railway, who was in Vancouver this week, but he said the company intended spending between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000 in maintenance and betterment.

U. S. OFFICERS SEIZE RUSSELL LITERATURE

Raid is Made on the Pastor's Headquarters in Brooklyn.

NEW YORK, March 2.—Agents of the United States army intelligence service raided the headquarters in Brooklyn of the Pastor Russell foundation, a reputed religious organization, and seized a number of books and papers. The literature was turned over to the Federal District attorney to determine if it contained seditious matter.

The raid was said to have been made in connection with the arrest recently of followers of the Russell sect in Toronto, where five persons were on trial charged with publishing and circulating a book called "The Finished Mystery," alleged to be seditious.

BRITISH ARRANGE WITH TURKS FOR EXCHANGES

BERNE, Switzerland, March 2.—British and Turkish delegates, who have been conferring here for some time in regard to a proposed exchang of prisoners, have closed their negotiations after reaching what the British delegates describe as "a satis factory arrangement."

The negotiations provide not only for the exchange of prisoners but also for a complete inspection of prison camps. Turkey has about 10,000 British prisoners, mostly Indians, while Great Britain has 50,000 Turks. It is expected that the agreement will be immediately ratified and within a fw weeks the first exchange will be made on Swiss soil, 1,000 British invalid prioners being exchanger for 1,500 Turks. After this exchange there will be an examination of all prisoners under a low schedule of disability by a mixed commission of Turkish and British doctors, this arrangement doing away with the delay incident to the employment of neutral doctors.

The negotiations with the Turks proved far more satisfactory than the British delegates had expected. The discussions were conducted in a conciliatory spirit on both sides. A number of supplementary agreements were reached regarding treatmnt of prisoners hereafter.

THESE WOMEN WHO WALK WITH THE SOLDIERS.

These women who walk with the soldiers—
Their sweethearts, mothers, or wives—
Are doubtless like all other women
In manners and morals and lives.

The women are average women,
The soldiers are average men;
But I see in their mien and their faces
What I never shall see again.

And, somehow, it seems to my thinking,
There's a difference, strange as true,
That envelops them like a halo—
Heroic, spiritual, new.

And over it all a glamour—
A pallor—a shadow—a flame;
I know not how to describe it,
But I know it is not the same.

Whatever it is, it enthralls me;
It sinks to my heart like a knife,
To see a young khaki-clad soldier
With his sweetheart, mother, or wife.

Oh, the plain and the beautiful faces!
Spirit-strange they seem to gaze,
As they walk through the streets of the cities
With their men, these Last of Days.

I think there's enough of my mother
Mixed in with my masculine dross
To know how I'd feel, were I woman,
And my sweetheart were Going Across.

—Leonard Doughty in N. Y. Times.

Disastrous Fire In Lakefield

The fire which destroyed J. G. Brown & Son's boat house, Lakefield, on Saturday morning, is believed to have been of an incendiary origin, there being no wiring or heating of any nature about the place. However, no clue to the guilty person is as yet established or motive for such an act.

The Loss.

The loss from the fire is considerably heavier than at first reported. The boat house, which was a wooden structure, was burned to the ground in less than an hour. The contents, also a total loss, included 75 new boats and canoes ready for shipment, and new launches, and an Overland car belonging to the Brown company. A launch belonging to Mr. A. L. Amys and a launch belonging to Mr. Harry Denne. All the boat house and contents was covered by insurance, except Mr. Denne's launch, which had, at the time of the fire, fortunately, no engine.

All that remains of the building is a mass of charred wood and twisted copper and iron from the launches.

WONDERFUL BILIOUS REMEDY ACTUALLY PREVENTS ATTACKS

There are two great causes of biliousness—they are constipation and defective liver action.

When Dr. Hamilton's Pills are taken, they are not only correct constipated bowels, but act upon the liver as well.

Quite unlike ordinary medicines which purge and give temporary relief, Dr. Hamilton's Pills remove the conditions which cause biliousness, and thus permanent cures are effected. No person who occasionally uses Dr. Hamilton's Pills will ever suffer from the headache, bad stomach or mild but thorough in their action; do day.

Knowing For Sure

Great Mangrove Swamps.

Mindoro, one of the larger islands of the Philippine group, is a province by itself and contains 3,933 square miles. It is distant from Manila a little more than 100 miles. Along the shores of this island are more than 30,000 acres of mangrove swamps, with large trees in practically virgin growth, conservatively estimated to yield 50,000 tons of bark readily convertible into approximately 17,000 tons of catch. Just why this growth should have remained untouched for so long is not explained.

Monks Carved Church Seats.

Church seats carved by monks are to be seen within the walls of the ancient church at Closlock on the borders of Monmouthshire. The edifice was built some eight centuries ago and for many years it had interesting relations with Lanthony Abbey while it was the monks of the adjacent monastery that did much of the beautiful carving within its walls. The fine tower is now so dilapidated that it must be speedily restored if it is to be saved from ruin.

Japanese Army Now Marching Into Siberia

And China Sends Her Troops Into Manchuria—Speculation in London as to Aims of the Allies

MANCHURIA THE BASE

LONDON, March 4.—Japan and China are dispatching troops into Asiatic Russia, the former into Siberia and the latter into Manchuria, Tien Tsin newspapers have announced, according to a despatch to the Evening News, received here. The despatch added that Gen. Tuan Shi Jui probably would be the Chinese supreme commander.

Manchuria the Base.

A diplomatic correspondent, presumably Japanese, discussing in the Chronicle, the objects Japan would have in taking action in Siberia, says that Manchuria would be the base of the Japanese operations. Vladivostok, he points out, is regarded as sufficiently protected by the Japanese fleet.

A compact force, this writer considers, would probably be dispatched to control the trans-Siberian railroad. A point at least as far in the interior as Irkutsk, he says, would be the objective, it may be assumed, as local action in Russian Manchuria is deemed inadequate.

Bolsheviki Busy.

The Bolsheviki has seized a pier at Vladivostok containing munitions and other goods valued at one hundred million rubles, according to advices received here. The same despatch declared the Bolsheviki threatened to requisition a foreign merchant ship for their use and that allied warships in the harbour were prepared to land marines.

Dining With the Private.

It has come at last—the offense of an officer dining in public with a private. It was bound to come, soon or late. The present writer, notes the London Daily Chronicle, met not long ago a private in uniform and two men in mufti. Of the two, one who should have been wearing the uniform of a second lieutenant, explained: "Private Blank, here, is my uncle. He is up for a visit, and according to regulations I ought not to be seen about with him. Since I joined the army I have grown hang out of my civilian rig, so I've borrowed a suit from the guv-nor, haven't I, dad?" "Yes, you have, and it's my best, you villain," answered the second civilian.

Mostly So.

"You're under arrest," exclaimed the officer, as he stopped the automobile.

"What for?" inquired Mr. Chaggins.

"I haven't made up my mind yet. I'll just look over your lights, an' your license, an' your numbers, an' so forth. I know I can get you for somethin'."

"What was it? The worst characters there?"

"No; the measles."

WEAPONS OF THE TEACHERS

Evil Methods Inspiring Fear in Hearts of Children Not Conducive to Best Results.

Power to produce fear is a poor weapon. The teacher who uses it is not doing his best work.

Snakes are feared by reason of their sting. So are lions and tigers for reason of their power to produce harm.

Fear is the weapon of an enemy. We do not fear our friends, nor can we fear anything that we love.

Evil is just absence of good; for it cannot exist where good is. And evil chooses fear for its weapon. Neither evil nor fear should exist in the schoolroom, says an exchange.

Good is always stronger than evil; love always stronger than fear. Why should teachers employ evil methods and inspire fear in the hearts of children when springs of love are bubbling up on every side?

There are smiles, and kind words, and kind thoughts, and deeds of kindness and—but the list is too great to complete. These inspire love, and as weapons are much more efficient than is fear.

And then there is faith! When good loses its trust in its ability to overcome, fear disarms and evil conquers.

An animal will not attack a man who has absolutely no fear of it. That is the secret of the lionTamer's power. Evil cannot defeat a man who is strong in good, and therefore he has no cause to fear evil.

NO CHANCE FOR THE GERMS.

Disease germs cannot live in rich, red blood. It is people in low vitality that fall victims to germ diseases. By using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food you enrich the blood, increase vitality and prevent disease germs from finding lodgment in your body. There's wisdom in prevention. It's easier to keep well than to get well.

Insects Carry Disease.

Our knowledge of the connection of insects with disease is a very modern acquisition. In his presidential address to the Washington Academy of Sciences, Dr. L. O. Howard noted that standard medical works of a score of years ago made no mention of the subject, but recent literature records 226 different disease germs as known to have been carried by insects to man or animals, 87 organisms as known to be parasitic in insects but not known to be transmitted, and 282 species of insects as discovered causes or carriers of diseases of man or animals. The transportation by wind of the body-louse, the carrier of typhus fever, is among late discoveries to which many writers have given attention. Tick paralysis is another novel subject, the disease occurring in Australia, Africa and North America, and 13 cases have been reported by a single Oregon physician. Progressive paralysis of motor but not sensory nerves follows the attachment of the tick. The disease is not infectious, and it has not been decided whether it is due to a specific organism or to nerve shock. Infantile paralysis is believed to be one of the diseases not carried by insects.

New Metal Discovered.

A new metal has been discovered in the Nelson mining district of British Columbia by Andrew G. French, and it has been named Canadium. It is allied to the platinum group and occurs pure in the form of grain and short crystalline rods, and also an alloy, and assays give three ounces or less to the ton.

Canadium has a brilliant luster, and, like gold and silver and platinum, does not oxidize when exposed to the air. It is softer than platinum and its melting point is a great deal lower. The physical and chemical properties of the metal are to be studied at the chemical laboratory of the University of Glasgow.

Canadium is the first new metal to be discovered in anything more than infinitesimal quantities since 1885.

USE CHOPSTICKS IN JAPAN

Old Custom Prevails Among Poorer Classes, While the Rich Have European Knives and Forks.

The use of chopsticks is general in Japan, except among the richer classes, who have adopted European knives and forks, and, to some extent, the European cuisine, London 'Tit-Bits' says. Small bowls of china or lacquered wood are the usual table equipment. After the various solid portions of the food have been lifted to the mouth with chopsticks the liquor remaining is sipped from the bowl. In the case of rice, which would be tedious to pick up grain by grain, the bowl is often raised to the mouth and the rice shovelled or pushed in with the chopsticks. It is also customary to pour a little tea into the rice bowl after it has been nearly emptied, and in this way the few remaining grains of rice are washed down as the tea is drunk.

At public places the chopsticks at each meal must be new; this is indicated by the fact that the chopsticks are made from one piece of wood and are left joined together, as were matches at one time. These new chopsticks are incased in a thin paper envelope, sealed at the end, and bearing Japanese characters advertising either the hotel or some firm that has furnished them free to the proprietor for the sake of the publicity thus gained.

Burglarproof Cage.

A burglarproof cashier's cage, located in a car house in an isolated district, has been installed by the Washington Water Power company, says the Electric Railway Journal. It is described as follows:

"The cage is sheathed with iron on the outer walls and the door, and the windows are provided with steel curtains, counter-weighted, which can be lowered for complete protection. In the bottom of each steel curtain is a trap or hinged box which can be swung inside or outside without at any time affording a direct opening into the room. Cash is placed in the trap on the outside, which is swung in to give the cashier access to it. A small peek-hole with sliding cover is provided just above the trapdoor."

"BEST MEDICINE FOR WOMEN"

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did For Ohio Woman.

Portsmouth, Ohio.—"I suffered from irregularities, pains in my side and was so weak at times I could hardly get around to do my work, and as I had four in my family and three boarders it made it very hard for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me. I took it and it has restored my health. It is certainly the best medicine for woman's ailments I ever saw."—Mrs. SARA SHAW, R. No. 1, Portsmouth, Ohio.

Mrs. Shaw proved the merit of this medicine and wrote this letter in order that other suffering women may find relief as she did.

Women who are suffering as she was should not drag along from day to day without giving this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial. For special advice in regard to such ailments write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of its forty years experience is at your service.

SELF DEFENSE

DEFEAT BACKACHE AND KIDNEY TROUBLE WITH ANURIC.

Many people in Canada have suffered from rheumatism and kidney trouble and have found Anuric to be the most successful remedy to overcome these painful and dangerous ailments.

The lucky people are those who have heeded Nature's warning signal in time to correct their trouble with that new discovery of Dr. Pierce's called "Anuric." You should promptly heed these warnings, some of which are dizzy spells, backache, irregularity of the urine or the painful twinges of rheumatism, sciatica or lumbago. To delay may make possible the dangerous forms of kidney disease, such as diabetes or stone in the bladder.

To overcome these distressing conditions you should take plenty of exercise in the open air, avoid a heavy meat diet, drink freely of water and at each meal take Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets (double strength). You will, in a short time, find that you are one of the firm indorsers of An-u-ric, as are many of your neighbors. Send Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., or Bridgeburg, Ont., 10c for trial pkg.

St. Catharines, Ont.—For several years I suffered with gravel and with uric acid, causing rheumatic pains. Nothing ever helped me until I commenced to take 'Anuric,' and the first thing I noticed was that the gravel had disappeared and has never made a reappearance. My general health has improved and I have a better nerve condition and my eyesight seems better, too. I used to have such dizzy spells at times I thought I would faint, but these no longer trouble me. My only regret is that I did not know of Anuric before."—Mrs. H. Marjoram, 124 Albert St.

"THE CLUE IN THE AIR"

A DETECTIVE STORY—Isabel Ostrander

"Then don't ask us any more!" he cried hoarsely. "We don't know who the man was or anything about it. Ivy may have had enemies, but good God! what have we to do with it?"

Mrs. Foxe." Terhune's voice was quiet but compelling. "You naturally know more about Ivy Collin's affairs and secrets than your husband. You were in her confidence and it will be of no avail to pretend you were not aware of her fears, for we have proof of the contrary. Who was that man?"

She dropped her hands with a little hopeless gesture.

Yes, it is true! She was afraid, mortally afraid, but she would never tell us who or what threatened her. We could not force her to speak. Believe it or not as you please. I can tell you no more."

Her trembling lips pressed tightly, as if a seal had been laid upon them, and she glanced swiftly at Terhune, but read his knowledge of her lie in the stern, unwavering eyes bent upon her. She sprang wildly to her feet.

"I will answer no more of your questions! If she was murdered, as you say, find the man for yourself! I know nothing, nothing."

CHAPTER XXIV.

"THE BURNISHED RIPE."

"A circus girl, was she? And somebody tried to get her with a revolver last spring! It looks like there was going to be no end to the new things cropping up all the time," Denny remarked later. "You never had a case to equal this in the old days on the force, Mac. I'll bet Terhune never saw the beat of it either!"

"True for you! When I went to him after leaving you this morning, he had it all cut and dried that Foxe was the guilty man, but he changed his mind when he saw how the two of them took the news of whom the dead girl really was."

"And they would not give in that they had an idea who the murderer could be?"

McCarty shook his head and took a fresh grip upon the cigar in the corner of his mouth.

"They would not. For two hours and more he hammered at them, first threatening and then persuading, but they stuck to the lie in a dogged kind of a way, although they knew well enough that we were on to them."

"But why?" Denny exclaimed. "That's what gets me. If they know, and they were true friends of the girl why should they want to shield the man that killed her? You'd think they'd be ready to fly at his throat."

"They don't want to shield him, you can be sure of that," responded McCarty. "They'll be two thankful people the day we lay our hands on him, but they don't dare open their lips. They know that after killing the girl he'll be desperate and stop at nothing, and they are in deadly fear of him. 'Tis that shuts their mouths. If he could get into a flat that was bolted and chained up, once, he can do it again, and they have no mind to turn informers and wake up some morning dead themselves."

"So that's it!" Dennis's hand fell heavily on his knee. "By golly, I'd like to know how he ever did get in! It begins to look as if he flew in like the girl said to you, Mac."

"What do you say if we go over and have another look at the Glamorgan?" McCarty rose. "It's early, not three yet. The coast is clear, for Grafton Foxe and his wife have gone to a hotel the same as Mrs. Doremus. Mrs. Foxe said she couldn't stay another hour in that room where Ivy Collins was killed, with the very window staring her in the face. You can't blame her but I guess that is not the only reason. They're running as much fr fear of the living as thought of the dead. It will do no harm to look over the ground again, and I've a mind to examine those locks and bolts myself."

"I'm with you." Dennis knocked the ashes from his pipe and stuck it in his pocket. "I thought we were pretty good in my line of work, at breaking into places that was closed tight, but this fellow must be a bird."

"Not one that can fly, though," McCarty remarked, as they started across the town. "If he can find a way to get in we ought to be able to do the same thing, but it has got me guessing."

"And what does Terhune think about it now?"

"He's hotfoot after the truth of that shooting in the circus last spring and he is sending a couple of men out west on the midnight train to follow up the show and get the particulars. I don't know but he is right at that. If somebody tried to get her once and failed, they might try it again, but the heart of them must be black with hate."

"People in a circus are all like one big family," Dennis observed. "They will scrap among themselves, but they'll stand up together against outside interference. Terhune's men will have long slow work cut out for them, I'm thinking."

"If he can't induce that Foxe couple to talk, there is nothing for him to do but try to trace back through the girl's history for a clue to some one who had reason to wish her dead" returned McCarty. "He won't believe there is anything in what she tried to say to me. I'd like to find that young fellow who helped me to carry her in, I can tell you that. I can't get him out of my head and the way he looked when I saw him in the crowd outside the Quimby house on the day of the funeral."

"The fellow with the funny long face and big flapping ears, like a clown? I remember you telling me of him."

Dennis suddenly seized his friend in a dexterous grasp, and swung him out of the path of a passing motor. "Do you want to get run down entirely? Stopping in the middle of a street and staring like a rube!"

McCarty was indeed staring as if a light had dawned upon him, and now he chuckled softly, ignoring the rebuke.

"Denny, our friend Terhune is welcome to all his little registering and charting machines as long as I have you along with me. When it comes to hitting the bull's eye blindfolded, you beat any fancy shot going!"

"And what is it now?" demanded his friend. "I've no notion at all of what you are getting at, but mind where you are going or you'll land in a hospital!"

They reached their destination but McCarty walked past the entrance. "Come on by it till I show you something," he said. "Between the Glamorgan here, and this apartment house next door there is a narrow space, a kind of a court like. No one could have come over the roofs because the Glamorgan is only eight stories high, and the next building is twelve."

"There are windows in both buildings opening on the court, though, and they are level with each other on every floor," Dennis commented. "A fellow that was spry enough could easy jump from one to the other. That is what you are getting at isn't it? Even so, he would not land in Foxe's apartment, but in one of the smaller ones on the side of this house, and he had no accomplice in the building, had he?"

"None that has been doped out yet," replied McCarty, "and if he had, that wouldn't give us a hint as to how he got in the apartment where he did the murder. I just wanted to get an idea of the outside surroundings of the house."

"What joins us around on the avenue side?" Dennis ask'd.

"Another apartment even higher than this one. We'll have a look up on the roof when we get through inside."

"Say, how did Quimby get out that night?" Dennis paused on the steps. "I know he hid till after you and the inspector had gone, but I thought the house was under surveillance by that time, and every outlet watched. Nobody saw him go did they?"

"No, but he told me last night. He stayed under cover until three o'clock in the morning and then the superintendent sneaked him through the coal cellar to a little door connecting the building with the one back of it. 'Tis what you might call a lively house, with tenants that keep all hours and no one remarked him walking out of the entrance at that time of night. Both that and the Glamorgan used to be owned and run by the same person, that's why the door is there."

"Did his stepdaughter seem scared of Quimby still? I'll bet he could have killed her himself, all over again," remarked Dennis as they entered.

Regular Inspection Must be Deferred

So many skilled telephone workers have gone overseas that we have found it impossible for the present to keep up the practice of making a regular inspection of all subscribers' telephones.

¶ It is important, in the interests of your service, that such defects as broken mouthpieces, frayed cords, etc., be reported to us promptly.

¶ We therefore ask that subscribers promptly notify the "Trouble Department" (no number necessary) of any such defect in their telephone equipment so that we may remedy it promptly and protect the service.

¶ Your kind co-operation will be appreciated.

Best Kind of Play is Work.

One of the best kinds of play is work. Many of the elements of play enter into work if it is performed in the right spirit. The most satisfying forms of play are those in which interest is excited; competition, with desire to succeed and accomplish some definite end, makes the game worth playing. Work is fatiguing and distasteful when it is lacking in these elements.

Take Pains.

Genius has been defined as an infinite capacity for taking pains, and talent, which is a sort of second cousin of genius, has the same characteristics, observes an educator. One who will take pains enough will meet with a measure of success. And no one who belittles the need of patient, plodding work is likely to succeed, no matter what his endowments.

Rules Only for the Weak.

It is one of the weaknesses of mankind that it is forever establishing rules, programs, formulae. They serve their purposes for the guidance of ordinary minds. But the pioneers of thought ride rough-shod through the rulers. They gain the ends they desire by refusing to be directed by what someone else has thought before them, by what teachers have insisted upon as binding.—Exchange.

KIDNEY DISEASE OVERCOME.

Mr. James Prouse, cattle dealer, Sheho, Sask., writes: "For about ten years I suffered from kidney disease; at times was bad with backache, and derangements of the digestive organs. During that time I was treated by four different doctors. One day I read in Dr. Chase's Almanac about the Kidney-Liver Pills and began to use them. Altogether I used six boxes. All I need say is that I feel well now and attribute this condition to the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

HEART WAS BAD NERVES ALL GONE

Very important it is in this age to have a clear cool head, a strong heart and steady nerves.

Too much rush and bustle, work and worry, fall to the lot of women attending to their household duties and social obligations. The constant strain under which they continue day in and day out will soon shatter the strongest system. Before long the heart gets weak, flutters and palpitates, the nerves become unstrung, you start at the least sound, the pulse becomes weak and irregular, then finally comes physical breakdown or nervous prostration.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the remedy you require to strengthen your heart and steady your nerves.

Mrs. Jackson, 67 Bolivar St., Peterborough, Ont., writes: "Fifteen years ago I was so bad with my heart I could not walk across the house, my nerves were literally all gone, and I was frightened at my shadow. I commenced to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and was soon able to do my own work. I have told dozens of people about them, some as bad as I was, and to-day they are also doing their own work. If more people would take them there would not be so many weak hearts."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Daddy, Alias Carrots

By Jane Osborn

(Copyright, 1917, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Bab was sitting darning socks in the mellow glow of the living-room table-light when Babbette appeared at the door. Bab in a gray frock with a white fichu, hair parted in the middle and spectacles on her little nose was demure, Babbette was resplendent, captivating. She made one breathe fast just to look at her, standing there with round, bare arms and round young body. Steve, reading his paper and sitting opposite to Bab at the table, swallowed hard and blinked.

"What's the matter, dear," Bab asked, taking off her glasses and looking at him anxiously. "Doesn't Babbette's dress look pretty? I copied it after one in a shop window on the avenue. We didn't think it looked homemadey."

"Oh, that's all right—it's immense," Steve hurried. "That's not the trouble. I was trying to grasp the idea that, that—that girl there is my daughter."

Steve Nowell rose with his hands in his pockets and paced the room meditatively for a minute, while Bab busied herself fastening the buttons of Babette's gloves, tucking in a lock of hair here and loosening a few there. Steve paused when he arrived before the mirror over the mantlepiece, peered in and then, striking a match which he took from his smoking-coat pocket, lighted one of Bab's candles—for ornament only—that stood in brass sticks on the mantlepiece shelf. He held this up to the side of his face and peered in. No, there was not a gray hair in the bushy shock of auburn, scarcely a wrinkle, unless one could call those few crows' feet—the sort that gather, Steve assured himself, even on the faces of young men who are accustomed to smiling with their eyes.

He blew out the candle and clenched his right-hand fingers into a fist and, with his left hand on his right biceps, felt his muscle. Then he straightened himself up to his full six feet, stood on the balls of his feet and inhaled as if to test his lung capacity.

"It can't be," he told himself. "I'm not ready to be that girl's father—I'm too young. I'm only a boy—and before many years I'll be a grandfather? He looked at Bab sitting so contentedly by the lamp. She had resumed her darning and Babbette was standing reading Steve's paper. Yes, Steve reflected, Bab was content to take a back seat. What was it to her that old age had been forced upon them and that for all their days and nights to come they must sit there reading papers and darning socks or, if they did go out, be mere spectators at a play or opera?

"What on earth's the matter with you dad?" queried the eighteen-year-old daughter, glancing up from the paper and then, not waiting for him to answer, "I wonder where Goggles can be? I was sure I'd be late and here he is keeping me waiting," she went on,

"Goggles, who's Goggles?" queried Steve.

Bab and Babbette looked up in surprise. "Why Goggles is Babbette's new friend with the eight-cylinder. It makes it so nice for Babette."

"Which—Goggles or the eight-cylinder?" queried Steve.

"Don't be silly, dad," said the 1st splendent young thing, as she folded her warm arms about Steve and kissed him on the chin in a thoroughly daughterly fashion. "I'm not a bit interested in Goggles—but anyone would dote on his motor."

Steve caught the faint perfume—intoxicating exotic—that clung to his daughter's evening frock. When he had courted Bab, he recalled, girls used some simple scent—violet or lily-of-the-valley. Those were simple days. What a thing it must be to be young, Steve thought, young when girls used perfume like that—redolent of strange Eastern romance, Persian gardens in the moonlight, Indian temples and tropical islands. Steve's impression was not distinct but it was none the less vivid. And Goggles, just because he had an eight-cylinder, could share the society of a goddess like Babette. Steve rubbed his eyes as if to wipe the film of twenty years of married life from them. What a thing to be young again! he thought. Why, he was young. People often told him he didn't look thirty, and if it weren't for that lovely creature there calling him dad he might sometimes forget that he was nearer to the half century mark.

Bab had run off to the telephone bell, and came back with the color of her pink and white cheeks heightened with rage.

"Isn't it perfectly horrid?" she stormed. "It was Goggles and he's at Nellie Drew's and telephoned to say they'd stop for me. He says he was at Nellie's for dinner and Shorty Tucker, who was going to take Nellie telephoned he had been detained and couldn't bring Nellie, so said he would have to bring Nellie and they'd stop for me. Why didn't he tell me he was going to have dinner there? Nellie's an old cat—I oughtn't to say that of one of my own fraternity sisters, I know, but it was downright mean—" Babette stopped suddenly and a look of inspiration flashed across her face.

"Dad," she cried seizing him in her strong arm. "You don't look thirty and you're a lot better looking than any of the other boys. You take me and don't let them know you're my father. None of these boys know you and the lights won't be bright. I'll call you Carrots 'cause you've got auburn hair and it's a fad you know to call the boys some such name. Carrots Clay—that's a nice name. No, you don't have to dress—come just as you are and while you're putting on your hat and coat I'll just telephone in case Goggles and Nellie haven't started and tell them a friend of mine who happened to be having dinner with me is bringing me, and if they have started and do come, why, mamma, you tell them that I started on with a friend of mine who was anxious to take me, and tell them you're so glad it happened just as it did because this friend of mine was anxious to take me. Dad, you're a peach. Mammy, don't be lonesome—there's a dear."

Carrots Clay—alias Bab's Daddy—alias just plain Steve Nowell—did as he was told, filled meanwhile with a thrilling consciousness that he was to be young again. He wondered why Bab hadn't asked him to don his evening togs—perhaps young men didn't dress for small dances in Babbette's set. At any rate he would dance with the girls and they would all be young and warm and glorious like Babbette. It would be a renewal of his youth.

only a youth more youthful and thrilling than his own had been because these girls of the present generation were more magnetic, more primitive than girls had ever been before. Just for a night he would be young and then—he winced a little at the idea—he would come back and spend the rest of the nights beside the table with Bab in the gray dress with the capable white hands.

Having no eight cylinder Carrots took Babbette to the house where the party was to take place in the street car and so fully was he taking the part thrust upon him, that when passengers in the car looked with unfeigned admiration at the beautiful creature beside him, it was with the pride of a youth for a maiden, and not with fatherly pride, that he received the attention.

"It's funny I didn't have to wear evening dress," Carrots remarked. "Don't they usually for dances?"

Then it was that Babbette explained that it wasn't to be a dance he was taking her. It was to be a fraternity meeting, and all Carrots and the other boys had to do was to sit in the downstairs reception room—they could smoke if they wanted to—while the girls had the meeting upstairs. It wouldn't be more than an hour or so and if there were any refreshments left they sometimes sent them down to the boys. The boys usually waited right there instead of going home in the interval, because sometimes the meetings adjourned later and sometimes earlier.

At half past nine that night Carrots had been sitting in a chilly, dimly lighted reception room for an hour. From above came the delirious, intoxicating peels of laughter and music from girls like Babbette. Beside him sat Goggles. In a straight-back chair across the room was Shorty, who had come late with the hope of taking Nellie home eventually in spite of Goggles. Other dejected young men sat on other straight-back chairs.

They had talked in monosyllables from time to time, but not to him. They seemed to regard him with suspicion and distrust. Eventually Goggles broke the ostracism. "You're new at this, aren't you?"

Carrots said he was.

"You get used to it," commented Goggles. "You got to do it—if you don't somebody else will. There's always somebody else waiting—just as you were tonight—to take your place, and that always makes you sore."

"It must have been nice," mused Shorty from across the room, "in the days when our fathers and mothers were young—before girls had fraternities and things. This way, for every dance they let you go with them you have to sit out an evening like this. But you have to do it."

"Must be nice to be an old fellow and to have the girl you've been sitting around for all to yourself—sitting somewhere near you while you are home and comfortable." That was from Goggles.

"You bet," agreed Carrots.

An hour later Carrots and Babbette found Bab still sitting in the glow of the lamp. A neat pile of socks and Babbette's gay silk stockings were before her. Her eyes were heavy, but she smiled radiantly at their return. Steve pulled off his hat and before taking his coat off, rushed to her, lifted her to her feet and held her sleepy form to him. "Bab, you're the dearest and sweetest in the world. It's great to be forty-five."

THEY GAVE HER VINOL FOR BRONCHITIS

And it Cured Her—Read Mrs. Thayer's Letter

West Somerville, Mass.—"I suffered from a severe attack of bronchitis, with a terrible cough, no appetite, no energy, no strength and loss of sleep. The usual remedies failed to help me, but they gave me Vinol and it restored my appetite, stopped the cough and built up my strength so I am able to do my housework again."—Mrs. P. B. Thayer.

We guarantee Vinol for chronic coughs, colds, bronchitis, because it is a constitutional cod liver and iron remedy. Formula on every bottle.

Would Tunnel English Channel.

A machine for tunneling the English Channel in 35 days has been brought to the attention of the British government by Mr. John K. Hencken, a civil engineer of New York, who states that he has official approval of his scheme. The scheme contemplates boring four tunnels by means of eight machines that will cut through earth and rock at the rate of 100 feet per hour, and provides not only for a trackway in each tunnel, but a driveway, along with motor lorries could be driven from England to the supply bases in France. Mr. Hencken asserts that he can have the tunnels complete and ready for operation within a few months' time, and declares that, should the scheme be caried through, it would release most of the shipping now used between England and France.

Jane Austen.

Andrew Lang's rhyme on the "Life and Letters" plague would not apply to Jane Austen, the centenary of whose death we celebrated recently, says the London Chronicle. Sixty years passed away before any biography of her appeared. Once the ball was set rolling, however, it soon gathered force, and the number of "Lives" of that most modest of authoresses which have appeared since have amply made up for the previous neglect. So little did Miss Austen like publicity that Mr. Austen-Leigh has told us that during her lifetime "few of her readers knew even her name, and none knew more than her name," and on her death in 1817 there was no mention of her or her writings in any of the periodicals of the day.

White House Closed to Visitors.

So strict is the rule against admission to the White House that the "special-card" hours have been abolished. Heretofore it has been possible for a member of congress or an official of the government to obtain a card from Secretary Tumulty admitting a constituent or friend to the lower floors of the mansion. This is now absolutely forbidden, and there are no exceptions. Those surrounding the president will take no chances.

You Look As YOU FEEL

You know well enough when your liver is loafing.

Constipation is the first warning; then you begin to "feel mean all over."

Your skin soon gets the bad news, it grows dull, yellow, muddy and unsightly.

Violent purgatives are not what you need—just the gentle help of this old-time standard remedy.

Mercurius.

In the mythology of ancient pagan Rome Mercurius, or Mercury, to give the English form of the Latin name, was the divinity of commerce and gain, and was identified by the Romans with the Greek Hermes. A temple was built to Mercurius as early as B. C. 495, near the Circus Maximus, and an altar of the god existed near the Porta Capena by the side of a well. His festival was celebrated on May 25, and chiefly by merchants who visited the well near the Porta Capena to which magic powers were ascribed.

IRRITATING FORM OF ITCHING PILES

A SOURCE OF CONTINUAL WORRY AND ANNOYANCE—SLEEP AND REST IMPOSSIBLE UNTIL RELIEF IS OBTAINED.

Bridgetown, N.S., February 2.—All classes of people are subject to piles, but especially those who are exposed to dampness. Teamsters, farmers, railroad men and laborers suffer greatly from this distressing ailment.

While there are plenty of remedies recommended as a treatment for Piles, Dr. Chase's Ointment is the only actual and guaranteed cure. It is truly wonderful how the merit of this preparation has become known throughout this continent and Europe.

But when a person has endured the torture of piles, the itching, stinging sensation, the sleepless nights of misery, the annoyance during the day when going about the daily work, he feels grateful for the relief and cure brought about by Dr. Chase's Ointment and does not forget to recommend it to his friends.

Mr. E. G. Langley, Bridgetown, N. S., writes: "I have much pleasure in recommending Dr. Chase's Ointment. For about fifteen years I was troubled with piles and all the so called remedies that I used brought me no relief. At last I tried Dr. Chase's Ointment and am glad to say that it has made a complete cure. It is nearly twenty years ago since I was cured and I have never been troubled with piles since. At one time I was away from home travelling a great deal, and I always carried a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment with me. Ever since I was cured I have been recommending it to everyone whom I knew to be troubled with piles."

Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

CITES FOLLY OF WORRYING

Retired Business Man Offers Some Good, Homely Philosophy Based on Long Experience.

A retired business man now living in a soldiers' home writes the following letter to a friend in the dry goods market, and its homely philosophy and confidence will be found refreshing:

"Since I saw you I have entered on my seventy-seventh year. My experience has taught me the folly of worrying over events I cannot control. I have much reason for gratitude, as I have been allowed to live long. My lines are cast in pleasant places, and that is more than many a millionaire can truly say. I have little sympathy for people who mourn their former prosperity, just making themselves miserable and their hearers uncomfortable.

"My five months' captivity in a rebel prison showed me how little, after all, a person requires to be perfectly happy and contented. One good square meal to the prisoners would have converted the prison yard into a picnic grove. . . . Even if you may meet with ingratitude, your kind deed is recorded somewhere, and will be remembered. I must stop prosing, perhaps you will think I am getting into my dotage."—New York Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin.

Birds Help Farmers.

Birds are almost as busy as bees, and their work in increasing crop yields is highly important, says the Firesade. One of the cheapest and most effective ways to fight insect pests that annually take crop toll estimated at $800,000,000 is to aid in the preservation of bird life. Such worms and bugs as infest our gardens are favorite food for bluebirds, robins and many other kinds of birds. Birds also eat thousands of weed seeds.

True Economy.

"Pa, what is a practical economist?"

"A man who can get a dollar's worth of anything for a dollar, my son."—Life.

Nature's Error.

Sufferer writes us that if nature had known what she was about when she made man, she would have given him two noses—one to have a cold in and one for general utility. Then you could get the first one amputated (as in the case of tonsils or an appendix) and live comparatively happily ever after. We will call nature's attention to it.

PIMPLES AND RUNNING SORES

Would Hold Head Down Face Was Such a Sight

Pimples are caused by the blood being out of order. Those festering and running sores appear on the forehead, on the nose, on the chin and other parts of the body, and although they are not a dangerous trouble they are very unsightly to both you and your friends.

There is only one way to get rid of this obnoxious skin trouble, and this is by giving the blood a thorough cleansing by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters.

This sterling remedy has been on the market for over 40 years, during which time we have received thousands of testimonials as to its curative powers over all skin diseases.

Mrs. Victor G. Fry, North Battleford, Sask., writes: "I used Burdock Blood Bitters when I was about eighteen. I was so bad with pimples and running sores, that when I went down town, I would hold my head down when I would see anyone coming, my face was such a sight. I got two bottles, and my face began to clear, so I kept on until I had a beautiful complexion. I have recommended it to everyone who is in a run-down condition, as it builds up the blood, and when the blood is All the face is clear."

ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL

CHAPTER VI.

George had no engagement, and immediately after dinner he called Mrs. Loring and accepted her invitation. It was my first social affairs of any kind in Moreland and I wanted, naturally, to look my best. George was very particular, almost finicky, as to my clothes. He had excellent taste and had, himself, supervised the making of an entire new wardrobe after we had settled in our home after a long wedding trip.

"Oh, what shall I wear?" I exclaimed, all excitement at the idea of going. "Do decide for me!"

"Wear your white crepe. But what you wear doesn't make so much difference as how you appear. I hope you aren't going to act like a child. Do cultivate poise. A woman without it, especially in society, is utterly impossible."

My lips quivered. I turned away to hide the tears. Every bit of pleasure in the thought of going to the dinner was gone, dispelled by his tone and words. I couldn't help being young nor being born and brought up in a small town. And I wanted so to please him. But I took a book and said nothing more anent the dinner. But it did't seem quite fair to me— the way George talked. I would do my best that he should't be ashamed of me, I thought, but perhaps he would be, even so. I knew so little of the world, his world. At home we were all boys and girls together. No one thought of criticizing another because they showed their delight or expressed pleasure in a natural way. But I must learn George's way—I must.

I dressed very carefully the next night, and when I had finished was really pleased with myself.

"Will do?" I asked George, who was putting on his coat.

"Yes, nicely," he said after looking me over critically. "There is something for you in that big box in the hall. Might as well get it now." And, going to the stairs, he leaned over and called to Annie to bring it up.

I had noticed the box but I was fast learning not to ask questions. That it held anything for me, I never dreamed.

George cut the heavy string with his knife, disclosing many layers of white tissue paper. These I quickly pulled away and then saw the loveliest evening coat of pale blue—my colour. I was perfectly delighted, as any girl of my age would have been, and threw my arms around my husband's neck and thanked him in extravagant terms for his gift. It was his thought of me, as well as the beauty of the cloak, which made me happy.

"There, that will do!" he said after a minute. "You are mussing your hair." But even his cool tone could not dampen my joy. He had thought of me.

"Aren't you going to put it on?" he asked after a moment.

I threw it over my shoulder and marched up and down before him, then stopped before the cheval glass and admired myself.

"It is perfect, absolutely perfect. But you have such good taste always," I told him.

He seemed pleased, and flattered me by saying it was very becoming.

"I want you always well dressed, Helen. I can afford it, and I don't want you to go around looking like a frump, or a back number. When you need clothes, tell me."

We started for the dinner chatting pleasantly. I thought John — the chauffeur — had been drinking; but once before I had angered George by saying so. Consequently, I said nothing. I would be very careful not to spoil the spirit of companionship so unusual.

So I snuggled down in my new coat although it was early in the fall, and still quite warm, and was happy. It takes so little to make us either happy or miserable when we are very young.

"Careful there John!"

George's sharp exclamation made me sit up very straight. I started to say something anent smelling liquor on his breath, but thought myself. He had slowed down appreciably.

"The fool! he missed that car by only a hair!" George muttered.

"He mustn't spill us to-night and spoil my new coat," I said, smoothing its satin surface.

The words had scarcely left my mouth before there was a crunching a crash, then shouting and cursing, as John ran into another car. I was thrown heavily from my seat, and my arm went through the glass. The cut must have been a nasty one, for the blood spurted all over my new coat. Then I fainted.

When I recovered George was holding me in his arms, his face very white and scared looking.

"Is my new cloak spoiled?" I asked.

"Never mind the cloak! does your arm hurt very badly?"

I remembered the cut, but felt no pain. I looked down and saw that a rough bandage had been put around my arm; but before I had time to notice anything further save that we were in a hired taxi, we were at home. George carried me up stairs, kissed me as he laid me down, and said: "Thank God you weren't killed."

KNEW THE BIBLE

"Father Neale," an Evangelist of Washington's Time.

Advised Young Preachers to Commit the Holy Writ to Memory, as He Did.

In these days when Billy Sunday occupies public attention, we recall an evangelist preacher of Washington's time, says an exchange. It was late in life when "Father Neale" was converted and so great was his zeal that he embraced every possible chance to preach, and then preached as long as the people would stay to hear him.

Full of anecdotes and fond of humorous stories, he amused the crowds that gathered around him and often converted some wandering sheep. He was a carpenter by trade, and when he was not preaching he was working, for he never took any money from his audiences. His only book was the Bible, and when he found a young preacher using a Concordance to aid him in finding texts he would say:

"Do as I do, study the Bible till you know it by heart." And he had studied it so thoroughly that he knew the least incidents recorded in it, and could cite them whenever they would come in play. Once he heard a minister trying to prove that the people could not have been immersed in the Jordan because that river was so small that a man could dam it up with his foot. At the close of the sermon Father Neale got up and said:

"I don't pretend to have any great book learnin', but there's one book I do know, and that's the Bible. That's my book. Now, our brother here says the Jordan is so small that you may stop it with your foot. His books may tell him so, but my book tells me another story. I read in the Bible how David, when he was flying from Absalom, and wanted to cross that same river, had to hire a boat to carry him over! That's what my book tells me!"

Some of Father Neale's recollections of Washington are little known to the readers of today, and some have never been published. Here is an anecdote found in an old journal:

"One of Washington's habits he mentioned as brought to Mount Vernon from the camp where everything was sacrificed to dispatch. Whenever Washington received a note by a private messenger, he never asked the bearer into the house, but usually took the letter himself at the front door and read it standing with his head bare in the open air. If it required a verbal reply he gave it, and dismissed the bearer; or if he must write, he retired to his office, wrote the answer, and bringing it out, delivered it to the messenger with his own hand."

Father Neale stated "that he was once engaged doing some carpenter work on one of the northeast windows that opens upon the front piazza of the mansion at Mount Vernon, and several ladies were taking tea on the colonnade. Washington was walking up and down joining in the conversation. One of the ladies asked him his opinion of some of the battles of Napoleon, the fame of which was then ringing through the world. Washington's reply, as heard by Father Neale, was in these words: 'Something more than the art of man achieved those battles.'"

WOMEN AS GREAT ORGANIZERS

Matrons Conduct Large National Gatherings With a Zest and Order, and Not a Man Is to Be Seen.

In the last 20 or 25 years particularly the women of this country have become past masters in developing nation-wide organizations. The groups which they have formed sometimes number as many as a million women. They take great delight in the perfection of their machinery. Much of the social awakening among women, the desire to improve their surroundings, comes from the stimulus and the education they get from their organizations.

But these organizations, it should be noted, are voluntary, writes Ida M. Tarbell in Harper's Magazine. They are directed to some purpose which appeals particularly to the group. Each stands on its own feet—that is, they are not co-operative organizations; and again, they have nothing to do with men. Go to one of their national gatherings. You will see meetings conducted with a zest, an order, a directness which throws in the shade almost any men's convention I ever saw, and not a man to be seen anywhere.

High Cost of Courting.

All the world may love a lover, but the framers of the new war tax bill adopted a roundabout way of showing their affection, asserts T. F. Logan in Leslie's. The congressional measure to raise additional revenue makes a particularly affectionate assault on the bankroll of the young man who wishes to demonstrate his devotion to a maid. If the object of the youth's passion lives reasonably near him, he may escape the new tax on telegrams and telephone messages that cost less than 15 cents. Every love letter he writes will cost him an additional penny, however, even if he incloses only a single burning poem. If a trip to the theater is planned, commuting lovers who live more than 30 miles from the playhouse must give financial assistance to the war on the Hohenzollerns. Actual admission to the theater demands an additional ten per cent on the cost of the tickets. Naturally, the dear girl will wish to make herself particularly alluring to her ardent swain. To do so, she must pay a two per cent tax on the perfume essence, toilet water, lip rouge or face powder that to her seems the most effective device.

PLIGHT OF TROUSERLESS MAN

Wind Blowing Door Shut Leaves Him In Predicament, Causing Hasty Retreat to Garage in Rear.

A certain North side man, the Indianapolis News had a patriotic garden and it was his habit to get up with the sun, don khaki trousers, drink a cupful of coffee and work until his wife called him to breakfast, about two hours later.

He rose about five o'clock one morning and dressed completely—all but the khaki trousers, which he kept in the basement. He descended the stairs and was on the way to the basement, when he saw outside a bottle of cream left by the milkman. Thinking of the effect of sunlight on cream and of his cupful of coffee, he peered up and down the street, opened the door, stepped out grabbed the bottle hurriedly. Just as he turned to go in he heard a slam—the wind had blown the door shut. He found himself out on the front porch, fully dressed, with the exception of a pair of trousers. The door was locked. He looked wildly up and down the street, vaulted the low cement railing and made a bee-line for the garage, the only available place of refuge and seclusion. He remained in the garage until his wife learned of his predicament, about two hours later, and came to his rescue.

The story would have remained a dark secret had not a neighbor—a woman, too—seen the whole affair and witnessed the mad scramble for the garage.

But Not Quite.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK
It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Colour and Lustre to Hair
That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.
Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.
Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

No Bermuda Vegetables.

There will be no fresh Bermuda vegetables this winter. A delegation of Bermuda truck growers who recently called at the shipping board offices in New York in an attempt to secure transportation facilities to their New York market were informed that it was exceedingly doubtful that any vessels would be available for this use.

The Bermuda truck crop, which is ready for market about January 1, has reached the New York market heretofore on British bottoms. These ships have been withdrawn for war purposes.

War Wrecks Nerves.

So terrific is the strain of the present warfare upon the men under fire, writes a correspondent, that nervous and mental disabilities are responsible for one-seventh of all the discharges, while wounds are responsible for one-third of all discharges—or about half as many men disabled through nerve-wreckage as by shrapnel.

NO MORE ASTHMA
A CURE DISCOVERED THAT REALLY DOES CURE
Thousands Testify to the Lasting Benefit Derived by This Marvelous Preparation.
The country is simply wild over the wonderful cures of chronic asthma that are being made every day by Catarrhozone. It is a scientific surprise, a perfect marvel the way it brings old chronics back to health. You will say so yourself after you have used it once, say so after the very first inue. Ever since people first began to have asthma, Catarrhozone is certainly the best remedy discovered.
Creighton E. Thompson, well known in Calgary, writes:—"Nothing too strong can be said for Catarrhozone. I suffered four years from asthma in a way that would beggar description. I went through everything that man could suffer. I was told of Catarrhozone by a clerk in Findlay's drug store and purchased a dollar package. It was worth hundreds to me in a week, and I place a priceless value on the benefit I have since derived. I strongly urge every sufferer to use Catarrhozone for Asthma, Bronchitis and Catarrh.

GETTING A BATH IN BOGOTA

Attempt Was Fraught With Much Difficulty and Considerable Profanity, According to Writer.

Ever since our arrival Hays and I had been threatening to patronize one of the two public bathhouses with a first-class bogotano reputation rumor had it existed in the capital, says Franck's Vagabonding Down the Andes. But in a land where the temperature rarely reaches 50 and the floors are tiled, it takes courage, and we had been satisfying ourselves and our duty to humanity by bravely splashing a basin of icy water over manly forms each morning on rising. By dint of strong resolutions often repeated to be up at six and visit one of the cases de banos we did finally manage one morning to find ourselves wandering the streets by eight, with towel and soap under our arms, and stared at by all we met. We discovered La Violeta at last, next door to a blacksmith shop. The keeper we woke up told us we might have a cold bath, but that the sign on the front wall: "Hot baths at all hours," was to be taken with a bogotano meaning.

A few mornings later we did actually find the other establishment open. We entered a large patio, the most striking of several buildings, within which was a round, or, more exactly, an eight-sided house, and in time succeeded in arousing the place to the extent of bringing down upon us a youth hugely excited at the appearance of a crowd of two whole bathers all at one time.

The youth assured us there was plenty of hot water. I won the toss and was soon stripped. But the shower was colder than the ice fields bounding the pole. When I had caught my breath I bawled my repertory of profane Spanish at the youth, who could be seen through a hole above pottering with some sort of an upright boiler and firebox, and now and then peering down upon me. Suddenly the water grew warm, hot, boiling, then, just when I had soaped myself from crown to toe in the steam, it turned as suddenly cold again, and an instant later stopped entirely. My eyes tight closed I shouted at the youth above.

"Es que el agua caliente se acago," he droned. "It is that the hotel water has finished itself."

There being no deadly weapon at hand I turned on a tap of ice-cold water and raced to the dressing room still half soaped. Hays, scantily clad, was gazing fiercely at the youth through a hole in the door.

"Then there isn't any more hot water?" he demanded.

"Not now, senor, but there will be soon."

"Good. How soon?"

"Early tomorrow morning, senor."

"Why, you cross-eyed son of spigdom," exploded the ordinarily even-tempered ex-corporal, "I came here and stripped to an undershirt that I might dance in my bare feet on this tile floor in honor of Jose Maria de la Santa Trinidad Simon Bolivar! Get up on that roof and fire up or . . ."

The youth was already feverishly stoking armfuls of wood under the upright boiler, and by the time I left for home Hays was shadow boxing to keep warm with a fair chance of getting a bath before the day was done.

Couldn't Be Worse.

Mrs. B.—I don't know, but their manners couldn't be any worse if they had been living at home all their lives.

DRINK HOT WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST
Says you really feel clean, sweet and fresh inside, and are seldom ill.
If you are accustomed to wake up with a coated tongue, foul breath or a dull, dizzy headache; or, if your meals sour and turn into gas and acids, you have a real surprise awaiting you.
To-morrow morning, immediately upon arising, drink a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is intended to first neutralize and then wash out of your stomach, liver, kidneys and thirty feet of intestines all the indigestible waste, poisons, sour bile and toxins, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal.
Those subject to sick headaches, backache, bilious attacks, constipation or any form of stomach trouble, are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store and begin enjoying this morning inside bath. It is said that men and women who try this become enthusiastic and keep it up daily.
Just as hot water and soap cleanse, purify and freshen the skin, so hot water and a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Limestone phosphate is an inexpensive white powder and almost tasteless.

PEACE TERMS ARE SIGNED BUT FIGHTING WILL GO ON

Petrograd Dazed by Action of Russian Peace Delegation at Brest-Litovsk in Signing German-dictated Peace "Country Not Able to Conduct a Real War But Partizan Life or Death Struggle Is Possible" Says Russian Commissionary"---Australian Troops Conduct Successful Raid on West Front.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Joseph Shaplen—Copyright 1918 by the United Press).

PETROGRAD, March 4. — The American, British and French Consuls have arrived in Moscow from Kieff, it was announced here to-day.

Petrograd is dazed to-day, following the action of the Russian peace delegation at Brest-Litovsk in signing the German-dictated peace. The city is like a man, with arm raised to strike, suspended in mid-air, still angry but uncertain. The Russian delegation wired: "The Russian delegation declared its refusal Saturday to discuss the proposed peace terms in view of the continuation of the war, despite the renewal of work of the peace conference. The demand to cease the offensive has been denied.

Even with peace signed at Brest-Litovsk the war will continue.

Agriculture Commissary Kalegayeff told the United Press: "The sporadic revolutionary war already begun through Russia will not end.

"The country is not able to conduct a real war against Germany, but a partisan, life or death struggle is possible against the German junkers and White Guards. It will be a civil and class war similar to that in Finland.

"I am convinced the German army as such will not participate only the German counter-revolutionists and White Guards are now fighting. We can handle them.

"The provinces occupied by the Germans are breadless. The Germans must feed the Russian population in occupied territory as well as its own army. If the Germans occupy Petrograd they must feed 3 million inhabitants. They'll need bread—and won't get it. This is equally true of the Ukraine. Therefore, military victories will simply tighten the noose around the German Imperialist's neck. The more starving territories they occupy, the worse will be their own economic situation. If the Germans destroy the Soviet Revolutionary Government they must conquer the workers and peasants of all Russia. They can't do this.

"Therefore, peace cannot be realized. The civil war against the German ruling classes will be continued.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

CHRISTIANIA, March 4.—The Aland Islands were occupied at noon on Saturday by the Germans, according to a telegram received here.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 4.—Supplementary treaties between the Central Powers and the Bolsheviki Government were signed at Brest-Litovsk in addition to the main peace treaty, according to a telegram from Brest-Litovsk, by way of Vienna and Amsterdam, which gives no details of the treaties.

The formal official announcement of signing has not yet been received from the Russian side, but a later radiogram from Petrograd said the treaty would be signed on Sunday. As a German official statement of Sunday night mentions only the cessation of operations in Great Russia, it is inferred in some quarters here that the German advance in the Ukraine and Finland will continue, while the Germans reserve for themselves generally a free hand outside the limits of Great Russia.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 4.—In the month of January, says an official statement to-day, the Germans dropped 1,482 bombs in the area occupied by the British troops in France. In the same period the British aviators dropped 7,653 bombs in enemy areas. The Germans dropped only 221 bombs in the day time, the statement adds, while the British dropped 5,900 between sunrise and set.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 4.—A number of successful raids were carried out by us last night on different parts of the front, says to-day's War Office reports. Australian troops entered the German trenches near Warneton, and after killing at least 50 of the enemy, and destroying several dugouts, brought back 11 prisoners.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 4.—A Russian official announcement, signed by Premier Lenine and Foreign Minister Trotsky, says that the Bolsheviki delegation, after signing peace with Germany, is proceeding towards Petrograd, where the text of the agreement will be immediately published.

ANOTHER BIG ADVANCE FOR BRITISH IN PALESTINE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 4.—British troops operating north of Jerusalem, in Palestine, have made an advance along a front of twelve miles to a maximum depth of 3,000 yards astride and west of the Jerusalem-Nabulus Road.

CO. SERGT.-MAJOR SAM THOMAS, who has been awarded the Belgian Croix de Guerre for good work at the front. Sergt. Major Thomas, who has been in France ever since the autumn of 1915 with the 21st Battalion, is, as far as is known, the first Peterborough soldier to win this decoration.

PETERBORO' BOY IS AWARDED THE BELGIAN CROSS

Co. Sergt.-Major Sam Thomas of the 21st Battalion, Receives the Belgian Crioux de Guerre For Good Work at the Front

A SPLENDID HONOUR

Peterborough soldiers at the front have been successful in winning many British decorations for gallantry in the field. Now comes the news that a local boy, Co.-Sergt. Major Sam Thomas has been awarded by King Albert of Belgium in the awarding to him of the coveted Belgian Croix de Guerre ("War Cross") for good work at the front. As far as is known this is the first occasion on which this decoration has been won by a Peterborough boy.

Co. Sergt.-Major Thomas enlisted here in the early months of the war with the 21st Battalion and has been in France since that fine Eastern Ontario Battalion went to the front in the early autumn of 1915. For a long period he was company quartermaster sergeant. Some time ago he was promoted to the rank of company sergeant-major. His brother, Sergt. Fred Thomas, who was also a member of the 21st Battalion, was killed in action in August, 1916.

The news of Sergt.-Major Thomas' decoration was conveyed to the Examiner in a letter from Lieut. D. J. Moore, M.C., another Peterborough boy with the 21st Battalion. Lieut. Moore, by the way, enlisted here as a private, went overseas as a sergeant, won his commission on the field, gained the Military Cross for bravery in action at Lens and is now commanding C company of the 21st.

Messrs. C. Gunsolus, A. Blade and W. Millen have returned from a trip to Gold Lake, where they spent a few days cutting ice for Mr. Blade's cottage. They drove by road to Chemong and from that point folowed the ice all the way to their destination, a distance of forty miles from the city. The Gold Lake ice was between four and five feet thick and the huge blocks had to be halved to facilitate their movement.

MANY RAIDS IN THE WEST

A Dozen Attacks on the British Front Alone During the Past Thirty-Six Hours, the Enemy Losing Heavily in Each Attempt

SHELLING IS HEAVY

(By William Philip Simms.)
(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, March 4.—Events are speeding up in the west front.

Bellowing artillery, quarrelsome, snapping machine guns, jostling patrols, and wild, dashing raiders, have all increased their activity in the past forty-eight hours.

There have been a dozen raids on this front in the past thirty-six hours —some important enough almost to be called attacks.

Field Marshal Hindenburg is probing and testing everywhere, losing heavily in each raid. Apparently he is unworried at the loss of fifty or sixty men, if the remnant fetches back one or two samples of the British troops opposite. The Germans are imitating the British methods of raiding. But they lack the latter's dash and cunning — the first requisite of raiders.

For instance in a raid against the Australians in Flanders 200 Germans and nine officers rehearsed frequently for many days. Yet they left twenty-one dead on the British wires including the commander, and also lost some prisoners.

In a raid in the Polygon Wood region, five Germans reached the British line. Three of these were killed and two taken prisoners. The raids while unimportant in themselves, demonstrate a tensioning of the situation. There is considerable enemy shelling west of Lens, and in the Scarpe and Cambrai regions. A furious wind has blown away the snowstorm, and a thaw has succeeded it. The weather is raw and penetrating.

WILL NOT ACCEPT CABLED REPORTS

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

OTTAWA, March 4.—Sir Robert Borden conferred with Sir Wilfrid Laurier on the question of accepting the cabled reports of the overseas vote as sufficient to warrant the immediate issuance of the writs for the opening of parliament, but Sir Wilfrid would not accept the responsibility of taking that ground.

It is probable that, pending the arrival of the official signed statement, notice of the opening of parliament will be given.

It may be said with almost absolute certainty that the first session will be comparatively quiet and uneventful. The Opposition will support all government war measures. Grounds for controversy, however, may arise out of the financial conditions and civil expenditures will be strongly criticized.

The Premier will likely leave for England in June. Just who will accompany him is not yet ascertainable, but possibilities include Hon. N. W. Rowell, Major General Mewburn, Hon. F. B. Carvell, Hon. Dr. Reid and Hon. Arthur Meighen. Undoubtedly one of the most important questions to be discussed from the purely Canadian standpoint will be the administration of the Canadian forces overseas, which at present is considered most unsatisfactory.

"Furs and Frills" Upset Schedule

Richard Carle's "Furs and Frills" tangled up the noon G.T.R. train from Toronto and spoiled the otherwise clean sheet of the new schedule, which went into effect to-day. This train was an hour and one-half late. Mr. Carle and his frills added an extra coach and baggage car to the train and was largely responsible for the disrupted service.

All the other trains went through on time. The first train to Lakefield went up at 7 o'clock and returned at 8.05 and proceeded to Belleville. Formerly it went to Port Hope. The noon Lakefield train was held up until the Toronto train arrived. The changed time-table found the public prepared, and although there was an unusually heavy traffic there were no complaints

FRENCH'S VISIT NOT DUE TO MORE TROUBLE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 4.—Nothing has been reported from Ireland in the past few days, which would suggest that the visit of Viscount French, Commander of the Home Forces, to County Clare is due to any increase in trouble in County Clare or elsewhere. On the contrary, recent reports have been to the effect that special measures taken in County Clare had a remarkably calming effect, and although the causes of the trouble have not disappeared, the disturbing elements have been unusually quiet since the troops were called to assist the police.

Some arrests and other repressive measures last week did not excite disorder anywhere, as far as has been reported. A telegram from Ennis, the capital of County Clare, says that Viscount French arrived at Ennis on Sunday afternoon. He remained there about an hour and then went north to Galway. All is quiet at County Clare.

THE JAPANESE QUESTION WILL BE SETTLED SOON

With German-Russian Peace Pact Signed It is Expected That Japan Will Be Allowed to Play Lone Hand in Siberia

TO MAKE STATEMENT

(By Carl D. Groat.)
(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, March 4.—With the German-Russian peace pact signed it was expected to-day that the question of Japanese intervention in Siberia would be quickly settled.

Indications to-day were that Japan will be permitted to play a lone hand in protecting her interests in Siberia, but that a statement of Allied purposes and limitations on the expedition will be made.

"Victory Will Be Ours" Says French Editor

(Canadian Press Despatch)

TORONTO, Ont., March 4. — Whether early or late, victory will be ours, said Stephen Lauzaune, the editor of Le Matin, Paris, at the Canadian Club to-day. "Only two qualities are needed and we have both—patience and unity. From the Germans we shall exact three conditions, restoration, reparation, and the assurance that these things shall never happen again.

"Some people are saying that France is bled white, but France is not exhausted. In September, 1914, at the battle of the Marne, France had an army of 1,500,000 men in the field. To-day France has an army of 2,700,000 men. That is how France is exhausted."

Presentation To Roland Sanderson

On Thursday evening, February 28, about thirty of his young friends assembled at the home of Mr. Roland Sanderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Sanderson, 146 Park street, to present him with a purse of silver with which to buy a wrist watch to serve as a constant reminder of his chums in his new duties as a Private with the Canadian Army. Although taken completely by surprise Mr. Sanderson replied to the presentation with a few well chosen words. The evening was spent by the young people most pleasantly in games and music, after which dainty refreshments were served. Private Roland Sanderson left on Friday to report for service in Kingston. He was formerly employed

PTE. G. E. MANLEY.

Pte. G. E. Manley, who enlisted here with the 93rd Battalion, and who went overseas with Lieut.-Col. Johnston's Battalion, afterwards transferring to another Canadian battalion in France, is now officially reported killed in action, according to last night's official list.

SERG. FRED EDWARDS.

Mrs. Fred Thomson received word to-day that Sergt. Fred Edwards who enlisted with the 39th, was wounded in the right arm in January, and is at present at Camp Hill Auxiliary Hospital, Woolton, Liverpool. He is progressing well.

LIEUT. E. B. NELSON.

Lieut. E. B. Nelson of Ottawa, who was second in command of B Squadron 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, while they were in training in Peterboro, is officially reported wounded. Lieut. Nelson made many friends while in Peterboro, who will wish him a speedy recovery. He was a member of the 5th Princess Louise Dragoon Guards at Ottawa before enlisting. He went overseas as a captain and reverted as lieutenant to go to France.

Sir William Hearst Is Jeered by Workingmen When He Refuses to Change the Existing Law in Favour of 2½ Per Cent. Alcohol Beer.

CROWD SHOWS ANGER

TORONTO, March 4.—There will be no four-per-cent. beer in Ontario. Facing a crowd of several thousand workmen with a sprinkling of soldiers who had tramped through the slush to the Parliament Buildings in order to demand a stronger beer, Sir William Hearst on Saturday afternoon flatly refused to change the existing law. It was a resentful mass of men who listened to the Prime Minister's announcement, and they showed their feeling by yells and jeers, while a few more turbulent spirits tried to start a rush. Time and again while Sir William was speaking the police cordon was hard-pressed to keep the crowd back. The Prime Minister, however, stood coolly to his guns. He did not say all that he intended to, but he said enough to convince those present that the Ontario Government has made its decision and is going to stand by it.

It took the eight or nine speakers of the deputation about an hour to present their views, the addresses being largely a repetition of the fact that 2½ per cent. proof spirit beer is unpalatable and indigestible, and that the 2½ per cent. alcohol beer—which corresponds to a four-per-cent. proof spirit beer — is a non-intoxicating beverage; and that Canada alone of all the nations has resorted to prohibition.

Sir William's reply was a staunch assertion that the Ontario Temperance Act as it stands to-day has the endorsation of public opinion, and in telling the crowd candidly that he could not grant their request, he pointed out the uselessness of Ontario permitting the sale of a liquor that the Dominion Government, by its announced policy, was not going to allow to be imported or manufactured.

"No Beer—No Ships."

The workmen assembled at the Armouries, where a resolution was passed endorsing a proposal to demand beer with 2½ per cent. "alcohol" instead of "proof spirits." Then they formed up in an irregular column and marched up to the Parliament Buildings, at their head a banner of the Brotherhood of Shipbuilders with the slogan "No Beer—No Ships." They formed up outside the main entrance from the steps of which the Prime Minister and the members of the Cabinet received them. The speakers were introduced by Thomas Moore of Niagara Falls, general organizer of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of Ameirca, who pointed out that since extension had taken from the workers their right to express an opinion upon the Temperance Act through their votes they had to come personally to the Government. Mr. Moore read the resolution passed at the Armouries meeting, also the names of a committee to go to Ottawa to take the matter up with the Federal Government.

F. J. Saul, representing the Toronto Munition Workers, declared that workingmen were "disgusted at the continual attacks upon their sobriety made by temperance fanatics." He pleaded for a reasonable compromise as a truer measure of temperance reform than extreme laws. Harry Halford of Hamilton emphasized the increase in illicit drinking which could be countered by allowing the sale of a mild but palatable beverage such as was suggested. Wm. Lodge of Ottawa, secretary of the Allied Trades Council, said that workmen were not asking for ardent spirits, but they demanded a palatable beer as a right. Such a beer, he maintained, was necessary to men engaged in arduous employment. J. H. Gunn of the Toronto Electrical Workers' Union followed much the same line. Light beers had a higher nutritive value than tea. H. G. Foster of the Hamilton Cigar Makers' Union declared that the workers of Hamilton were almost unanimous in demanding a stronger beer. F. Greenlaw, president of the St. Catharines Trades and Labour Council, emphasized the fact that in England, the United States and other allied countries the sale of beers had not been prohibited. W. J. Driscoll of the Kingston Trades and Labour Council, who spoke for the munition workers, said the present law was too drastic.

"To an unprejudiced observer the propaganda of the most confirmed prohibitionist cannot be distinguished from a mania, a simple madness, an obsession against a little under-

HUN VIEWS OF GERMAN DECADENCE.

Much has recently been said and printed in Germany about the decay of German morals.

The unscrupulous individualism and contempt for international rights so unvaryingly displayed by the German state, is being more and more imitated by the component elements of that state. Town councils vie with one another in breaking the orders of the Imperial Food Bureau; the great industrial companies do the same, and also resort to a hundred cunning but unprincipled devices to evade the laws against profiteering. The individual follows suit. As a German paper (Die Hilfe) recently wrote:

"There is very little respect for the laws against profiteering. At the present time there is not a person in Germany of an age to bear the penalty who could not be imprisoned for breaking some war ordinance! The spirit of greed is not limited to commercial life, but has become manifest among employees and the working classes. They see how war profits are made and follow the example set them, not only by demanding an increase of wages, but by corrupt practices, by bribery, by embezzlement and theft. . . . The moral of public officials has declined——," and much more to the same damning effect.

Herr Haase has more recently spoken to the same purpose in the Reichstag Main Committee. "That the war had had a demoralizing effect on Russia is correct. Is not that also the case with us at home? Every sense of legality has vanished; robberies of the most serious sort are on the increase."

The explanation is clearly indicated in the later portions of Herr Haase's speech. Germany's public conduct reflects, on a large scale, precisely the same ugly features that characterize the behaviour of her private citizens—fraud, theft and violence. Fraud, in all her diplomatic manoeuvres, from the machinations that preceded the war to the present hypocritical negotiations at Brest-Litovsk. Theft, at the expense of Belgium, France, Poland, and the Baltic Provinces of Russia. Violence, beyond all the legitimate measures of warfare, in her personal atrocities, her wanton and barbarous use of aircraft, poison gas, submarines, and the secret use of explosives outside the war area, among peoples for whom she has expressed sincere friendship, even while plotting criminal acts against them.

INEFFECTIVE CAMOUFLAGE.

The laurels of the prophet must be handed to these French observers who have interpreted the German beating of tom toms as prelude to a new peace offensive. Count von Hertling has fired the first gun. His aim is bad, but his intent apparent.

Clumsily the Imperial German Chancellor makes attempt to drive a wedge between the United States and England. His camouflage is ineffective; his efforts so palpable as to defeat his purpose. He thunders in the index about acceptance of the four principles laid down by President Wilson in his speech in February and then proceeds to prove the insincerity of his professions. After that comes the familiar cry that the nations fighting for civilization against the tyranny that has done its worst will be responsible for all future bloodshed if they do not at once consent to negotiate with Germany on Germany's own terms!

Translated into language which all Americans understand. Count von Hertling's talk is that of a man who has all the chips on the table in front of him and is looking for a chance to call off the game.

Manifestly the speech of Count von Hertling can have no effect upon the policies of the nations at war with Germany. Will it have any effect upon the German people? Perhaps. All this battling with words plays into the hands of the militarism for which Count von Hertling speaks. By proper emphasis upon slight differences in verbiage between the pronouncements of the men who speak for the Allies he is able to make the German people believe that there is division among the allied governments; and in connection with the object lesson furnished by Russia's collapse before German arms, that operates to throttle any element inside Germany that shows inclination to raise its voice for a democratic peace.

It should be plain by this time that nothing could be gained by a war of words against Prussian militarism. Even with words as the weapon the militarists have the advantage, for the audience is the German people. Nothing at all has been gained by the so-called diplomatic offensive with which some persons in this and other countries against which Germany is making war seemingly have become enamored.

If there is to be any replying to Count von Hertling let it be by contrasting the Grman deed with the German word. Russia stands forth an example very much in evidence and so does Poland. The speciousness of German promise is being written across the face of Eastern Europe in 1918 as it was written across Belgium in 1914. It is no less in evidence in Count von Hertlin's professed acceptance of Mr. Wilson's four principles and the exceptions he cites which show that he accepts them neither in the letter nor in the spirit.

It is as clear to-day as it has at any other time been that Germany's only idea of peace is a peace based on he land map, a peace to be negotiated by jugglers at diplomacy, a victor's peace. The safe way to meet this latest peace offensive is to go back to the sound doctrine laid down in the President's reply to the Pope:

"We cannot take the word of the present rulers of Germany as a guarantee of anything that is to endure unless explicitly supported by such conclusive evidence of the will and purpose of the German people themselves as the other peoples of the world would be justified in accepting. Without such guarantees treaties of settlement, agreements for disarmament, covenants to set up arbitration in the place of force, territorial adjustments, reconstitutions of small nations, if made with the German government no man, no nation could now, depend on."

And after that—talk war and think war until the war is won. Then will be time enough to think peace and talk peace.—New York Herald.

THE SPIRIT OF CANADA'S ARMY.

No finer example of the spirit animating Canada's army in France could be found than that which is expressed in the letter published below. It was written by Lieut. Tom Armstrong, M.C., of Barrie, who has since passed away. The letter, which was written shortly after the young young officer had been badly wounded, should be read by every young man. It is as follows:

"You will be glad to know that the outcome of a specialist's examination the other day was very favourable. He said that my operation had been entirely successful, and that ere many weeks I would be fit once more for real service. You can understand that I was very glad to know this and entirely thankful. Certainly I should like to have gone back to the homeland for a month or two, but to know that I could again take my place in the field was better news by far. I shall be in England for at least two months more, anyway, so do not worry unnecessarily.

Now, it is quite natural for you people at home to want me back, and to get my discharge. You say that I have done my bit; that others should take my place. That is all right, as an Indian might say "it's mighty good medicine," but there's another side to the question. Is it not up to me, as to any other chap to serve at the front while I am fit? My duty, or bit, will not be done until His Majesty has no further use for my services or I am until. I can get a permanent job here in England, good for duration, but such a course goes against the grain. If I cannot be in the middle of the fun I want to be right at home. If I were married or had people depending on me, things would be different.

I think you will agree with me in this, Jack and that I am only doing the right thing. There are lots of fellows here holding down bomb-proof jobs, who have never seen the line, but you don't want me to be one of them, do you? I realize fully that I am only one insignificant unit in a vast army, but the spirit that actuates the individual is the spirit of the army, and it's up to us to do what we can wholeheartedly while we are able. After eighteen months' service in France, I hope I am not afraid to return there, whether as an officer or in the ranks. Keep the old smile working overtime, Jack, and in God's own good time I'll get back to Canada with the full consciousness that I have tried to do my best."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

While Peterborough soldiers have won the Distinguished Service Order, the Distinguished Conduct medal, the Military Cross and the Military Medal it remained for Coy.-Sergt. Major Sam Thomas to add a Belgian decoration to the city's long list of war honours. His many friends will congratulate him upon winning the Belgian Croix de Guerre.

"No Beer; no Boats" read a banner carried in the procession to Queen's Park on Saturday when a big delegation waited upon Premier Hearst to ask for stronger beer in Ontario. The man who carried that banner will have an answer to the question "What did you do in the great war, Daddy?"

NATIONAL MEMORY IS LONG.

That many, perhaps a majority, of Americans do not yet fully realize the gravity of the situation created for them by the war is probably true, though all are learning it rapidly from the daily publication of "casualties" among our men abroad and from the ever-growing sacrifices demanded of them. With appreciation of what is before us, and upon us, too, there is beginning to be felt here toward the nation responsible for the war something, and more than a little, of the bitterness long since apparent among the French and English.

The Germans may think that these antagonisms will die away with the return of peace, and that soon the friendly relations of other days will be re-established. That is not the lesson of experience. There may be no "war after the war" in the official sense, but the "frightfulness" of Germany will not be forgotten by the present generation of those now her enemies, and it will not be forgotten by the children who are hearing daily of "atrocities," not as the acts of individual criminals, but as the products of a settled policy deliberately carried out in an attempt to subject the world to German domination.

That such animosities continue long after treaties have been signed is shown plainly enough by the survival in so many American minds of memories dating back to our Revolutionary era. They are based on things done by the British Government, and military men of that day which, in comparison with German conduct in Belgium, in the occupied part of France, in Serbia and Roumania, and in Armenia deserve characterization hardly more severe than can be made by the word "tactless." Yet England still suffers appreciably from her management of the prison ships and her employment of the Hessians.

This nourishing of old grudges is wrong and it is unwise, but it is an unalterable "folkway," and for more than one century or two Germany is going to pay for her mad ambition penalties which no indemnities or annexations she can get from helpless Russia will balance.—New York Times.

CHARGE WITHDRAWN.

One Fine of $200 for Having Liquor In Store Was Paid.

License Inspector Stewart withdrew the charge against Joseph Skader, Reid street north, of having liquor in a place other than his private dwelling, and the defendant was dismissed with a little sound advice by Magistrate Dumble this morning. Skader's son-in-law paid a $200 fine last week on this identical charge, and the single penalty was apparently deemed sufficient.

GROVER HALPIN ON LINE-UP OF OLD BOYS FOR WEDNESDAY NIGHT

The fans who think the Peterborough Junior O. H. A. Club are going to have easy picking over the Old Boys' team in the benefit game at Brock Street Rink on Wednesday night had better take another slant at the line-up of the Old Guard. The latter have been reinforced by the arrival of Grover Halpin home on leave from Toronto, so that they will have three of last year's 247th team in action against the Petes. The latter will use their regular line-up, and are confident of trimming the Veterans. The latter will have it on them in weight and experience, and as most of them have been practising with the Juniors they are in good shape. Jerry Coughlin has been suggested as referee and the teams will line up about as follows:

| Old Boys. | | Juniors. |
|---|---|---|
| Legros | Goal. | Murray |
| Halpin | Defence | Girard |
| Lowes | | Hagerman |
| Jackson | Centre | Cherrett |
| McMartin | Right Wing | Park |
| Evans | Left Wing | Bartley |
| Kenneally | Sub. | Williams |

The game will start sharp at eight o'clock and there will be skating afterwards.

The proceeds are for the Great War Veterans' Club Rooms and the tickets are now on sale. It will be their last and one of the best games of the season.

SAYS PORT ARTHUR WILL WIN THE CUP

(Canadian Press Despatch)

TORONTO, March 4. — It is expected here that the hockey fans of Toronto and Ontario generally will loyally support Kitchener in their battle for the Allan cup here. Con. Corbeau, once famous in professional hockey circles, is the coach of Port Arthur team, champions of the Thunder Bay District, who will play Kitchener here Wednesday in the Allan Cup series. Corbeau says Port Arthur are the coming world's champions.

TORONTO CENTRALS TOO MUCH FOR COLLEGIATE

Toronto Central Y.M.C.A. junior champions of the Toronto O. B. A. district, had little trouble in beating Peterborough Collegiate, local junior champions, by 42 to 19, in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium on Saturday night.

Peterborough's shots were made for the most part from outside the defence, while Toronto displayed a short passing combination, which carried them in for short-range shots. Peterborough will play the return game at Toronto on Saturday next. The winners of the round will meet Kingston in the semi-finals.

Peterborough (9) — Pogue and Young, forwards; Canniff, centre; Stevenson, Thirnbeck and Cottingham defence.

Central (42)—Jobson, Smith and Shuter, forwards; Wells, centre; Graham, Wilson and Shatz, defence.

LAKEFIELD "PREP" DEFEATS T.C.S. 14—3

LAKEFIELD, March 3.—Lakefield Preparatory School defeated Trinity College School Juniors, Port Hope, at Lakefield Saturday by 14 3. This was the second of the home-and-home games played by the teams. The first was won by Lakefield at Port Hope by 6 to 5.

CONSOLATION FINALS IN SKIPS' BONSPIEL ARE TO-NIGHT'S BILL

The skips' bonspiel will be wound up to-night with the concluding games of the consolation round. At 7 o'clock the semi-finals will be played as follows:

A. W. Archibald vs. A. C. Kay.
J. W. McDermid vs. W. G. Morrow.

The winners of the first game will meet the winner of the second and it will be all over but the "fanning" and the prizes.

Archibald qualified for the fours on Saturday night by winning from Dave Eason by the score of 10-9.

The rinks were:

| | |
|---|---|
| E. Walton | Geo. Henderson |
| C. Westbrook | C. C. Abbott |
| M. C. Tooley | Geo. Hill |
| A. W. Archibald | D. Eason |
| Skip—10 | Skip— 9 |

Score by ends:

Eason. . . . .xx1xx2xx2x22— 9
Archibald . . .11x21x11x3xx—10

The Vice-Skips' bonspiel opens tomorrow night, and will be scarcely completed before the end of the week.

CLEANING UP O. H. A. CHAMPIONSHIP TITLES

Toronto, March 4. — With the O. H. A. senior championship decided in favor of Kitchener the big Ontario Association will now devote its attention to completing the campaigns for the intermediate and junior titles.

To-morrow the Thamseville Unions which eliminated Brampton in a sudden death game at Woodstock on Saturday night, will go to Oshawa for the first of the home-and-home contests. The return game will be played at Woodstock on Friday night next.

On Wednesday night the 1st Batt., Central Ontario Regt., winners of the Toronto Military League title, will go to Collingwood with the return game here on Friday. The survivors of these two rounds will be the finalists of intermediate series and will play off for the championship during the week of March 11th.

The four teams remaining in the junior race are University of Toronto Schools, De La Salle of Toronto, Kingston Hockey Club, and the Barrie Hockey Club.

On Tuesday night Kingston will play the return game of the home-and-home series with De La Salle here. The Limestone City team has a lead of three goals from the 7 to 4 game at Kingston. In the event of Kingston winning from De La Salle they will play home-and-home games with Batrie. If however De La Salle should win the round they will play off with the University of Toronto Schools and the winner will meet Barrie in home-and-home games.

TORONTOS WIN LISTLESS GAME FROM CANADIENS

Toronto, March 4.—Although Canadiens were without the services of Malone and Pitrie their two star forwards, they had a difficult task to allow Toronto to win their National Hockey League fixture by 5 to 3 at the Arena on Saturday night. The Blue Shirts started out as if they intended playing "regular" hockey and in the first few minutes of play tallied wice. Before the period ended however, the visitors scored three goals, and were playing the local team off their feet. Toronto scored again in the second period, and the teams entered the final period with the score tied, three all. The local team added two more goals in the final chapter, and the visitors by dint of hard work were successful in going through the last twenty minutes of play without a tally.

The hockey displayed by both of the teams was of the listless, indifferent, up and down style that has characterized many N.H.L. games of this season. And the spectators appreciated the evident lack of interest of the players and voiced their disapproval in no uncertain manner.

Wedding Obtruded Upon Rev. Robert Pogue's Curling

It is only natural perhaps that Presbyterian ministers should have a strong attachment for curling. Their interest in the game should be instinctive, and that this predilection exists is shown by the fact that all three of Peterborough's Sresbyterian pastors are members of the local Curling Club. Rev. Robert Pogue has played a good second stone on Walter Oke's rink during the recent bonspiel, and missed few if any of the winter's scheduled games. Last week found him out with the rest of the men, and one one night, at least, it was midnight before they had finished their game. In the heat of one of the bonspiel games, he received a telephone message calling him home. Mr. Pogue assured his skip that he would return as soon as possible, and after securing Mr. A. L. Killaly as his substitute, departed. A few en ls later he was back again, and his rink went ahead. "That marriage must have brought good luck," Mr. Pogue remarked to the great amusement of the curlers, and later, his skip was wishing that another young couple might call for the curling-minister's services at the manse.

But Rev. Mr. Pogue is not the only parson in the club. Rev. W. L. Romand of St. Andrew's Church is a new member, but he is an old curler, and is rated as a "rattling good one." He played second on J. W. McDermid's rink in the schedule games, and soon gained the favour of the following in number "eight." Rev. J. A. McKenzie, of Knox Church, broke into the game this year, and delighted the veterans by the form he developed under a few lessons from Alex. Archibald. Mr. McKenzies illness cut short his season's play, but he will surely be back in the game again next year.

Fine Programme Is Given By Young Pupils

At the Conservatory on Saturday afternoon a most pleasing little joint recital of the pupils of Miss Elcombe, Miss MacDonald and Miss Johnston afforded a pleasant afternoon for the large number of parents and friends who attended. The regular Saturday recitals, which are open to music lovers, are steadily becoming more popular and reflect great credit upon the teachers who have so painstakingly brought their pupils to the high standard they have reached.

Cobourg Council Votes $300 For War Veterans

The Cobourg World says: A deputation from the G.W.V.A. consisting of Mr. A. Hircock, President; Mr. Whiffen, Secretary; and Mr. Lewis waited upon the Council.

On motion the deputation was heard.

Mr. Hircock spoke first and plainly stated his case. There were about fifty members of the Association in Cobourg now. They wanted a Club Room. They had an option on the furniture of the defunct Laurier Club for $300. It was a good proposition. The Association also needed a fund so that any member financially hard up might get temporary relief. He asked for $500. He hoped the Association would never need to call on the Council again. Mr. Hircock outlined the many advantages to the boys of a club of their own, and hoped the Council would be as liberal as possible.

Mayor Greer said something should be done. He thought $500 a little high. He thought the Council could afford $300. Taxes this year would be higher, and the Council had to be very careful.

Coun. Hooey said there were many demands on the town this year, but he thought the town should do something.

Coun. McArthur said something must be done. We must take off our hats to the returned soldiers. He congratulated the gentlemen on the excellent way they had presented their case. We must be fairly liberal, their cases. We must be fairly liberal, for us, while we stayed at home to make money. They deserve all, and more, than we can give. I take the position to give the greatest possible amount that the Council can possibly see its way clear to give.

Coun. Denton thought $300 now and later, possibly another small grant. He thought the Council quite patriotic. We are dispensing with using road oil this year, growing pigs, and now helping the G. W. V. A.

Coun. Clarke was in favour of doing all that was possible.

Coun. McIntosh moved that a grant of $300 be given, and passed to-night, as he understood they needed the money right away.

Mr. Hooey seconded the motion. He said he would like to see more, but that was practically impossible at present. They had fought for us. But he didn't think they'd take him if he did enlist. If he were a younger man he would probably be in khaki.

The motion carried unanimously.

Mr. Hircock thanked the Council had in doing so stated how much nicer a club room would be in comparison to the recreation room at the hospital, where officers have to be saluted. Didn't seem free there. In their own club a private was as good as a Colonel—perhaps better. It goes against the grain to have to always salute.

HAVELOCK CORRESPONDENCE

HAVELOCK, Feb. 27.—Miss Minnie McWilliams is in Toronto attending the millinery openings.

Miss Rose Hutchinson, who has been visiting with her parents, Trent River Road, left last week to attend the millinery openings, after which she will resume her position as milliner again in Brussels.

Miss Jennie Barlow visited friends in Peterborough last week.

Mrs. P. Pogue and daughter Myrtle, of Lindsay, are the guests of Mrs. Wm. Hitchins.

Pte. Wm. Andrews,, formerly of town, has received his discharge, and has again donned the civilan clothes. He and Mrs. Andrews are residing in Toronto.

Mrs. Geo. Frost and her daughter, Mrs. A. C. Cockey of Frankford, are the guests of Mrs. Dan. Kennedy.

Mrs. Hugh Blackford and son have returned to town from Toronto where they spent the past few months with friends.

Mrs. Thos. Keene met with a very disagreeable accident last week when she slipped on the ice in front of her house, breaking the bone in her left wrist.

Several troop trains have passed through Havelock during the past week, conveying our soldier boys to the Eastern Sea ports, from whence they are being rushed overseas.

Auctioneer S. S. Joyce will sell the farm stock, implements, etc., of Mr. E. J. Leeson, Belmont, on Wednesday, Feb. 27th. Mr. Leeson has sold his farm to Mr. Thos. Henderson of Cobalt, for the sum of $4,300. The new owner will take possession on March 15th. Mr. Leeson intends going west after the sale and his father, Mr. Alex. Leeson, will move to Havelock, for a time at least.

Messrs. S. A. Conklin of Colborne and Wm. Robertson of the North West, have purchased the big Sandy Lake ranch in Methuen and intend using it for a cattle range.

BRAKEMAN KILLED.

Harry M. Lewis of Toronto, a C. P. R. brakeman, was instantly killed in the Oshawa yards on Saturday, Feb. 16th, when he fell between the cars of a freight train which he was braking. He was practically cut in two by the wheels of the car. Deceased is well known in Havelock, having been engaged all last summer on the Port McNichol line out of Havelock. His father, John Lewis, is the proprietor of the Cameron Hotel at Kaladv.

Pte. Gilbert Herrington, a Havelock youth, in writing home to his sister, Mrs. Mac. Foley, recently, wishes to be remembered to his Havelock friends and also states he has just received his Christmas box from the local Women's Relief Committee and was delighted because they remembered him. Gilbert is now a cyclist orderly for a unit at Leaford, Eng. Pte. Mac. Foley has been shell shocked very severely recently, but is now doing nicely in a hospital in France.

The death occurred in Chicago on Feb. 16th, of a former resident of Havelock, in the person of Mr. Terrance Smith, from the effects of a paralytic stroke. Deceased was in his 80th year, and had been in perfect health and very active up to his sudden demise. He leaves a widow and four children to mourn his loss. They are Mrs. P. J. Scanlan of Toronto, Dr. J. A. Smith, Mrs. Jos. Power and Miss Katherine Smith, all of Chicago. Mr. Smith lived in Havelock for many years and was exceedingly well known and esteemed. A host of friends join in extending sympathy to the bereaved family.

Commencing on Saturday, Feb. 24, important changes will take effect in the C. P. R. passenger service, a number of trains being cut off entirely. The noon express arriving here now at 12.15 p.m., for Montreal, will hereafter arrive at 1.10 p.m., and run to Ottawa instead. The afternoon express will arrive from Ottawa instead of Montreal and is due here at 2.25, leaving at 2.35 to make Toronto at 6.15.

Mr. David Menzies of Beatty, Sask., writing from his western home, states with pride, that $6,000 has recently been raised in that small centre for Red Cross and patriotic purposes.

Mary Brock, relict of the late James Sedgwick, passed away at the home of her son, Thomas Sedgwick, Trent River, on Tuesday of last week, in her 88th year. The funeral took place on Thursday, services being held at the house at 1.30 p.m., and from there to the Norwood cemetery for burial.

The Women's Auxiliary of St. John's Church met on Wednesday afternoon last at the home of Mrs. Wm. Backus at 2.30 o'clock. An executive meeting was held in the evening at the home of Mrs. Isaac Barlow.

The Girls' Guild of St. John's met Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Wm. Vance at 2.30 o'clock.

Rev. and Mrs. R. B. Paterson and children, Cyril and Arthur, are visiting friends in Toronto and Creemore.

Ms. Alex. Innis of Toronto visited frends in town last week.

Reeve Hess of Hastings was in town on Monday last.

Pte. Harold Matheson, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, has returned to Canada, unable for further service, and arrived in Havelock Monday. He looks hale and hearty, but is very lame, having not much use of the knee joint. His many friends welcome him back home again.

HUSBAND AND WIFE ARE BOTH GRATEFUL

John Holman Believes That Tanlac Has Saved His Life

"I had reached the point where I felt that nothing could save me for this world much longer, and really, I don't believe I would be alive to-day if it hadn't been for Tanlac," said John Holman of 163 Chestnut Street, Toronto, recently. Mr. Holman, who is now sixty-three years of age, has lived in Toronto all his life, and is a man of wide acquaintance and many friends.

"Two years ago, or more," he continued, "I commenced suffering from stomach trouble and nervousness and going down hill. I had no desire for food of any kind, nothing seemed to have any taste or give me any nourishment and I was simply dwindling away to nothing. I suffered terribly from indigestion and my nerves were all to pieces. I haven't been able to strike a lick of work since last April. I was as weak as a baby and actually didn't have strength enough to carry a small flower pot across the room. I was so unstrung that I would have nervous tremors and shake all over like a leaf in the wind. Many a night I never closed my eyes for sleep at all and was so tired and weak during the day that I could hardly drag around. I was as white as a sheet and just a complete nervous and physical wreck. I tried all kinds of medicine but kept going down until my hopes of getting well were all gone.

"My wife begged me to try Tanlac and I began taking it under protest, because I didn't believe it would do me any good. But I soon found out Tanlac was different from other medicines I had taken and by the time my second bottle was gone there was a great difference in my feelings. In fact, I was so encouraged by my wonderful improvement that I kept on taking it and it has certainly done me a world of good. My appetite is great and I can eat plenty of most anything I want without feeling a sign of indigestion. My nerves are so much better that I can sleep good every night and am feeling stronger and better than I have in a long time. I don't know just how much I have gained in weight, but I do know I'm a different man already and am still improving right along. If any man ever had reason to praise Tanlac that man is me, and Mrs. Holman and I both feel very grateful for what it has done for me."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowlers Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

President Clemenceau Visits Sammies Who Repulsed German Attack

(Canadian Press Despatch)

PARIS, Sunday.—Premier Clemenceau visited American troops to-day and reviewed the soldiers who repulsed the German attack Friday. The United States battalion which took part in this operation was reviewed by the Premier in whose presence the general commanding the army decorated with the war cross certain officers and privates whose bravery had been particularly remarkable. The Premier also saw on his way some of our own troops at rest. He conversed with officers and men warmly, congratulating and encouraging them. Our plus had but one reply:—"They shall not pass."

Twenty Notches On Dog Catcher's Gun

A smear of blood out on McDonnel street, where one of the dog catcher's victims was shot down, has stirred up some objection to this summary method of dispatching dogs that roam the streets. Mr. Gates has already destroyed twenty of them, and four other captures were returned to their owners at one dollar apiece. Six of the twenty represented Saturday's work. This morning Mr. Gates lead two more down George street. One of them was a beagle bitch which caught Magistrate Dumble's discriminating eye. He remarked that this dog was too valuable to be killed, and added that the owner should keep it locked up. The dogs followed Gates as quietly as if there was a meaty bone waiting for them at the police station, and when locked up in a cell, peered through the iron grill with an appeal that was almost human in its approach to intelligence.

THE BRITISH FRONT FROM WEEK TO WEEK

According to the latest story from Berlin, Hindenburg has announced his intention of entering Paris on April 1st. It is a great day for it. It is the anniversary of Bismarck's birthday, and of other occasions when men have made fools of themselves. Another story tells us that he will start his offensive on February 14th in order to have some sort of a Valentine to present to the Reichstag, which meets a few days later. Just at the moment, tales of this kind from the Black take the place in newspapers of facts from the Front.

But the epic of the British soldier who lived for seven weeks in a shell-hole behind the German line deserves notice in this column, even if it is by this time common knowledge throughout the Empire. For seven weeks with a bullet through the thigh, he lay there; crawling out at night to search the bodies of the dead for tins of bully beef, and trusting to the rain for water. At last he manages to escape across the German lines—over their trenches and through the wire, with a fractured thigh—and so came out of No Man's Land back to his friends. Robinson Crusoe in a shell-hole; what an adventure! And what a spirit, for it is to be remembered he could at any time have purchased relief by surrender to the Boche.

To those who do not know the front lines it may seem an impossible adventure. Actually the only surprising thing about it is the amazing pluck and endurance of the hero. For the country just behind the front line is a good deal more deserted than that desolate wilderness No Man's Land. Raids are made and patrols go out between trench and trench; but the land behind the trench is left to itself. It is constantly shelled; it has communication trenches through it; why should it ever be explored? That the dead had been left unburied would be accounted for by the fact that the ground had been recently re-won by the Germans, and was always under fire. Why should they trouble to bury British dead?

Our success in the air continues, and I know of nothing so inspiring as this to the men in the trenches. Sir Ian Hamilton said that the Navy was father and mother to the Army at Gallipoli. With equal truth the Air Service may be said to be father and mother to the Infantry. It watches over and protects them. If German guns are troubling them it seeks them out and keeps the artillery to put an end to the trouble. In an attack, if other means of communication fail, there is still the "contact" aeroplane overhead, to receive messages and send them back to Headquarters. In defence it keeps off the German aeroplanes.

Now there are many varieties of unpleasantess to be found on the British front, from quite large ones like minenwerfor to quite small ones like fleas; but an enemy aeroplane overhead is as unpleasant as anything I know. It always seems to be the last straw. You feel suddenly that you have been betrayed. Let us suppose that you have had a particularly rotten time in the line, and that you have come out for a rest. You are still well within range of the German guns, but the Germans do not know that your Battalion is resting in this quiet little village.

Perhaps they do know really, and refrain from shelling you for fear of retaliation but you feel that the High Command has been deceived in the matter. To the German eye no troops are there.

And then one day—perhaps you are writing home, perhaps you are playing football—a German aeroplane appears overhead. You are discovered. In ten minutes, you tell yourself, the village will be shelled. What on earth, you cry aloud (and quite unjustly), is the R. A. C. doing? For to be shelled when at rest is far more wearing than to be shelled in the trenches.

The Germans feel just like this, too. It was particularly noticeable on the Somme, when day after day captured German letters were published telling the same story. Their complaints were justified; for our aeroplanes were always over them, while their's hardly ever succeeded in reaching our side of the line. And every letter taken from a German infantryman dwelt upon his grievance in this matter.

"Wherever we go, whatever we do, we are watched by the English aeroplanes."

"The English aeroplanes do what they like and nobody seems to try and stop them."

"All day yesterday the English aeroplanes were over our trenches. They came so low, that we expect soon they will drag us out of them by the hair."

"As usual, only English aeroplanes in the air. I suppose our heroes are back at home showing off their medals."

To the British Observer they seemed to have some reason for their bitterness for never was our superiority in the air so strongly established. Since then the German Air Service has been re-organized; nobody will deny now the persistence and skill of its pilots; but it is good to find that our men are getting the upper hand again so decisively, for there is nothing which will give the infantry so much confidence.

Of the more far-reaching results of this air supremacy I need not say anything, for it is more commonly understood. In the end it means simply that we know what the enemy is doing and that he is ignorant of what we are doing; and the side which can say this is the winning side. The many raids which are taking place on both sides are primarily an endeavour to supplement that knowledge. So we see that though the news from the Front is scanty it is on what is happening now that the foundations of victory are laid.

"Let 'em all come," is what our men are saying of the much-trumpeted German offensive on the West Front, and, providing always that those at home are scrupulous in the performance of their part—the regular, plentiful, unfailing supply of drafts and munitions—there need be no fears as to the result of the coming.

London In Its Fourth War Year

THE WOMEN

It is the pride of the woman of London that she has done "her bit." No matter in what circumstances she may be, whether poor, of the middle-class, or gently born and rich, she could not be happy if she felt that her contribution to the sinews of war meant no sacrifice. Our lady of title whose husband fell in action in the early days of the war, has been heard to say with regard to a just claim she might have made for rebate on her taxes, "Let it stand. It is the least I can do." For that particular lady all her hopes and chance of worldly advancement died with her brilliant husband—and she was an ambitious woman. Her work for charity and her own contributions have been endless during the war, her spirit has never faltered, nor her belief in the justice and the ultimate victory of the Allied cause. What she has meant to those of less steely metal than herself, they perhaps alone know—she takes litle credit to herself. A particularly sweet chiming clock, picked up in an alien land where her husband laboured for his country, reminds her at every meal of her sacrifice and spurs her on to further effort. There is something acutely pathetic in that.

But her case is not an isolated one. It is only isolated in detail, the general outline is common to most women of her class. The war has shelved to a great extent the distinction of class, but it is convenient roughly to speak in terms as if it still existed as before the war. The women of the well-born class, then, gave their men in the first stages of the war. It was their sons and husbands who officered that first little army which helped to take the first shock of the German hordes. How many of these men lie along the road from Mons and in the fields by the Marne, England knows. But their women-folk still keep up the sacrifice their men began, by working heart and soul to help the country in the long crisis. They have given country houses as hospitals and convalescent homes for the wounded, and many are content to wash dishes in the canteens of the troops. They are helping to till the land, they work as Red Cross helpers in the hospitals, they take up the burden in a thousand and one ways.

One has only to walk along the streets of London to see what the women are doing. They are doing the work of the men who have joined the forces. On the buses and in the tubes, they act as conductors and ticket collectors and inspectors. Half the delivery-vans that pass along the streets are driven by women, and big cars dart past with women in khaki at the wheels. Hundreds of women have learned type-writing and office work, so that they are able to help in the Government offices and businesses that are short of men. Clever women with a knowledge of languages help the censor-ship staff, women who have been educated abroad expensively, and women who have learned through sheer application in this country.

They risk their lives in the shell-filling establishments, they turn the shells and fix the driving bands of copper. They work the oxy-acetylene welding plant for the construction of aircraft and do the work skilfully. They act as post-women delivering the letters and young girls run with the telegrams; they drive the mails. On the land they do the roughest work and many of them have been very successful, though the majority are better at the lighter tasks in farm-work.

There is a military hospital in London which is entirely run by women. No wounded soldiers are better looked after than the men here, and there are few hospitals in the city bigger. There are many other hospitals in London, and in the most of them you will find London women who before the war had done nothing beyond a little housework. Now they do the most strenuous orderly duties, regular spells of work under military discipline entirely voluntary.

There can be few women in London that are not connected with the war-effort in one way or another, but for the majority it can only be in the way of patient sacrifice without the distraction of active and productive war labour. It is for them only a case of keeping "the home fires burning." And it is in this that the women of London are showing their strength. With son or husband risking his life in the field of battle, the mother and wife manage to keep cheerful and busy caring for their houses and waiting patiently without a murmur of complaint. They believe, many of them, on very reduced incomes to run their households economically and to care for the children in proper fashion, sending them out each morning to school, well fed and sufficiently clad. To manage this calls for more care, since the shillings are fewer and buy only two-thirds of that they could before the war.

In each little house, in each little street, one can see the photographs proudly displayed of the women's men-folk who are serving, and the only rule for measuring distinction between neighbours is the extent of the sacrifice. Thus the women with four sons and a husband serving are conscious of a superiority over the neighbour with one son serving and the other in the munition works. But the young wife, who gives birth to a baby while the father is in France, she stands on a pinnacle. There are some who have given all their men-folk to the country, whose every male relative has fallen. They do not spend their time in bewailing openly, though their pillows may be wet every night, but they stand, a solid phalanx, to see that their sacrifice is not in vain, that there shall be no talk of peace until the objects of the Allies are secured. The women of London have taken a man's phrase as their own, to "keep a stiff upper lip" in the face of the worst that can happen. They send their men off without shedding tears and welcome them back on leave with uniformly good cheer. It is not that they do not feel like crying in either case, but they have been led to the belief that demonstrative outbursts unnerve their men. They accept the bombs of the air-raiders as part of the game, calmly and without hysteria. There is the story of two women conductors of the 'buses that passed each other during a moonlight raid. The barrage was at its height and bombs were dropping indiscriminately as is the German habit. One girl swinging on the step of her bus calling to the other, "Stick it Bess." The answer was a cheery "What do you think."

One story is indicative of the spirit of all the London women, and indeed of all the women of Britain. A little dressmaker whose husband died and left her in poor circumstances had a posthumous son. She worked hard all her life and brought the boy up carefully, giving him an excellent education short of the university. The son went into a bank and had good prospects; still the mother worked that the boy should find her no burden. Their particular castle-in-the-air was a certain little cottage in the country that the boy was to give her when he had a branch bank of his own. There was to be no more work for the worn-out hands, except what she wished for amusement. There was every prospect of the dream coming true for the lad was straight and a hard worker. The little dress-maker was proud of her son. She compared him favourably with the sons of people who had more means at their disposal. The war broke out and the son thought it his duty to go. Though a word would have kept him back the mother did not speak it. She had nothing to give her country but her son, and she sent him with a little jest. She called her tall son "the widow's mite." His ability brought him a commission and the mother was prouder than ever. She filled her little house with his photographs, as a baby, as a boy, in his splendid young manhood. He fell in battle. The mother said simply: "I was proud of him when he was alive, I am prouder still that he died as a hero. I only wish I had more to give." And she still sits sewing; sewing with a shattered dream for company; making and mending. It is all that she can do. There are many women like her in grey old London today.

NORWEGIAN LOSSES ARE AGAIN HEAVY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Norway continues to suffer heavily from German submarines operations and other war losses. Twelve vessels, aggregating 16,236 gross tons, and valued at about three million dollars, were sunk during February, and nineteen seamen lost their lives, while twenty men are missing, a cablegram to the Norwegan Legation announced.

THE ANNUAL REPORTS OF THE UTILITIES COMMISSION PRESENTED ON SATURDAY

Construction of New Work Was Limited Owing to the Increased Cost of Labour and Material---A Slight Increase in Pumpage During the Year--General Remarks

At a meeting of the Utilities Commission held Saturday afternoon the appended reports were presented. The reports cover the operations of the various departments during the past year. Of special interest is the report of Mr. R. L. Dobbin, superintendent of the waterworks department. The reports in part are as follows:

Mr. R. L. Dobbin.

I beg to report herewith on the activities of the Waterworks Department for the year ending December 31st, 1917.

Distributing System.

Owing to the vastly increased cost of material and labour the construction of new mains and services was limited. Two-thirds of a mile of mains were laid, and 71 services, including 930 feet of 8-inch pipe at Auburn. This latter is part of the plan to connect the East Ward system with the main crossing the river at the Auburn dam.

More than the usual number of fire hydrants were repaired, 34 of them being removed and replaced. This fact and the increased cost of labour are responsible for the increase in the maintenance charges of mains and hydrants.

Pumping Station and Dam.

The Turbine Equipment Company have not yet completed their contract for the steam pumping plant. In February they removed the condenser and vacuum pump and replaced them with more efficient machines. This efficient some improvement but not sufficient to meet the test conditions on account of high losses in the steam piping, and other troubles. When these matters are corrected the contractors expect to meet the guarantee without difficulty.

There was no trouble from frazil ice, the steam unit being operated only sufficiently to keep it in working order.

In August the Commission's laboratory for the testing of the water was moved from the city buildings to the pump house and installed in the office there. Routine analyses are now made daily.

Pumpage.

The total pumpage for the year shows very little increase over 1916, and gives a daily average of 3,031,000 gallons.

The maximum rate of demand occurred on July 31st at 7.30 p.m. when the meter showed a rate of seven and a quarter million gallons per day. The total pumpage for that day was the highest during the year, 4,210,000 gallons, and it also was one of the hottest of the summer.

General Remarks.

Attached you will find the particulars regarding the extensions to the mains and services, etc., together with costs. Large increases in the cost of labour and materials are principally responsible for the increase in construction and maintenance costs, although more work was done on the maintenance of the system than in the previous years. In the case of the pump house the high cost of coal is largely responsible for the increase.

During the winter many services were frozen, this trouble being confined mainly to that portion of the city north of Hunter, east of Aylmer to the river. The soil in this locality is a very coarse gravel with practically no sand, and services with six feet of cover were frozen, showing that the frost had penetrated to an unusual depth. In other parts of the city trouble from this cause was very little.

If at all possible the work of connecting the East Ward system with the 8-inch main at Auburn should be completed this year, as its position, dependent on the one feeder at Hunter street, is precarious. Also in parts of Ashburnham the pressure is poor and the new connection would remedy this, and also indirectly increase the pressure in the business district on George street.

In conclusion I would thank the Commission for the confidence they have reposed in me during the past years, and would ask their support during the coming ones.

Yours respectfully,
R. L. DOBBIN,
Waterworks Superintendent.

Waterworks Department.

February 23rd, 1918.

To the Peterborough Utilities Commission:

Gentlemen,—I herewith submit the financial statements of the Waterworks Department for the year 1917.

During the year $4,622.23 was expended in laying mains and setting hydrants, and $1,072.82 in laying services, making a total of $5,695.05 expended in construction during the year.

The net water rates, including special frontage rates, amounted to $62,611.22. To this was added $2,000.00 charged for the use of the dam for power purposes, and $200.89 profit on material sold and used in consumers' constructions, being the difference between the market value and the inventory price. This made a total revenue of $64,812.11. The expense account including interest and sinking funds amount written off tools and plant for depreciation, $298.79 discount on debentures sold and $981.46 written off plant account in connection with the sale of the old pumps at one time used in the Auburn pumping station, amounted to $60,607.82, showing a profit on the year's operations of $4,204.29.

Respectfully submited,
S. A. ARMSTRONG,
Secretary-Treasurer.

A detailed statement is attached to Mr. Armstrong's report.

Hydro-Electric Department.

February 20th, 1918.

Gentlemen,—I herewith submit for your information, and approval the followinfg financial statemen's of the Hydro-Electric Department for the year ending December 31st, 1917.

Comparative statement of earnings and expenses.

Statement of assets and liabilities.

Comparative statement of cash receipts.

Comparative statement of power purchased.

The total earnings for the year amount to $127,248.92, being an increase of $10,969.85 over the year 1916. The divisions of the increase are as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| Domestic lighting | $ 9,022.93 |
| Commercial lighting | 197.83 |
| Power | 9,698.45 |
| Street lighting | 726.71 |
| Miscellaneous | 373.91 |
| Total increase | $19,969.85 |

Power purchased shows an increase of $16,285.71. Interest and fixed charges show an increase of $2,729.01 due to the issuing of an additional $100,000.00 worth of debentures during the year.

The total operating expenses amount to $123,505.27, showing a net profit on the year's operations of $3,743.65.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

W. GEO. HENDERSON,
Accountant.

"Fiske O'Hara"

Coming in a New Play

A theatrical season would be incomplete without a visit from Fiske O'Hara, the popular Irish actor-singer. The announcement of his coming is always welcomed by local theatregoers, and the fact that he will be seen at this theatre for two performances next Saturday, March 9, is pleasing news, indeed. Mr. O'Hara is this season presenting a new Irish romantic comedy—"The Man from Wicklow." The play is in three acts and is the work of Anna Nichols. The scene of the comedy is Wicklow, Ireland, and the time the early part of the last century. Mr. O'Hara plays the role of Robert Emmett O'Donovan, the dashing sort of young Irishman which he is so ideally suited to portray. It is a love story, of course, one of those charming, wholesome plays which appeals to all classes of theatregoers.

The story concerns the love of Robert Emmett O'Donovan for Judith Norwood. Judith, while pretending to return his love, cares only for his wealth and the luxuries it will buy her. Her little sister, Eileen, who, in her childish way loves Robert, innocently divulges to him her sister's real attitude. Robert goes away, returning some years later. Little Eileen, now grown to beautiful young womanhood, has carried her love for O'Donovan through the years of his absence, and his return develops a charming romance, which ends, of course, with his winning the lovable little heroine, while her sister, Judith, frustrated in her second attempt to capture O'Donovan, marries her cousin, with whom she is really in love, his poverty being the barrier between them.

Mr. O'Hara has a number of new songs written for his use in "The Man from Wicklow," and he sings them as only O'Hara can.

The special orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. O'Hara's general musical director, which was such a notable feature of last season's tour, is again with the organization, and will render a special musical programme before the play and between the acts.

Manager Pitou has surrounded his star with a notable company of players, and the scenic environment and costumes are reported to be unusually handsome.

TO-DAY'S WAR NEWS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Germany's occupation of the Aland Islands is only the preliminary to the total occupation of Finland. Germany has announced to the Stockholm Foreign Office her intention to occupy Finland, and Sweden has protected. Germany advised Sweden that it was necessary to temporarily occupy Finland to restore order, but gave assurances that she had no intention to take permanent possession of the territory.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The Russians have begun destroying the bridges on the Trans-Siberian Railroad between Lake Baikal and the Chinese frontier. John F. Stevens, chairman of the American Railway Commission, reported this to-day to the State Department. While without details, officials here believe the Russians are destroying the bridges to prevent an expected advance of Japanese troops. A large number of other structures have been mined, Mr. Stevens also reported, so they could be readily destroyed.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Continued preparatory movements on the part of the Germans along the Western front are noted to-day by the War Department in its review of the military situation for the week ending March 2. The momentum of battle is increasing, the statement declares, citing three attempts by the enemy to reach the lines held by American troops as an example of what is taking place on a larger scale along the entire Western front.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PETROGRAD, March 4.—The peace treaty with Germany, signed at Brest-Litovsk this afternoon, is now regarded as only a "scrap of paper."

The highest enthusiasm for fighting is prevalent throughout Petrograd. The Petrograd Pan-Executive Council has called an extraordinary session of soldiers, peasants and Cossacks for Moscow, March 12, to decide whether to accept or reject peace.

As a result of the German advance, this conference may decide to tear up the treaty and declare a "holy war."

The movement to re-unite all democratic parties for the purpose of fighting defensively to the last is growing.

Tried To Enlist But Evaded Conscription---Police Got Him

George Holly Made a Dash For Liberty Last Night But Police Overhauled Him in Fine Burst of Speed

"I tried to enlist three times, and I thought that if it wasn't worth while taking me then there was no use bothering with conscription." This was George Holly's excuse to Magistrate Dumble this morning in pleading guilty to a breach of the Military Service Act. He neither presented himself for medical examination nor did he report for service.

"I had the clothes on three times," Holly asserted. "I was in the 129th battalion for four months, but they turned me down."

Magistrate Dumble instructed Chief Thompson to hand him over to the Military authorities for medical examination.

Arrested last night Holly broke away from Sergt. Kidd and P. C. McIntosh near the Post Office, and dashed west on Hunter street with the police at his heels. The trio streaked across George street under full steam. At Chambers street Holly darted in to the south sidewalk, skidded in front of the Oriental and was almost blotted out when Sergt. Kidd caught him with a flying tackle and both went down in a heap with Holly underneath. The price of his attempt to escape was the usual persuative measures and an uncomfortable hammerlock on the way to the police station.

Sir Adam Beck In Peterborough On Wednesday Night

Sir Adam Beck and the Provincial Hydro-electric Commission, the Ontario Municipal Electric Association, want to extend to the entire province the blesing which London has reaped in a small way through the possession of a Hydro-radial railway. The people have it in their own hands, through their representatives at Ottawa to bring about this glorious consummation.

HELP THE PEOPLE.

The Hydro-electric associations asked the government for aid the publicly owned radial systems to be constructed, but were met with the answer that such assistance would have to be delayed until after the war. The Hydro Associations want to make a start on a project which will go far to improve after-the-war conditions. The nationalization of the Grand Trunk is the first step in the development of a project which will do more for the people than the Hydro-electric system, much as it has accomplished has done for the people. A road operated to give service and not provide dividends for Old Country shareholders will prove such a boon that people will wonder why they had to wait so long for it.

Big Increase In Wages For G. T. R. Shops

(Canadian Press Despatch)

MONTREAL, March 4.—Wage increases averaging $300 per year each, with a general nine-hour day, for practically every man in the Grand Trunk shops in Ontario, are now in force, having commenced on Friday last.

WEDDING BELLS

NORTHEY—SMITH.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized in Bobcaygeon by the Rev. W. T. Smith, pastor of the Presbyterian church on Feb. 27th, 1918, at 2 o'clock, when Nellie, the fourth daughter of Mrs. Geo. Smith, was married to Mr. William Northey, the second son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Northey, Lakehurst. The young couple were unattended.

Their many friends join in wishing them a happy married life. The young people will reside at Lakehurst on their return from a short honeymoon.

OBITUARY

SARAH COOPER.

Death released a patient sufferer from a long and painful illness on Saturday, March 2, in the person of Sarah J. McIlvena, relict of the late Joseph Cooper, of Warsaw.

Deceased was born in Warsaw 67 years ago, where she resided previous to coming to the city in 1910. Her husband predeceased her in 1905.

There are left to mourn her death three brothers and one sister; James, of Apsley; John of Charlton, Edward and Eliza at home.

Funeral from the late residence, No. 5 Grand Central Apartments, 343 1-2 George street, on Tuesday, at 2.30 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Robert Pogue.

The remains will be placed in the Little Lake Cemetery mortuary chapel pending removal in the spring to the family lot in Warsaw.

GERMANY'S COLOSSAL DEBT.

AMSTERDAM, March 4. — Germany's national debt has risen to nearly 124,000,000,000 marks, the Reichstag was informed by Count von Posadowsky-Wehner, former Vice-Chancellor.

TURNIPS MAY BE WASTED.

Thousands of Bushels Waiting for Cars to Ship Them.

WOODSTOCK, March 4.—Farmers around Richmond, Drumbo and Princeton have thousands of bushels of turnips on their hands owing to the insufficient supply of freight cars in which to ship them. They state if they are not supplied with cars this month the turnips will be no good for home or foreign consumption.

HERE'S THE CHAMPION EGG-LAYING HEN!

Laid Three Eggs in Six Hours—Two a day Nearly Every Day Since New Year's.

CHATHAM, March 4.—A local hen is setting a record for egg-laying. She has deposited two eggs a day on most of the days since the first of the year, and has never missed at least one egg. Saturday she laid three eggs in six hours. A poultry expert from the East has paid $4 each for six eggs. The hen has beaten all records so far made.

Meteors From the Moon.

Taking up an old theory of meteors Emile Belot, French astronomer, has attempted to demonstrate that these bodies may have resulted from volcanic eruptions on the moon and other satellites of the solar system's planets. He finds that an initial velocity of projection comparable to that which has been observed in the eruption of Cotopaxi and only twice as great as that developed in artillery of the present war would be sufficient to carry a body free from the moon and he has made calculations of the speed of projection and other conditions that would cause such a body to become a satellite of the moon, of the earth, or of the sun.

Simple Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

Could Exterminate Germans.

Experiments made since the German bombardment of Armentieres with a mysterious gas shell have disclosed that the poison was arsine, known in the laboratory as arseniureted hydrogen, one of the deadliest fumes known to the chemists, according to a trench correspondent.

In Armentieres the gas from the shells continued its deadly work for nearly a week, although the shells were all thrown in one hour. More than 4,000 men, women and children died, many in convulsions and many stark mad.

The significant fact in regard to the arsine bomb which the Germans likely overlooked is that while the amount of the drug in Germany is limited, the allies have limitless supplies. If Britain and France wish to retaliate they could in less than a year manufacture these bombs in sufficient quantities to kill every living thing in the German empire.

It would be a question only of getting enough airplanes to carry and drop them.

ANNUAL ESTIMATES OF FARM VALUES COMPILED FOR THE PAST YEAR

Average Value of Farm Lands Both Improved and Unimproved Has Increased by Three Dollars Per Acre —Farm Stock Values

WAGES OF FARM HELP

OTTAWA, March 5.—The Census and Statistics Office has published its annual estimates of farms values in 1917 as compiled from the reports of correspondents at the end of January, 1918. The estimates comprise (1) the average values of farm land, (2) the average wages paid for farm help and (3) the average values of farm live stock and of wool.

AVERAGE VALUES OF FARM LAND.

According to the returns received, the average value of farm land for the whole of Canada, including land improved and unimproved, together with dwelling houses, barns, stables and other farm buildings, is approximately $44 per acre as compared with $41 in 1916. The average values by provinces are as follows: Prince Edward Island, $83.7; Nova Scotia $33.36; New Brunswick, $28.8; Quebec, $53; Ontario, $55.3; Manitoba, $31; Saskatchewan, $26; Alberta, $26.7; British Columbia $149. In the last named province the higher average is due to orcharding and fruit growing.

AVERAGE WAGES OF FARM HELP.

The average wages paid for farm help during the year 1917, have increased substantially since 1916 and have again reached the highest level on record. In many cases they are double what they were before the war. For the whole of Canada the wages per month of farm help during the summer, including board, average $63.63 for male, and $34.31 for female help, as compared with $43.23, and $22.46 in 1916. For the year 1917, including board, the wages averaged $610.60 for males and $364 for females as compared with $397 and $228 in 1916. The average value of board per month is returned as $19.44 for males and $14.79 for females, as compared with $17 for males and $13 for females in 1916. By provinces, the average wages per month for males and females respectively, in the summer season, including board, were as follows: Prince Edward Island $30.74 and $22.63; Nova Scotia $53.75 and $26.43; New Brunswick, $57... and 28.14; Quebec $59.09 and $28.98; Ontario $59 and $31.96; Manitoba, 67.97 and $40.28; Saskatchewan $73.21 and $41.09; Alberta, $76.09 and $44.44; British Columbia, $78.12 and 48.30.

AVERAGE VALUES OF FARM LIVE STOCK AND OF WOOL

On the whole there is but little change reported in the value per head of horses; in some of the Provinces the value has remained stationary or has even declined. For cattle, sheep and swine however values are substantially higher than last year, and are higher than in any previous year for which records have been collected. For Canada, the average value of hroses, three years old and over is $167 as compared with $160 in 1916, milch cows are $84 as against $70; cattle between one year old and three years average ... against $43; sheep are $14.93 against $10.48 last year and swine are $17.33 against $11.98 per cwt. The average value of wool is 59 cents per lb. unwashed and 75 cents per lb. washed. Correspondents were requested to ascertain as nearly as possible the average value pr head of each description of farm animal, and for calculation of total values these averages have been applied to the total number of farm animals are returned in June last. The results are as follows: Horses $429,123,000, as compared with $418,696,000 in 1916; milch cows $274,081,000 as against $198,896,000; other cattle $270,595,000 as against $204,477,000; sheep $35,576,000 as against $20,927,000, and swine $92...6,000 as against $60,700,000. The total value of farm live stock in Canada is estimated to be $1,102,261,000, as compared with $903,686,000; the estimate for 1916 as finally revised by the Census returns for the Prairie Provinces. In 1917, for the first time, the total value of farm live stock exceeds one billion dollars.

Typewriting Fades Out.

It has been found that typewriting on parchment deeds is not durable. In deeds deposited within very recent years many lines are illegible and several lines have completely disappeared.

Crayon Will Help.

Uses Zone Time at Sea.

The French navy having recently adopted the use of standard or zone time at sea, the hydrographic service of the French ministry of marine has just issued a large chart of the world, on the Mercator projection, showing the limits of the standard hour zones on both land and sea, together with other pertinent information, says the Scientific American. The land areas in which standard time is used are indicated by red tinting for the even-numbered zones (beginning with zone 0, in which Greenwich time is used), and blue for the odd-numbered zones. Violet tinting is used in the case of countries such as British India, Nigeria, British East Africa and Venezuela, in which the legal time is intermediate between that of two standard meridians. Countries not using zone time are tinted yellow, and in case they uses a uniform official time the difference between such time and that of Greenwich is indicated, also the location of the observatory, if any, from which the time is taken.

HUNS WITH FRENCH MAP REHEARSED FOUR TIMES RAID ON AMERICAN LINE

German Arrangements Broken Up by Heavy Machine Gun Fire—Wounded Americans Tell of Heroism of Their Comrades in Battle.

PRISONERS EXPECT DEFEAT OF TEUTONS

With the American Army in France, March 5.—A plan of attack, including a map of the American positions, indicating every dugout, which was removed from the body of the Prussian captain who led the recent assault upon the sector northwest of Toul shows how completely the Germans perpare their raids—if, in fact, this was but a simple raid not having as its ultimate object the retention of a portion of the salient.

The map goes into such detail as to show every machine gun emplacement, every trench and every depression in the ground within the American lines. At the bottom there is simply a line drawn labelled "Our front line." Along this are five shaded portions, each marked "Nest."

Four rehearsals were held for the attack and the troops who made it were specially picked from new arrivals of fresh troops in the sector. They were told that the Americans were in front of them.

GERMAN SCHEME BROKEN UP.

After the artillery had nearly levelled the Aremican position the Germans started out from their nests, each of which contained forty pioneers to precede the infantry and five to follow it. The two groups upon the extreme right of the Americans went around this flank and the group upon the extreme left carried out a similar movement there.

The two groups in the centre had intended to attack directly, but the American defence changed all the arrangements. When they were met by the heavy machine gun fire from the American lines they saw it would be impossible to gain a footing there, changed their direction and followed the other groups around the flank.

The duty of the poioneers preceding the infantry was to clean up any wire that had not been broken by the artillery, while the pioneers who followed carried large quantities of explosives for the purpose of cleaning up the dugouts.

SOME PRISONERS EXPECT DEFEAT.

Official reports of the interrogation of the prisoners taken by the Americans show that all of them do not believe Germany will win the war. One of the men told the intelligence officers he presumed that the Americans, like the Germans, did not want to fight, but had to. The officers quickly changed the German's viewpoint by informing him that all of the troops in the attacked positions were volunteers.

One prisoner, whose home is in German Lorraine, said he thought the Fatherland would lose the war, but he hoped not. He knew nothing about the Americans except that they were in the war, the German newspapers not printing much upon the subject, he said, and being slow in reaching the front lines because of mail congestion.

This prisoner said he was convinced that the recent strikes in Germany were caused by a desire for peace, adding that all Germany wanted the war to end. He was certain that an offensive was coming, but did not believe it would be launched before April 1.

The Bitter Bit.

A good story comes from sorely-tried Venice of the "biter-bit" kind. The Kaiser was once a yearly visitor to the "Queen of the Adriatic" on his way to and from Corfu. At the Palazzo da Mula he met the famous beauty, Countess Morosini and her daughter. The countess was the recipient of many gifts from her imperial guest, and conspicuous among these, on the palace walls, was a large oil painting of the Kaiser, signed with his own august hand. Now comes the sequel. An enemy aviator, bent on one of those piratical raids upon Venice for which the allies will hold the central powers to strict accountability, dropped a bomb on the centre of the huge roof of the Palazzo da Mula. To the delight of the Venetians, the bomb passed through three floors of the palace; it smashed a marble slab on which were recorded the Kaiser's periodical visits, and, singling out the imperial painting, blew it to shreds!

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, March 5.—Scarcity of good grades of corn had a strengthening effect yesterday on the market for that cereal. So, too, did assertions that with a normal spring no corn would be moving from farms three weeks hence, as farmers would then be busy with field work. The prevailing warm, moist weather was regarded also as likely to restrict the crop movement. After opening unchanged at $1.27, the market scored a slight advance.

Signs of export demand at St. Louis tended to strengthen the oats market. Buying here, however, was only of a scattered character. Opening prices, which ranged from the same as Saturday's finish to 1-8c higher, with May 87 5-8 to 87 3-4, were followed by a moderate upturn.

Winnipeg, March 5—The oats market opened 1-8c higher for May delivery at 94 7-8c. Flax opened 1c higher for May at $3.71. Inspections on Saturday totalled 525 cars. Contract grades of wheat numbered 275 cars.

Doing Their Bit.

War tanks carry pigeons for sending out messages in case of need. This is yet another use to which pigeons have been put in this war.

The ingenuity of the French in this respect, however, is hard to beat, observes a correspondent. In one of our allies' war museums is an apparatus which shows how the French have attempted to get news from their invaded territories. It consists of a balloon, which carries 40 carrier pigeons. In floating over the land now occupied by the enemy it drops from time to time a little parachute, to which is attached a basket containing a carrier pigeon, an aluminium message holder, several sheets of thin paper, pencil and detailed instructions for use.

The finder of the basket, after writing a message, has only to slip it into the holder in the bird's leg and set it free. The homing instinct then allows the pigeon to find its way back to the French lines.

Small, who was connected with a watch case company for 26 years, has become chief inspector of ordnance, navy department, and is stationed at Bethlehem, Pa. His son, Willis T. Small, Jr., is at Anniston, Ala., as a member of Battery A of East Orange. A namesake of Capt. Edson I. Small and a son of Willis Small, Sr., quietly departed from home without telling about his destination and enlisted. He is stationed at Syracuse, N. Y.

Why It Is "Ham Meadow."

Ham meadow is the name given to a field near Dresden, because it was bought from the proceeds of a sale of a ham. A farmer sold a tourist a ham for $87, and immediately purchased a five-acre meadow with the money. This land has now been christened locally with the name of the "Ham Meadow." "Might one be permitted to inquire," comments a Berlin journal, "whether the law will have anything to say in this disgraceful piece of usury, or is it only the wretched little hoarders of a few pounds of potatoes who are punished?"

War Horses Are Veterans.

Driving the same team of horses for more than three years at the front is the record of a man in the Hussars. He took them to France on August 16, 1914. They have been at Mons, the Aisne, the Marne, Ypres, Neuve Chapelle, on the Somme, and at Arras in April, when Vimy ridge was taken. They have never missed a day's march.

"THE CLUE IN THE AIR"

A DETECTIVE STORY—Isabel Ostrander

"Not she! Her fighting blood is up, and besides her husband can protect her now that the whole story is out. Quimby would not dare to take a chance of putting anything over since we are on to his scheme, but Terhune made sure of it by telling him he would be put under arrest the minute a move was made against her. I was for putting him away last night, but she would not hear of it. For the sake of her mother's memory she is going to let him pay back what he can without disgrace. She's a fine girl."

The Foxes' apartment was in even more wild disorder than on McCarty's visit of the morning. It was as if its occupants had fled in the face of a threatened catastrophe, seizing what lay nearest to their hands and flinging the rest about in a frenzy. Only the room of the tragedy had been straightened and rearranged; the papers and trash had disappeared and the shades were decently lowered. The adjoining bedroom, too, which had been the dead girl's, was in order, and seemed already, in spite of its flaunting draperies and bright colors, to wear an air of desolation.

"And this is where she was killed." Dennis was standing before the window in the library.

"Yes. When the man appeared, Marion Rowntree shrank back in the little three cornered place by the piano like this—" McCarty endeavored to suit the action to the word but finding that his girth did not lend itself to an illustration, he stepped aside hastily, lest he evoke critical comment. "You remember when she told us first on the train coming back from Chicago, I asked her which way he went but she had been too overcome with the horror of it to notice. She said that he had just appeared from nowhere, like, and then vanished again. I don't get it at all."

"He must have gone through the archway into the parlour and down the hall," Dennis remarked. "Come till we look at the doors."

They examined them both thoroughly, experimenting with the lock and chain, but could come to only one conclusion. If Ivy Collins had fastened them, as Marion Rowntree was prepared to swear, no human agency could have opened them from the outside.

Returning once more to the library, Dennis threw up the windows and looked out but no jutting cornice or ledge ran beneath and there was no foothold where the man, be he ever so agile, could have clung.

"Unless he was hiding in the flat all the time in spite of her searching I give it up," declared McCarty. "The two fireplaces are fakes, with no chimney that he could have squeezed down, and a man can't pass through solid walls. Denny, where have you got to?"

But Dennis did not reply. He was hanging perilously out of the air shaft window in the bedroom, craning his neck upwards, and his whole body quivered with excitement, like a pointer with his quarry. He drew back at last, dusting his hands upon his trousers, and turned to McCarty with an odd gleaming in his eyes.

"You said something a while back about going up on the roof," he said, his voice shaking with an effort to speak calmly. "I'd like to have a look up there right now."

"What is it?" McCarty asked curiously. "Have you got an idea about it, Denny? You don't think that he came in that window?"

"Never mind what I think!" Dennis started headlong for the door. "I want to see that roof!"

They ascended quickly and Dennis was through the trap door and out like a cat without waiting for his bulkier companion. He was already at the air shaft opening when McCarty clambered out upon the roof, and he knelt by the extreme edge, waving frantically.

McCarty hastened panting to him, but all he saw were two stout pipes which lay across the top of the shaft, bisecting it, and ran along to a leader at the cornice. He drew back shivering, from the brink of the well-like opening.

"Come away from the edge of that, Denny!" he growled. "'Tis a wonder you are not killed a dozen times a day with the risks that you run!"

"Do you see that?" Dennis pointed triumphantly to one of the conduits. "See the wide shiny mark on that pipe?"

"I do!" His friend's excitement was communicating itself to McCarty and he dropped down on all fours as near to the opening as he dared. "It looks as if it had been rubbed up and polished."

"That's just what happened! And it's a rope rubbing around it that burnished it Mac! A rope with a weight swinging on the end of it—the weight of a man that let himself down to that bedroom window and evened his score with Ivy Collins!"

"Holy Saint Patrick!" McCarty sat back on his heels and stared at Dennis. "Would it bear the weight of him do you think?"

"It's strong enough to hold up three of him!" declared the other. "Them two are water pipes and there is no soft lead in them and no joints over the shaft."

"Twould be a damn' nervy stunt," McCarty uttered.

"It would not. Any fellow with his muscles developed and limber could do it. 'Tis nothing to what we are ready to do at any fire. If I'd a rope handy I would show you this minute. Mac, that's how the fellow did the trick! And he needn't have come up here on the roof at all. Lean forward and look—you'll not be toppling over while I am here.

"He could have reached out of any of those windows near the top of the shaft, thrown the loose end of a rope over the pipe, caught it, and hauled it around till the ends were hanging even, and let himself down hand over hand, holding on to the two of them together."

"And back the same way?" McCarty's voice was filled with awe.

"Sure! When he came up again, and got level with the window he wanted to get in, he'd swing himself till he could drop in over the sill; and then letting go of one strand of the rope he would haul on the other, and pull it back from over the pipe. He could troll the whole thing up and take it away with him. 'Twould not have to be a hawser, you know; a rope as big as your thumb will hold a man's weight, and he had it doubled between his hands."

"That's how he done it, Mac, as sure as you are alive, for if he had worked from up here and just given the rope a turn around the pipe, it would not leave a wide smudged mark like that. Look! You can see other streaks not so bright where he pitched the rope along to get it near the middle. And the streaks are only over toward that side of the pipe; there are none from the middle to the end at all. He flung the rope up from one of the windows on that side."

"They're the small apartments — the ones marked 'B' on every floor." McCarty rose heavily, and dusted his knees. "Denny, I believe that you have struck it! That's how the wanderin' devil got in, but who in the world would have thought it? Come on till we have a look at those flats, and see if we can find a trace of him."

"I thought that you and the inspector went through them all the night of the murder," remarked Dennis as they made their way toward the trap-door.

"We did," McCarty admitted. "But it was the old story of seeing what we were looking for, and being blind to the rest. We expected nothing and we found it. About how far down would he be flinging the rope from, Denny?"

"The nearer the top, the more likely," Dennis averred. "Twould be an impossibility from more than three floors down, and that would be taking an awful chance of the rope twisting and hitting one of the windows on the south side."

"I've the memorandum still that the bell boy gave me the night of the murder, with the names of the tenants and the flats that they occupy." McCarty felt through his pockets.

"Here it is. Third floor down, being the sixth from the street, would be Baxter's. They are the two old cranks with asthma, that threatened to write to the newspapers complaining about our waking them up. Neither of them could throw a ball of cord over the gate. The next flat up is closed for the summer, and the top is occupied by a family named Armitage; consumptive looking mother and two daughters. Let us try the empty flat first."

Descending the stairs, they halted on the seventh floor and McCarty opened the door of apartment "B," with the pass key obtained earlier from the superintendent.

Within all seemed orderly and wore the appearance of having been undisturbed for many weeks, the shades lowered carefully and the furniture covered with linen. Like that of the pseudo Mr. Antonio it was a four-room apartment, the hall running toward the street front, the two windows opening on the air shaft on the right, the dining room and kitchen on the left whose respective windows opened on the five foot court which separated the Glamorgan from the next house. The living room and bedroom were at the front facing the street, the former being divided only by the intervening wall from the room corresponding in size and location with the one below in which the tragedy had taken place.

"Go, slow, Denny," cautioned McCarty. "The dust is thick and there might be tracks."

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys and Neutralize Irritating Acids

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying, and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.

Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey)
NUJOL Dept., 26 Broadway, New York City.

Dear Sir:—

I am a married man, and we have three children. My wife, like most other women—so the family physician tells me—suffers from constipation. With the first two we had great trouble while they were nursing, all because of the fact that it was necessary for my wife to take medicine for constipation, as a result of which the children not only suffered, but were pale and cross, until they were large enough to eat for themselves. With our last child the same trouble began, and the physician when called on for medicine, said "My! My! it's impossible to give anything that will not hurt the babe." This put me to thinking, and as I had used NUJOL, I finally persuaded my wife to try it, and it proved as I suspected. It relieved the mother without hurting or affecting the babe. As a result we have the healthiest, happiest child I ever saw. [Name and address on request.]

It is absolutely harmless and it may do the same for you.

Try it.

THINKING ALOUD IN RUSSIA

Crowds Assemble on Streets to Participate in Debates Which Really Amount to Very Little.

Along the Nevsky that evening in the parks and open spaces, little herds of people were packed together as sheep crowd together under a tree on an August afternoon. In the center two persons debated, shaking their hands in each others' faces. They had been talking like that for weeks all over Russia, writes Arthur Ruhle in Collier's Weekly.

All Petrograd was one big village meeting—the village habit of talking over together the village's business being transferred to the capital. And coming in late at night from the edge of town, you could see every now and then these black little clumps of people, still talking, still huddled there, vaguely pathetic, like sheep under the trees.

Any one of hundreds of excited phrases flung off in these little debating clubs might, I suppose, have sent a man to jail or Siberia a generation ago. Now they could say anything, gather anywhere, listen as long as they wanted. Russians have a gift for talking and a happy lack of self-consciousness in doing it. They really like to make speeches. Mr. Root, in one of the lighter moments of his stay in Petrograd, remarked that one of the tragedies of the Russian revolution was the turning loose on the world 180,000,000 orators.

Now one saw some old peasant, a giant of a man, come down with a barge of firewood from the north, perhaps, holding forth with great quaintness of phrase and gesture to an amused group of city folks. Or while one talked some expansive old fellow, in the long coat, cap and boots of the old-style merchant, would be doing a sort of comic accompaniment on the edge of the crowd, throwing out his arms and putting a "galubchik moi" ("my little dove") between every other sentence.

Much of this talk, which looks interesting—so expressive is voice and gesture—turns out to be a mere sort of thinking aloud.

Indians in the Great War.

Indians have been volunteering for service in the United States army since 1861. In 1892 Lieutenant Scott, later chief of the staff, organized and trained a troop of the Seventh cavalry, which was highly commended by the inspector general of the war department.

The Indian is trained as the Swiss train their boys, so that they may be able to fire a gun accurately and earn a living. He has all the qualities of a good soldier—endurance, patience, courage and an instinct for scouting, London Tit-Bits says.

The Canadian government recognized the great fighting ability of the many Indian nations and tribes who volunteered their services for king and country at the outbreak of the war, and there are hundreds of Indians enrolled in many of the different Canadian regiments at the front. Many have made the supreme sacrifice, among the first to fall being Lieut. Cameron Brant of the Six Nations Indians, who was a lineal descendant of the distinguished colonial warrior, Capt. Joseph Brant of Revolutionary fame.

The Strength of Woman.

"The work women are doing in this war!" exclaimed a member of the railroads war board, at a banquet. "Driving ammunition trucks, digging trenches; even, as in Russia, fighting in the front line!

"Woman comes more and more to resemble Cornelius Husk's daughter, Mame. When Husky Mame, as she was known in the township, presented her future husband to the old man, Corn Husk sighed and said:

"'Take her, son, but take good keer on her, for the little ladybird has been rig tender-like. Four acres a day is all I ever ast her to plow, and two acres of corn is all she's been used to hoe 'twixt sun-up and dark. She kin do light work, such as rail-splittin' and well-diggin', but she ain't used to rough stuff, and you must be gentle with her. I tell you, son, it's hard for the old man to give his little sunshine up. He'll have to split his own wood and tend his own stock now.'"

Airmen's Food.

In order that airmen may be supplied with hot food, it has been suggested that airplane builders provide wall cases to hold vacuum bottles of preheated food.

HOW GERMANS TREAT PRISONERS

The following is an interesting story of a horseman's experience on the C. P. R. steamer "Mount Temple" when she was captured by the Germans and his subsequent treatment while a prisoner. Simard is now on the C. P. R. SS. "Melita."

I, Joseph Simard, 66 years of age, of Montreal, left Montreal on the 29th Nov., 1916, on the SS. "Mount Temple" as horseman, on my first voyage to sea. There were about 750 horses on board and about 45 men to take care of them. Nothing abnormal happened until the 6th of Dec., and about 3 p.m. on that day a cruiser flying the British flag, came towards us at right angles on the starboard side and at about a quarter of a mile distant she hauled down the British flag and hoisted the German flag, she then fired about a dozen shots at us. The Chief Steward, Mr. Gilbert, was killed on the after deck while standing next to me, and I also heard that there had been another member of the crew killed. I was wounded in three places, one piece of shell amputating the third lower part of my right leg, another piece struck me about the middle part of the leg, and a third piece striking me above the thigh, came out at the right side of the basin. I crawled among the dead horses for safety and the next thing I saw was the crew leaving the ship in lifeboats. I gathered my strength and lowered myself over the side till I reached the water, where I was picked up by one of the lifeboats. The German Cruiser "Moewe" sent a launch and took us all prisoners, and one of our crew died on board. The German doctor finished the amputation of my leg and I was then put into the cruiser's hospital. I was on board the "Moewe" for four days, and I was well treated and the food was good. I was then transferred to the "Yarrowdale" along with the rest of our crew, and we were on board this ship until the 1st of January 1917. The doctor of the "Yarrowdale" was very rough and didn't seem to care to attend to the wounded at all, and I was locked in the hospital and could not see very much. We were not too well treated, and on New Year's morning all I had for breakfast was dry bread and cold water. We were all landed at Swinemunde and four English captains and myself, wounded, were transferred to a tug and taken up the river to a place called the Australian Hospital, and the first thing they did was to remove the stitches which were put into my leg by the doctor of the "Moewe" and which the doctor of the "Yarrowdale" did not trouble to remove. The doctor at the Australian Hospital was very angry about it, and the removal of the stitches gave me a lot of pain. I was at this hospital for five days, and was well cared for and had good food. After my time expired at the hospital I was sent to barracks, where I was very badly treated. I was there for about 15 days, and the feeding and sleeping accommodation was very bad, my bed consisting of a bag filled with wood shavings, which was very hard, and we had very little coal. From this place I was transferred to Dundernin and was there for another 15 days and experienced the same discomforts, i. e., bad food, very little coal and bad sleeping accommodation. I was then sent to Brandenberg, and was there until I was released on the 19th of January, 1918. It was very cold at this place and there was nothing to keep us warm and I had to sleep in my clothes. I was very badly fed and we had no soap to wash ourselves with, except a few pieces sent out by the British Red Cross Society, and had it not been for this society sending us parcels of food we would have starved. The German guards and sentries took from us what was left of our meals, as they said that the prisoners got more food than they did. In one month 1,500 Russians died from starvation in this camp. The number of prisoners in Brandenburg is as nearly as follows: 18,000 Russians, 12,000 French, 2,000 British, and about 500 Italians. On account of the British prisoners being more stubborn than the others, they used the Russians as horses to draw waggons full of all kinds of material, to and from the station. It took about 50 or 60 men to draw one of these waggons. I saw a Russian shot dead for refusing to take his boots off and give them to one of the guards, after having stated that he had paid for them himself. Two other Russians were wounded by the same shot. I also saw a man struck on the head with the butt of a rifle to force him to work, the man being unable to do so on account of weakness, and he died three days later. In the camp there was a gaol, and in this place there were 2 Russians and 1 Frenchman. One day the place was burned down and the guard that had the key refused to open the door and with the help of the rest of the guard he kept the prisoners back who tried to break in to save the people inside, and the result was that the unfortunate men in the gaol were burned to cinders. The guards were very strict and their officers gave them full power. The prisoners have to be on parade at 5 a.m. to see if there are any deserters and to find workers. I had to turn out with the rest and had to support myself with two pieces of wood because they would not supply me with crutches. One morning I refused to turn out and the guard threatened to put his bayonet through me, but instead of that he took me before the Commanding Officer, who seeing my infirmity released me from falling into line in the morning. I heard during my stay there that four munition factories were closed on account of the shortage of material. I passed through Berlin twice during my captivity, and I heard from a Frenchman and a German non-commissioned officer, that the Kaiser had four castles in Berlin with copper roofs and that the roofs of three of these castles had been removed and turned into munitions.

On my arrival in London the Canadian Red Cross took great care of me and supplied me with new clothes and very good food, and they also showed me London from one of their cars, for all of which I am very grateful.

I wish to thank the commander and officers of the SS. "Melita" for the kindness and courtesy they have shown me during my voyage back to Canada, the comfort of my sleeping accommodation, and the food being the best I have ever experienced.

I am greatly indebted to Doctor C. A. Dupont, captain in the R. A. M. C., and late surgeon of the C. P. R., for acting as my interpreter and thus enabling me to set forth my experiences in English.

JOSEPH SIMARD.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

CHAPTER VII.

The next day my arm pained me a good deal, but I scarcely minded it because of the memory of George's heartfelt words:

"Thank God you weren't killed!"

The doctor had dressed my arm, and had told me that but for my husband's knowledge of first aid the cut might have proved very serious because of the loss of blood.

It was another proof of George's efficiency. It seemed to me there was nothing he did not know. And I was so young, so unversed in all the things which had made up his life. Would I ever learn?

Of course George had telephoned Mrs. Loring of the accident, and she had been very solicitous over it—so he told me. That they would come and call the next evening to see how I was. I never dreamed, so I was much astonished when George came home to dinner that he suggested I change my dress.

"But why, George? We are going nowhere."

"Please do as I ask. Put on something dainty, one of those tea gowns I bought you. They are so loose they will not bind your arm." The doctor had insisted that I use a sling. And I had fashioned one out of a broad dark blue ribbon that matched the simple housedress I wore.

I said no more but immediately called Annie to heup me change. I put on a chiffon and georgette crepe tea-gown with angel sleeves. It was pale blue and lavender, a frenchy combination which had pleased George's fastidious taste when he saw it in an exclusive shop. I could not find a piece of ribbon the same colour so had to use white for a sling. But when I again presented myself to my husband in the soft trailing gown, with even stockings and slippers to match, I was repaid for my trouble by his approval.

"There! you look a little different. It is wonderful what proper dressing does for a woman. You must learn the colours you can wear and then keep to them. Individuality in dress is very necessary to the woman who would be well gowned; amost as necessary as personal individuality if she is to be popular."

"You lay great stress upon being popular, don't you George?" I asked.

Popular Socially.

"Certainly! why not? If one is in society, they must be of it or they certainly are not a social success."

Just then the bell rang and Annie announced Mr. and Mrs. Loring—so saving me further discussion of a subject in which I had scant interest. I really was rather frightened of this social life which George seemed to think so necessary.

"You poor dear!" Mrs. Loring gushed, after her husband had been introduced to me. "Does your arm pain you badly?"

"Not so much this evening. It was quite painful until the doctor dressed it again this afternoon," I replied.

"Such cuts are soemtimes dangerous," Mr. Loring said.

"So the doctor said," I replied, then I went on and told with much elaboration of George's skill, praising him in extravagant terms, winding up by saying: "but he knows how to do almost everything."

"You are very fortunate to have married such a paragon," Mrs. Loring returned, laughing.

I looked at George, and his face was hard and angry. I had displeased him in some way, but how? I never dreamed that it was my praise of him; that he resented my saying what I had about his ability.

George is Displeased.

I noticed too, a peculiar look on Mr. Loring's face, a cynical look that brought the colour to my face.

"Don't blush!" Madge Loring said. "That beautiful gown is more becoming to your paleness. Where did you get it? It is lovely."

"George bought it for me. He has exquisite taste," I told them.

"Ring for Annie!" George interrupted.

I did so, and he gave her an order in alow tone. She went out and returned in a few moments with some wine and sweets. I blushed once more that I had not thought to order some refreshments for our guests—people with whom my husband had been intimate before I knew him. But I had no chance to say anything, for George took the conversation into his own hands, and they laughed and talked about people of whom I never had heard; of things of which I knew nothing.

I felt so left out. I wondered if they realized how really left out I was. At home we never did that—never talked of things of which people with us knew nothing, without explaining.

I had yet to learn that society people often lack the kindness of heart possessed by the middle classes. And I had much more than that to learn. Much more!

After our callers had left I said something anent them, to which George replied impatiently. I fancied there was a look of—almost animosity in his eyes. Perhaps I was supersensitive, I thought; I surely had said or done nothing to annoy him.

To-morrow—It Is Hard To Understand.

Prosaic Environment.

"Fate plays queer tricks on a man," remarked Mr. Twobble.

"No doubt."

"I always thought I would propose to the woman I would marry where there was the sheen of silver and cut glass, and shaded lights were softly glowing and behind a screen of palms an orchestra was playing a Hungarian waltz."

"Yes?"

"As a matter of fact, I proposed to Mrs. Twobble in a jitney bus."

Wouldn't Stop Her.

Jones—How far is this farm from the city?

Real Estate Man—Forty miles.

Jones—Not far enough. My wife would walk fifty to get to a bargain sale.

Dress in London.

Something might be said of the changes that three years of war have brought about in our clothes, says the Manchester Guardian. Evening dress is not abolished, but it is becoming much less customary in theaters and restaurants, and people coming up to London who used to bring evening clothes with them no longer do so. Stiff white collars are disappearing, and the soft collar is worn by all classes. The democratic process had already set in at the house of commons. One remembers the shock that Mr. Keir Hardie's cloth cap created on its first appearance there, but it has advanced immensely since the war began. Frock coats are in small and diehard minority. Spats are on their last legs. Top hats survive miraculously, it might seem, until one remembers their enduring qualities, so that their persistence is only a form of war economy after all.

Distracting Attention.

"In the good old days town scolds were severely dealt with."

"So they were, but the ducking stool has gone out of fashion."

"Yes. About the only way we can hope to get any relief from a scold nowadays is to coax her into a motion picture theater and get her interested in a film."

To Quickly Remove Ugly Hairs From Face

(Beauty Notes.)

Beauty-destroying hairs are soon banished from the skin with the aid of a delatone paste, made by mixing some water with a little plain powdered delatone. This is spread upon the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed to remove the remaining delatone. This simple treatment banishes every trace of hair and leaves the skin without a blemish. Caution should be used to be certain that it is Delatone you buy.

Silver Thimbles in War.

Many English women gave their jewels and much money to the war fund, says the Ladies' Home Journal, but there were thousands of others who wished to give and were unable to do so. That is, they were until a wise woman suggested that little trinkets, such as silver thimbles, be collected and melted down for the silver they contained. Here is what the silver thimbles purchased in one year:

Seven motor ambulances.

Five motor hospital boats.

One thousand one hundred and ten dollars for hospital supplies.

Ten thousand dollars for disabled sailors' agency.

Eleven thousand two hundred and fifty dollars for star and garter fund.

Fifty thousand dollars for soldiers and sailors.

American women who think they cannot afford to give anything to the various war funds might find these facts interesting.

Serious Casualty List.

In the domestic relations court of New York Mrs. Annette Busby was a witness against her husband, James, who was present to respond to the toast: "Work—done or avoided." Mr. Busby allowed that he is a carpenter, hampered by an education of the most classical type. "The fact of the matter is," he explained, "that I have sought work rather constantly until lately. I have been disheartened by the fact that I could not get work such as I deserve. I do not like carpentry, and I can speak five languages. I want a good situation or none." "Five languages," sneered Mrs. Busby. "What good are they? Four of them are dead and the other wounded."

Mother and Children Had Awful Coughs

WERE CURED BY DR. WOOD'S
NORWAY PINE SYRUP

Mrs. Arthur Appleyard, Novar, Ont., writes: "This past winter my children and I had awful colds and coughs which we got by being in drafts. I tried a number of different remedies for us, but got no relief. I thought I would try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and I found it a most excellent and sure cure. It gave relief to the tickling in the throat, and stopped the cough, and with a few bottles we were all cured."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is a remedy that has been on the market for over twenty-five years, and we can recommend it as being without doubt, the best cure for coughs and colds that you can posibly procure.

There are a lot of imitations on the market, so when you ask for "Dr. Wood's" see that you get it. Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c. manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

HAS SEVEN NAMES

City of Dorpat on Line of German Advance.

At Different Times Was in Possession of Germany, Russia, Poland and Sweden.

Dorpat is one of the important centers of population in the Baltic province of Livonia, which lies on the line of advance of the German offensive in the direction of Petrograd, says a bulletin issued by the National Geographic society.

Situated on the south bank of the River Embach, which flows eastward into Lake Peipus, Dorpat is connected by rail with both Reval and Riga and also has a triweekly steamboat service connecting it with the trade center of Pskov, on the Velikaya, one of the water routes connecting the Baltic with Southern Russia. The distance to Riga by rail is 156 miles, in a southwesterly direction, while Reval lies to the northwest a distance of 118 miles.

Except for one or two churches, including the cathedral which crowns Domberg (Cathedral hill) and the castle which rises on the brow of Schlossberg (Castle hill), there are few medieval buildings in the town, owing to the fact that the place was almost completely destroyed by fire in 1777. It had suffered from conflagration on two previous occasions when invading armies punished it for its stubborn resistance. The old fortifications have also been dismantled and attractive promenades now take the place of the old walls and earthworks.

Dorpat is known by many names (Yuriev, Dorpt, Derpt, Tarto, Tartolin and Tehebata), a fact which recalls its tempestuous history during the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, when it was a veritable shuttlecock city, being tossed back and forth between contending nations which made the Baltic provinces their battlegrounds. It is supposed to have been founded by a prince of Kiev early in the eleventh century. Two hundred years later the Teutonic knights arrived, and the year following their advent the cathedral was established on the Domberg. Russia ousted the Germans in 1558; Poland took possession in 1582; Sweden seized the town in 1600; Poland retook it in 1603; Sweden was once more in possession in 1625; Russia asserted its claims in 1666, followed by a long period of Sweden-Russian activities which resulted in Russia's making good its claim in 1704. Four years later a large part of the population was deported to the interior of Russia.

Before the outbreak of the world war Dorpat was the headquarters of the Eighteenth army corps of Russia. It has a population of 50,000, and ever since the middle ages, when it was a member of the Hanseatic league, it has enjoyed considerable trade with Pskov and Novgorod. The agricultural fair, held in August of each year, is an important feature of the city's life in times of peace.

To Warn Future Kings.

Premier Venizelos has announced his intention of placing a marble placque in the chamber of deputies, where future kings may see it when they take the oath of office, warning them against usurping the rights of the people, writes an Athens correspondent.

He says that when he is in London, and visits the house of commons, he observes at the entrance to Westminster a conspicuous plaque reading: "Here was beheaded Charles I, King of England, for having usurped the liberties of the people of England." Whenever a king now goes to Westminster to open or close the work of parliament he passes directly before this plaque, which has served for 200 years to warn British kings not to trench on the rights of the people. Following this precedent, M. Venizelos will inscribe on the plaque in the chamber here:

"King Constantine lost his throne for twice dismissing the parliament elected by the people and imposing his personal policy on the people, while the dismissed parliament returning to power upheld the constitutional institutions of the country."

Chloroform and Uniform.

There sure never was a more self-important lieutenant than Smithers. One day off parade he remonstrated with Private Spudlock for some trivial reason, and the old soldier resented the unjust dressing-down.

"You think you know army matters better than I do?" barked the bumptious officer, superiorily.

"Well, I don't know, sir," he drawled; "but I reckon I've been in chloroform as long as you've been in uniform."

No Regrets.

Optimist—Well, thank goodness, for once I know where my diamond studs are!

Wife—Where?

Optimist—They are in one of those shirts we sent to the Belgians.—Life.

Dream Came True.

The encyclopedic Andrew Lang is responsible for the following dream record, according to Katherine Cox, writing in the Occult Review:

"A certain barrister sat up late one night to write letters, and at about 12:30 went out to put them in the post. He returned to his rooms, and while undressing for bed missed a check for a large sum, which he had received during the day. He hunted everywhere in vain, went to bed, slept, and dreamed that he saw the check curled round an area railing not far from his own door. He woke, got up, dressed, walked down the street and found his check in exactly the spot where he had seen it in his dream!"

Origin Is Retreating More and More Into the Past.

Topic Still Absorbs Interest of Anthropologists and Other Scientists, Each Discovery Renewing Discussion.

The antiquity of man is still an absorbing topic among anthropologists and other scientists, and fresh discussions arise with each new discovery of ancient human remains. In this connection, it is interesting to note, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger, that Dr. Arthur Keith of Edinburgh, an authority on the subject, believes that the living Australian aborigine is of an older type than any of the fossil remains of modern man found in Europe. The New York Medical Journal says:

"The date of the origin of the human species, by each new discovery of missing chapters in its history, is shifted to a more and more remote time. The Neanderthal skull, which, by its prominent supraorbital ridges, its length and flattening from above downward, seemed to link man closely, if loosely, to the higher apes, still had a brain capacity quite equal to that of the average modern man, and on this account pointed to a still more remote beginning of the human being. The brain of the Neanderthal man was not only large but elaborate, and, as shown by the remains of his culture, he possessed fire and made flint implements. Though ancient, he was anything but an ape.

"The Heidelberg skull, which resembled the Neanderthal remains but was still more markedly simian in general features, had also a capacious brain case and is believed to have belonged to a creature with comparatively high mental development. The Neanderthal man is placed some 300,000 years back, while the Heidelberg skull is presumed to date to a doubly remote time.

"The prehistoric remains found by Doctor Dubois in Java, the bones of Pithecanthropus, as he has been called, were of decidedly earlier geological date, as indicated both by their surroundings and by their own features; the brain case was small and the cranial traits were otherwise more apelike than those of any other known remains. 'All the structural characters of Pithecanthropus, so far as we know them, are exactly of the kind we expect to find in the early ancestral types of man.' The unearthing of the Java man pushed the date for the origin of the human type backward another period of a few hundred thousand years, or into the Miocene epoch of geological time.

"The chain linking modern man directly with an early type similar to the gorilla or chimpanzee seemed to be growing strong until, in 1912, the bones of an ancient man of another type were discovered in England in the Piltdown cave. This, according to Dr. Arthur Keith, who is as great an authority as can be found, is the 'oldest specimen of true humanity yet discovered.' The brain of this being was, in size, at least, up to the modern standard, but otherwise the bones are 'the most simian recorded.'"

HOW TO POP CORN.

It is done in different ways, but the most approved method is to pop your corns with Putnam's Corn Extractor—corns pop out for fair, and stay out, too, when removed by "Putnam's". Try this painless remedy yourself, 25c at all dealers.

Dynamite Saves Potatoes.

A resourceful farmer found a new way to use dynamite and saved a nearly matured crop of potatoes in a badly flooded field, says the Scientific American. Usually heavy rains filled all the neighborhood drains and ditches; in his emergency the owner put down a number of holes eight to twelve feet deep with a post auger and exploded a charge of dynamite in the bottom of each. This opened up passages into the sandy sub-soil, through which the surplus water drained rapidly, and the crop was saved, although many nearby crops were ruined by the excess of water standing in the fields.

Kipling Made "Tommy Atkins."

Rudyard Kipling has written an American story, "Captains Courageous." Kipling made "Tommy Atkins," Sir George Younghusband, who has been in the British service for forty years, declares that nobody ever heard of "Tommy" until Kipling made Private Mulvaney and the other two of the "Soldiers Three" talk about him. He says that he had asked innumerable old British officers if they ever heard of "Tommy Atkins" before Kipling wrote about him, and they all agree that they never did.

PAYS TO GO TO MARKET

Women of Toulon Buy Foods Much as Is Custom in Some American Cities.

To the continental woman, marketing is both a time-hallowed custom and a leading outdoor sport. Europe has always been far more economical than America, and this method of careful food purchasing is one of the first aids to economical housekeeping, according to Niksah. You see what you are getting, there are always opportunities to pick up bargains, and there are no delivery costs. Marketing by telephone is almost unknown in Europe outside a few big cities, because the telephone is not nearly so much a household institution there as here.

Toulon market is open every day from seven o'clock until noon. If you are a Toulon housewife of the upper class, you sally forth about 10 a. m., followed by a maid with a basket or a cord bag to carry your purchases. If you are not rich enough to have a maid, you carry your own vegetables in an embroidered cloth bag swinging from your arm. This cloth bag is an important point, because it marks you as an independent housewife. If you were to carry a basket or a cord bag, you would be taken for somebody's maid.

On either side of the pavement under the plantains are ranged scores of stalls covered with drab awnings. Most of the stallkeepers are women—Frenchwomen, Italians, Corsicans, Spanish. They sell all the vegetables known to botany, and delicacies like mushrooms, snails and ravioli, which is a dish made of macaroni and meat, as well. There are booths for the sale of flowers and medicinal herbs, and chickens and doubtful looking cuts of meat. The cream of the custom comes between nine and eleven. In the last half-hour there is a great bargain sale of everything that will not keep until the next day and the poorer classes rush the booths to purchase slightly damaged but nourishing goods at ridiculously low prices.

VELDT MARKS ITS DWELLERS

Loneliness and Silence Affect Those Deomed to Live in Plain of British South Africa.

Before the Boer war there was a saying current among the Boers of South Africa that you could always recognize a man who had spent five years on the veldt. This was a saying no less true then than now, for the veldt is a place of great silence and loneliness and it leaves its mark on those who dwell in it.

The veldt is the great plain of what is now British South Africa, the limitless, featureless stretch of prairie dotted with knobs of hills that the Boers call kopjes, pierced and gashed by rain-washed gullies that run their twisting course from horizon to horizon. The word "veldt" is closely allied to the German word for "world" or "universe," and the relationship is something more than mere coincidence. To the man standing in the midst of this plain it seems to extend in every direction to the outermost limits of space.

The veldt is without sound or color, without striking features to catch the eye. A day's trek among low hills covered with gray grass, plods wearily through mile after mile of the same hills, and ends in a dry valley as like the valley of the morning as one pea is like another. After a few days of this the traveler wonders if his progress is not a mere illusion, if he is not returning day after day to the same spot.

Now and again the monotony is broken by some veldt farm, a place of exceeding loneliness for the exiles who till it. There will be a farmhouse, a barn, a kraal, a well and a few huts for the kaffirs. To the railroad may be a distance of anywhere from 20 to 70 miles. Half the year the roads are impassable. The little community must be sufficient unto itself. Life on a veldt farm is a severe test of the inner resources of man or woman.

A Hint From the Front.

A letter from a young man who is now with the Red Cross in France says he is very glad that he took the precaution to study French before he went over there. He says the knowledge is invaluable to him, and that he has no difficulty in making himself understood, because most of the people he comes in contact with can talk English.

Ladies! Why Keep Corns?

Lift a corn or callus right off without one bit of pain.

Yes! You truly can lift off every hard corn, soft corn or corn between the toes, as well as hardened calluses on bottom of feet—without one bit of pain.

A genius in Cincinnati discovered freezone. It is an ether compound and tiny bottles of this magic fluid can now be had at any drug store for a few cents.

Apply several drops of this freezone upon a tender, aching corn or a callus. Instantly all soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so shriveled and loose that you lift it off with the fingers. You feel no pain while applying Freezone or afterwards.

Just think! No more corns or calluses to torture you and they go without causing one twinge of pain or soreness. Keep a tiny bottle on the dresser and never let a corn or callus ache twice.

Aching Back Gets Relief Quick!

One Rub With "Nerviline" Cures

Every Bit of Stiffness and Soreness Goes When "Nerviline" Is Used

Pain in back or side is awful hard to reach. Deep in the tissue is a congested or strained muscle. It is a long way for a liniment to go. Liniments you have used have not reached it, and the pain bothers you, whether moving or lying down.

What a pity you haven't tried Nerviline! Penetrating, you ask? Yes, and powerful, too. Nerviline strikes in far deeper than any application you have ever used. You might pay a dollar, ten dollars, a hundred, for that matter, but you could not equal Nerviline, either in strength, quickness of action, or permanency of relief.

If you think this too much to say for Nerviline try it, and be convinced.

If you receive from Nerviline even a little less relief from pain than this advertisement induces you to expect, you can get your money back.

The only pain remedy in the world sold under a guarantee is Nerviline—surely it is safe to try it.

Nerviline is sold by druggists everywhere, 25 cents, or direct from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

MOSCOW COUNCIL EXPECTED TO DECLARE A "HOLY WAR"

Strong Movement Begins in Russia to Re-unite All Socialists in the Defense of the Country--Germans Are Reported to Be Only One Hundred Miles Away From Petrograd ---Many Russians Opposed to Peace Treaty.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Joseph Shaplen—Copyright 1918 by the United Press).

PETROGRAD, March 5.—The Moscow Council of Workmen, Peasants, Soldiers and Cossacks, called for March 12, will not ratify the German peace treaty, it is generally believed. Instead, the Council is expected to proclaim a "holy war" against the invaders.

A strong movement has begun to re-unite all Socialists in the defence of the country. Nearly all the members of the Left, as well as many Bolsheviki, are opposed to the treaty. My interview with Agriculture Commissary Kalegayeff yesterday explains the present situation.

Kalegayeff told Shaplen that with peace signed at Brest-Litovsk the war will continue. He pointed out that "the more starving territories the enemy occupies the worse will be his own economic situation."

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, March 5.—(By Henry Wood).—While loudly proclaiming a gigantic offensive on the Western front, the German arms have been working there night and day for months past, building up the greatest system for defensive warfare the world has ever known.

Germany realizes that in the end she must sustain on the French front the shock of the combined French, British and American armies. She knows that in spite of whatever initial success she may gain by a big Western offensive she will be obliged to defend every step of the territory between the Western front and the Rhine. The entire Western front, extending for miles to the rear—in fact practically back to the Rhine—has now been converted into one vast field of a defensive system.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 5.—Lord Lansdowne, in his latest peace appeal, asks whether any one supposes the questions at issue could be settled while war is raging, and whether anything more can now be done than to lay down the principles upon which the peace congress would deal with these matters. He raises the question whether improvement can be made upon the principles which President Wilson has proposed which both sides apparently are not indisposed to accept.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 5.—Australian troops carried out a successful raid last night against the enemy's position at Warneton, capturing a number of prisoners and two machine guns, says to-day's War Office report. A hostile party which attacked one of our posts in the same neighbourhood was repulsed after sharp fighting. Yesterday afternoon our patrols brought in several prisoners south of St. Quentin.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 5.—Narva, 100 miles south-west of Petrograd, has been captured by the Germans, and the enemy is reported to be continuing his advance on Petrograd.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TOKIO, March 5.—The Russian situation is completely absorbing the press and public. There have been frequent meetings of the Japanese Cabinet, at which the entire question was considered most carefully with a full realization of the responsibilities involved.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

SHANGHAI, March 5.—Sharp fighting at Dirarui, on the Trans-Siberian Railway, between forces of the Cossack, Semroff and many well-armed Bolsheviki was reported in a Harbin despatch to the North China Daily News to-day.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, March 5.—Japan and Great Britain will decide the course Japan will pursue in Siberia and Russia, Senator Lewis, the Illinois Democratic Whip, told the Senate to-day. Lewis declared the United States has no agreement or compact with the Japanese regarding Russia, and indicates this Government will keep its hands off the Far Eastern situation.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 5.—This evening's News says the question of the Japanese intervention in Siberia has been settled, and that the Allies, as well as the United States, have agreed to immediate action to safeguard the interests of the powers.

Sharp Fighting Where Canadians Are Stationed

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 5.—Sharp fighting in the vicinity of Lens is reported in an official communication issued here last night.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 5.—A German attack last night on the trenches held by the American forces in Lorraine was repulsed. American patrols operating in the same region took a number of German prisoners.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

VIENNA, March 5.—The operations of the Austro-Hungarian force for restoring order and security in the Ukraine, are taking their course.

Word was received on Saturday by his family that Sergt. Alan Wade, son of the late Edward T. Wade, 87 London Street, has received the Croix de Guerre from the King of Belgium for distinguished services, though no particulars of the circumstances were contained in the communication. Sergt. Wade enlisted three years ago with the 39th Battalion and was at the time of receiving his decoration from King Albert, gas instructor with the 2nd Battalion. His brother, Stanley is also in the 2nd.

Sunday School Teachers Meet On Thursday

A meeting of Sunday school teachers and leaders in girls' work will be held at the Young Women's Christian Association on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. The object of the meeting is to organize a girls' conference for Peterborough, and a representative from the National Advisory committee for co-operation in girls' work, from Toronto, will be present to outline the object and the details of the proposed conference. All teachers of girls, and those interested in girls' work, particularly the teachers of the 'teen age girls' classes, are urgently invited to be present, as the success of the conference depends largely upon the support and co-operation of the teachers and leaders.

The Home Nursing Class, which was withdrawn last Tuesday evening, will meet to-night at 8.15 in the green room at the Y.W.C.A.

The Roads Are Breaking Up

The gutters and other water courses throughout the city have been opened and cleaned out in readiness for the spring freshets which are due sometime during the course of the next few weeks. As a great deal of the accumulated snow has already been removed by the action of of the sun and rain little difficulty is anticipated in the departure of the remainder. In the country some of the high land is bare and the roads are showing signs of breaking up. Another good rain and some of the highways will be impassable.

White silk is promised for spring suits and dresses.

JAPAN TO ACT SOON

Will Plunge Into Siberia With Armed Force According to To-day's Report—Movement Has Already Commenced

ENTENTE APPROVES

(By Carl D. Groat.)
(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, March 5.—Japan appears about to plunge into Siberia with an armed force. This action is expected with Entente approval while American sanction will probably be withheld for the present at least. That was how the Japanese-Siberian situation shaped up to-day in the wake of more than a week of speculation about it while Japan prepared for the movement, according to all indications here.

She will probably be given a free hand in Eastern Siberia to protect the vast horde of supplies at Vladivostok and to preserve the Siberian railway as far as that is possible. What effect the intervention will have on the Russians is problematical, but there is a strong feeling here that it will rouse the fighting spirit of the Slavs, drive some of them over to the Germans and others to some sort of warfare and destruction in Siberia.

Japan's action is probably already under way for a censorship hides eastern developments. It is known that mobilization in port of Nippon has begun and that military bills were ready for the Diet, indicating the imminence of Japanese military moves.

It is likely that Bolsheviki or Germans will see to it that the bridges on the Siberian railway are wrecked to thwart any movement of the Japanese into the interior of Siberia. However, as far as is known, Japan does not plan any extensive movement beyond Vladivostok and a fringe of Eastern Siberia. Any greater undertaking would involve tremendous forces and a supply system more enormous than now exists.

AUBURN WOOLLEN MILLS TO MAKE BILLIARD CLOTH

Local Company is Entering Upon the Manufacture of This Article Which Hitherto Has Been Imported

The manufacturers of Canada are being put on their metal. As soon as war was declared it was found that many articles required in Canada were German products almost exclusively, and even if Canadians had been inclined to use them, they were unobtainable as soon as the stocks on hand ran out.

It is also a fact that many articles were manufactured in the British Isles and imported by Canada, that it is now very difficult to procure with any degree of prompt delivery..

The Auburn Woollen Company looking into the possibilities of new fields for manufacture, took up the matter of billiard cloths, and have perfected and put on the market a billiard cloth that is said to be the equal of any imported cloth used in this country, and at a price that makes it very attractive.

Statistics show that there is practically $2,000,000 worth of this cloth used in Canada in a year and not a yard of it previously manufactured here. The company is putting men on the road and believe when the war is over they will practically control this business in Canada through producing a perfect article at a fair price. If this becomes a fact, and there is no reason to doubt it, as the Auburn Company has a reputation for high class output, it will mean considerable to the city in the establishment of what might be termed a new industry as the field is a large one and the product never has been manufactured in Canada before.

OFFER THEMSELVES TO AID SCIENTISTS TO STUDY TRENCH FEVER

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PARIS, March 5.—Sixty enlisted men of the United States Sanitary Corps are undergoing the dangers of trench fever, self imposed, in a scientific investigation by the Red Cross to determine the cause of this disease, which is the greatest master of man power known to modern armies. They are confined in a specially constructed portion of a British base hospital in Northern France.

CAMPAIGN FOR FARM LABOURERS TO COMMENCE SHORTLY

"Keymen" Will Meet at the Provincial Labour Bureau This Week to Receive Instructions — Recruiting Begins March 18th

STUDENTS TO ASSIST

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, March 5.—On Thursday and Friday of this week men from various cities and towns in Ontario will meet at the Provincial Labour Bureau for the purpose of organizing to secure farm labour. These men, who will be known as "key men," will be coached by Dr. W. A. Riddell and his assistants, on the best methods of securing adequate farm help in their respective communities. This work will be preparatory to the inauguration of the Dominion-wide drive for farm help during the week of March 17, which will be known as recruiting week.

"The work of securing their help for the farms is well under progress," said Dr. Riddell to-day. "Already the principals of the Public and High schools in the province have been asked to assist in the matter, and it is expected that many of the students will be allowed to leave school under the same conditions as last year. It is hoped that by thorough organization that no person capable of going on the farm will escape an opportunity of doing so.

"If they refuse to go on the farm, it will not be because they have not been approached concerning the matter," said Dr. Riddell.

Shell Factory Closed Owing To A Dispute

(Special to the Toronto Star and Peterborough Examiner.)

KITCHENER, Ont., March 5.— On account of a difference of opinion between the officials of the company and the government inspection department, the Canadian Blower and Forge Co., an American company with a factory in the city, has been shut down. Last week one of the employees attempted to introduce a variation into the process of manufacture, which was opposed by the government inspectors, who immediately closed down the plant, throwing 150 men out of work, according to a statement made by Mr. S. Halfyar, superintendent of this factory, to-day. Thousands of shells in all stages of manufacture, are now lying about on the premises.

Bad Fire Was Averted

What threatened to be a serious fire was started in an unusual manner at Mr. H. A. Yenney's residence, 190 Barnardo Avenue, yesterday afternoon. Workmen were boring through the walls of the house about six inches above the foundation under the living room to put electric wiring through when the hot iron in use ignited the paper between the walls. The fire quickly spread to the roof. The fire department arrived just in time to prevent a bad fire, and confined the damage to about $10.00.

Lenine and Trotsky to Drop Out According to Berlin Reports—German Airplanes Drop Bombs on Petrograd

ZEPS ALSO ATTACK

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, March 5. — The German Government has been advised that the resignations of Nikolai Lenine and Leon Trotsky, the Russian Premier and Foreign Minister, respectively, are expected, according to despatches from Berlin to-day.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

LONDON, March 5. — A German airplane dropped bombs on Petrograd Monday afternoon, according to an Exchange Telegraph despatch from the Russian capital. The number of casualties had not been ascertained Monday night. Anti-aircraft forces reported driving of Zeppelins from the outskirts.

RECEPTION TO BE HELD

St. Paul's "At Home" For Dr. and Mrs. Jas. Waters of India

The Women's Missionary Society of St. Paul's Church intend holding an informal reception to enable friends to meet Dr. and Mrs. James Waters of India, to-morrow, Wednesday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. John Allan, 207 Brock street. Owing to the necessity of conserving food at the present time, the executive decided to serve no refreshments, but an excellent programme will be contributed by the following: Mrs. Russell Wood, Mrs. P. A. Ferguson, Miss Hinchcliffe, Miss Winnifred Parker, Miss Muriel Harvey and Mr. Douglas Carlisle.

Dr. Waters will give an address telling of his work in India, and a free will offering will be taken to help in the equipping of his new hospital.

All friends, gentlemen as well as ladies, from other churches, and everyone interested in the great work being done in India by our missionaries, which has contributed so largely towards India's loyalty to our Empire in this time of great crisis, are most cordially invited to be present to-morrow afternoon at four o'clock at 207 Brock street.

A RACE OF SPIES.

For some years before the war Germany had succeeded in establishing a vast system of espionage abroad. It was a system that enabled her to acquire information, economic no less than military or naval, concerning every country upon which Prussian despotism had cast its covetous eye. That the German going abroad as a colonist should act as a spy against the national interests of his newly adopted country, was a matter of course with the German authorities. Documents, now in the hands of the British Government, have thrown a flood of light upon the methods by which this system was worked.

The plan was characteristic of Prussian state 'morality,' which holds that any crime or treachery is justifiable so long as Prussian aims of world dominion are aided thereby. Among civilized communities it has always been considered that a colonist accepting the protection of a country, and taking advantage of its social benefits, was under an obligation to support that country so far as lay in his power. For his old Fatherland he could rightly cherish an affectionate regard, but his loyalty as a citizen was due to the state which accorded him its freedom. Prussia thought quite otherwise. She framed her nationality laws so that her exiles might preserve their old citizenship whilst pretending to accept a new one; and she fathered up an organization designed to retain the Germans in Australia, Brazil, Canada or the United States, as servants of the German Empire. That organization was known as "The Society for the Protection of Germans Abroad," (Schute des Deutschtums in Auslande) sought to include in its ranks every person of German birth who went abroad as a settler.

In its pernicious inner circle this society is now known for what it was, and doubtless is, and will be, a recruiting organization for military spies, who, under the guise of peaceful settlers, could advance Prussia's designs of world conquest. In the pursuance of this end, the society was designed to prevent any German abroad from becoming a loyal subject of his new country. Further, it contrived to prevent him from devoting his energies to the development of the trade and industries of that country.

In other words, it strove to keep his attention concentrated on the advancement of the Fatherland at the expense of his adopted land. He was required to watch the local newspapers for matters in which German commerce commerce or German industries could take part," and to report upon local businesses and industries with their founders distinguishing between German and non-German firms. He was asked for precise information as to the Germans employed in his district, and as to the chances which existed of Germans ousting the local inhabitants from occupations or businesses. Further, he was urged to collect information on all points where German influence could be pushed, and to report constantly to the German Government upon matters where german penetration was possible.

It is quite clear that a German Colonist carying out this programme (even if he were not tempted further and joined the inner circle of the society, becoming to all intents and purposes a German Secret Service agent) could not possibly be loyal to the land of his adoption; he could not become a Brazilian, Australian, Argentino or Canadian.

Not every German colonist followed this programme, but a very great number did, as recent revelations in South and North America and in British Dominions have proved. Clearly after the war the questions of the German Colonist will have to be considered in the light of those revelations, unless an end is made for ever of the Prussian ambition of world dominion. New countries cannot afford to give shelter to citizens who are bound, even in spite of themselves, to be enemies of their adopted country. The natural price of hospitality is loyalty. In future the German Colonist will have to make it plain that he comes as a colonist and not as a German, if he desires a welcome. The criminal ambitions and designs of Prussian absolutism have created a suspicion of Germans all over the world, which indisputable evidence proves to be only too well founded.

England Speaks For Herself

I HAVE before me a great pile of printed matter and photographic information which the British Pictorial Service and the newly-formed Department of Commercial Intelligence are sending to the ends of the earth in the interests of the British Empire's side of the war.

What a healthy change this policy represents from the first cautious months, when the authorities were afraid to let anything out for fear of "comfort to the enemy!"

In this article I want to deal with the work of the Pictorial Service.

Thousands upon thousands of battle-front pictures have been taken, at sea and on land, and the photographers have dared anything and everything to get them.

There are four pictorial booklets—"The Sentinels of the Seas," "Carry On," "Behind the Lines," "Through Swamps and Forest." They are the first in a series, broadcast in all tongues.

There is a string of beautifully illustrated papers, portraying all phases of military activities, published for consumption in the East, near and far.

Among the extensive assortment of maps and diagram sheets here is a great chart showing

"WHAT GERMANY WANTS: HER CLAIMS AS SET FORTH BY LEADERS OF GERMAN THOUGHT."

The whole world is here laid out, on Mercator's projection, and the red spots are the would-be dominion of the Hun.

All South American is red, and most of Africa. The bloody trail is over Scandinavia and the whole of Central Europe, Turkey, Syria, China, the Dutch West Indies. One wonders at the moderation of the cartographer in leaving out the United States.

In the border of the chart there are thirty-six quotations giving the swollen vaticinations of Prussian imperialists.

"Holland, together with her royal family, her European possessions and her colonies in South America, the Indian Islands and Australasia, must become the all of Germany," writes Tannenberg in "Gross Deutschland."

Werner Sombart claims Dover, Malta, and Suez as stations for the German fleet.

General von Bernhardi lays stress upon the value of Denmark as commanding the approaches to the Baltic.

Ernest Hasse intends to absorb the Scandinavian countries.

The bold editor, Maximilian Harden, whose independence of thought has been admired even by his foes, talks of "German cannon on the routes to Egypt and India" as "worthy of great sacrifices."

Another portrays "The British Empire at War," giving the homes of the fighting men and the routes they have traveled to come to Britain's aid, and the part of the far-flung battle-line that they hold now.

The territory occupied by the Central powers outside their own borders adds up to 109,500 square miles.

The territory held by the Allies outside their own borders adds up to 676,010 square miles.

There are also four-page pictorial sheets, such as "Bagdad in British Hands," "Haig's Smashing Blow in the West," and "The United States at War."

The latter presents on the front page the president's portrait. Above it in French, German, and English are his words:

"We are now about to accept gage of battle with this national foe to liberty, and shall, if necessary, spend the whole force of the nation to check and nullify its pretensions and its power."

There is also a war atlas, bound appropriately in red cartridge paper, the maps made at Stanford's classic establishment. Poor Stanford died last spring, heart-broken over the loss of his son.

The foreword to the atlas explains:

"This atlas has been designed to illustrate for the student not only the actual battle fronts but also some of the general aspects of the world war.

"The first five maps show, without comment the theaters of war in the West, in the East, on the Italian front, in the Balkans, and in the Asiatic possessions in Turkey. The sixth map illustrates in greater detail the British front in the West, while the seventh shows the various theatres of war in which British troops are engaged and the vast distances which they have safely traveled under the protection of the British navy.

"The eighth map demonstrates the collapse of Germany's ambition in the East, and the ninth illustrates the vast extent of the possessions which she has lost overseas. The tenth map shows the isolation in which Germany has placed herself by her criminal outrages on civilization, and the eleventh explains, by chapter and verse, the claims to world domination which have been put forward by her leaders. The twelfth map illustrates the growth of the military domination of Prussia, while the thirteenth is an effective exposure of the professed desire of the Central powers for the 'free development' of other races.

"The last map shows how Germany, at the commencement of the fourth year of war, is gripped in a relentless vice of steel, and points to the final and decisive victory of Great Britain and her allies."—Fullerton S. Waldo in Detroit Free Press.

It takes a ton of apples to make about one hundred and fifty gallons of cider.

Do not use more than a mere dusting of flour when kneading the bread. The strong smell in old fowls can be removed by washing in warm soda water.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Reason Of It

By P. P. Hargrove

One day when Stuart was going through the freight yards in search for things that should not exist there he discovered Mahoney behind a lot of rice sacks that were being shipped from New Orleans to California. Mahoney was but a youngster, whose real place was in a schoolroom instead of trying to tramp his way to the Pacific coast. Stuart had a violent hatred for "hobos." They had been the cause of trouble on his division ever since he had been promoted to the superintendency, and he was tired of them. Of late, since the steel works had closed down in Illinois and Ohio, and the news had gone forth that the oil fields of California were alluring.

But when Mahoney had jumped to the ground and looked Stuart in the eye, the warning and rebuke he started to let fly from his lips were left unsaid. For he saw an honest face searching his. The boy's body was straight as in anticipating an assault. It didn't take a great deal of questioning for the superintendent to find out why the boy was there. He told his story in unfaltering tone. Left without mother or father, cast upon the charity of an unsympathetic relative in St. Louis, he had broken all the cords that bound him to his Missouri birthplace and had started for the great West to find any sort of employment that would give him an unscolding bed.

When Mahoney had washed his face at the tank and then reported to the section boss, he was hungry enough to do ample justice to the baked beans and fried pork that were set before him. The next day he started picking up stray bits of iron that had fallen in the yards and when night had come, and he had met the superintendent again, who this time smiled kindly at him, his heart melted and a tear came in his eye.

A near neighbor of the Stuart family was Mrs. Cook, and her pretty daughter, Letitia, a young girl with artless ways, a pair of eyes as blue as the wings of a jay-bird, with auburn hair that hung in wavy curls about a beautiful forehead, whose laughter was infectious, and whose dreams were as delightfully free from care as the winds about her were of malaria. One day as she was walking aimlessly about the railroad tracks she was caught by a pair of youthful hands just in time to miss a powerful engine that was flying through the yards hauling a through freight bound for the terminal at Oakland. She did not faint when she realized the dangerous position from which she had been snatched. She looked into Mahoney's face and thanked him while she was still in his arms, and the rushing cars were still making noise enough to drown all other sound.

Mahoney saw her to her mother's apartments. When he had supper at the section boss' ranch, his mind was preoccupied. His food almost went untasted. A nervous itching had possession of his body. From that night on he was no longer a visitor at the Grand Pacific restaurant which was located over by the station, kept by Mrs. Hooligan and frequented in evenings by young men who played cards and drank beer. Mahoney had higher ambitions. When his day's work was finished he offered to do jobs around the dispatcher's office without pay if he were allowed to play with the mysterious keys and be taught the alphabet. In a little while he was efficient enough to make himself intelligible to the agent at Fabens, at which point the wood-yard was located. The young woman there was tolerant of his mistakes and patiently repeated message after message that she might assist him in learning.

Time went on, and Mahoney gave up his job with the section. He had been given the operator's chair at Sierra Blanca. Before he had been there a week he had, with great difficulty, indited and forwarded a letter which concerned him more than all his other hopes; and when Miss Cook received it she was not offended. It was a boyish letter, free from affectation, and filled with expression of genuine and sincere love. The little girl's heart throbbed in riotous joy and she forgot all else that morning. Only his words that kissed her mind tenderly and lovingly, could she remember. She had his letter in her hand when her mother asked to see it. She had never had a sweetheart before, nor a secret, and when her mother scolded her for countenancing a common railroad man—she whose blood was as blue as the skies above—the poor girl, wounded and bleeding, tore the paper into fragments and then went into her room to weep. Yes, her mother was right, perhaps. Her former playmates and companions back in New Orleans would never permit her a moment's peace if they were to hear that she had chosen a lover from out the wilds of the Rio Grande, while her mother was staying there in hope of dissipating the hectic flush that had lit upon her cheeks. She would forget him—however hard that might be—she would do it. That is what she told Mrs. Cook that evening at tea, and she really thought she could.

Mahoney looked for a letter that never came. As mail train after mail train had come and left him to his gloomy and desolate home on the big hill with no answer from his first love, his mind found new theories as to how it was possible she might have missed receiving his message. So he wrote again. As the days wore on and he received no response, he asked Kennon, the night track man, if the Cooks were still at El Paso. Perhaps they had gone, he thought. But when he had been told over the wire that Miss Cook had been seen crossing the tracks that very afternoon, his heart sank within him, and for the first time he took a drink. The mesqual was bitter, and his head soon began to ache. The next morning, he made two solemn oaths. The first was that he would never speak to another girl or save her from death if he had the chance. His second resolve was that he would never take another drink. He has studiously observed the latter.

One morning the El Paso Chronicle had a story of Mahoney's bravery, and it was scattered all over the front page of that newspaper. Robbers had bound and gagged him at Sierra Blanca, but they had not secured his hands so fast that he could not crawl to the telegraph key and warn the approaching express that was soon due at Valentine of its impending danger. This incident was followed a week later by another story printed equally as conspicuous, telling how Mahoney, with a pistol, had shot the headlight out of an engine dashing by the station after the signal lights had failed to warn the engineer to get in on the sidetrack. Thus a collision with No. 21, which was hauling the general manager, was averted. Three weeks later Dave Mahoney was dispatcher at El Paso.

Fearing that his return might rekindle the dangerous flame which, apparently, had been successfully extinguished in her daughter, as soon as Mrs. Cook discovered Mahoney's presence, she arranged an excursion for herself and daughter into Chihuahua. A month's stay among the foothills of the Sierra Madres worked such wonderful results in the physical condition of Mrs. Cook that she concluded she was well enough to go back to her Louisiana orange grove. So one evening she wrote a message to Superintendent Stewart, telling him of her plans, and asking him to see to it that her belongings in the Magoffin flats were packed and made ready for shipment on her return, and that she would depart from Chihuahua the following afternoon. Mahoney was at the desk when the telegram was received. He did not sleep that night and the following morning he asked to be relieved of work for the day.

In the evening he wandered over into the sleepy town of Juarez, just across the river from El Paso, and the terminal of the Mexican Central. He drifted into the dispatcher's office, and after shaking hands with the operator, took a seat. He could not tell why he remained. An indefinite something held him to his chair. In a little while the dispatcher asked Mahoney to take his key while he walked over to the station. Mahoney had no more than glanced over the train sheet than the operator at Pueblo began nervously calling Juarez. Mahoney answered, and then came the message that made his head reel. The passenger train had run over half a dozen Mexicans, and all had been killed. At that moment the train was at the station and the Mexican officials were coming.

It did not take Mahoney a moment to grasp the real seriousness of the situation. If the train were caught, all hands, trainmen and passengers, would have to lie in jail and await tedious and vexatious questioning by the alcalde and his officers. He thought of her and mentally took a picture of that sweet face in a Mexican cell. A shudder passed over his frame.

"No. 16 has right of way to Juarez, limit 770 miles an hour. Make no stops unless for water. Disregard all signals. Have conductor say to American lady and her daughter on board your train that if train detained, American consul will proceed on special to protect them.

(Signed) "MAHONEY,
"Acting Trainmaster."

That was the order that went from the trainmaster's office to the conductor of No. 16. When the operator had returned to relieve Mahoney, and heard what had been done, he would have been powerless to have countermanded the order, even if he had been so inclined, for the train had already pulled out of Pueblo.

Two hours later a closed carriage was driven rapidly over the long bridge between the Mexican and American towns. There was no examination of the two passengers on the inside, for a young man who had a seat with the driver threw a gold piece to the inspector who was standing at the entrance. When the carriage stopped at the Magnoffin flats Mr. Stewart happened to be standing at the corner. He recognized Mahoney and bowed to the ladies as they stepped to the ground.

As the carriage drove away Mahoney stood trembling near the blushing girl, while her mother was telling Mr. Stewart as rapidly as her tongue would permit, the experiences of the day. Presently, as she went to enter the door, she said: "Dear Mr. Mahoney, how kind and thoughtful you always are! Won't you come up and sit with us awhile?"

"No, mamma," answered the daughter, "he hasn't time now. He and I are going to sit out here a while, and I am going to tell him that which I should have written him a year ago."

Thermostatic metal, a new material is adapted for such uses as recording temperature changes and giving automatic temperature control. It is made of strips of two strong, non-corrosive metals, of widely different expansion on heating. These are welded together, and any change of temperature causes the compound strip to bend. When a piece four inches long five-sixteenth inch wide and one-tenth inch thick was raised 100 degrees Fahrenheit, a force of 24 ounces was necessary to overcome the bending tendency and keep the strip straight.

How a Woman Got a Pumpkin.

She is a dainty little madam, relates the Indianapolis News, and does not look as if she could lift more than ten or fifteen pounds. When she accompanied her husband to the country recently and saw a field dotted with pumpkins she said:

"Let's stop here and buy a pumpkin for pies."

Pumpkins seemed to be a drug with the farmer, and he told the little madam:

"If you climb that fence," pointing to the field, "you can have the biggest pumpkin you can carry."

"I'll accept that offer," she replied with alacrity, with visions of Thanksgiving pies galore.

Ten minutes later she returned with a pumpkin that weighed 35 pounds and put it down triumphantly in front of the farmer.

A woman in London entered a car rather out of breath and presented a singular appearance, for instead of a hat she was balancing a huge basket on her head with as much grace and ease as if it had been her Sunday bonnet. She could just manage to get through the doorway, but she sat down with the basket gracefully poised on her head.

"All fares, please," said the conductor. "And I shall want twopence for that there basket, mum."

"Get away with yer," she said. "D'ye charge anything for ladies' hats?"

"No, mum."

"Thin get on with yer work. This 'ere basket is a-going to be my hat."

SLUGGI SHLIVER CAUSES
LOTS OF TROUBLE

When the liver becomes sluggish it is an indication that the bowels are not working properly, and if they do not move regularly many complications are liable to set in.

Constipation, sick headache, bilious headache, jaundice, heartburn, water brash, catarrh of the stomach, etc., all come from a disordered liver.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are a specific for all disease or disorders arising from a slow, sluggish, lazy or torpid liver, and they have been universally used throughout Canada for over 20 years with the greatest success.

Mrs. W. A. Harrison, 7 Poplar Grove, Halifax, N.S., writes: "I take pleasure in writing you concerning the great good I have received by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills for a sluggish liver. When my liver got bad I would have severe headaches, but after using a couple of vials of your pills, I have not been bothered any more."

WAR SAVING GAME

European Conflict Takes Sportsmen Out of the Field.

Increase in the Price of Guns and Ammunition Makes Hunting a Rich Man's Sport.

Despite the war the permanent wild life protective fund is continuing its battle to save American game from extinction, writes Frederic J. Haskin. War is a benefit to wild life in that it takes many hunters out of the field and has raised the average price of guns and ammunition about 50 per cent, making hunting what it is rapidly becoming in this country, anyway—a rich man's sport.

The wild life protection fund, in its literature and the lectures of its campaigning trustee, William T. Hornaday of the New York zoological park, is seeking to spread the idea that the sportsmen must act to save the game, that they are robbing themselves and future generations if they do not. This idea has been well set forth in a poster of the New Mexico Game Protection associations, which have set out with determination and success to save the wild life of that state. The poster is as follows:

"Your grandfather hunted elk and buffalo until there were none.

"You are hunting deer. There still are some.

"What do you want your son to hunt? Rabbits?"

The average New Mexican reading that sign knows that it is true. He has heard from the old-timers what the abundance of game used to be; he sees in a flash the long generations of ruthless destruction, the inevitable end when the mountains where he loves to hunt will be lifeless.

Another difficulty in the path of game preservation lies in the opposition in congress to federal action in the matter. Nothing but federal action saved the wild fowl. By reason of the migratory game law, drawn by government scientists and providing protection for waterfowl from Canada to Mexico, they are now believed to be safe for a hundred years.

The fact which the average sportsman does not realize is that when a species of wild game is reduced to a certain point it cannot "come back," no matter how much it is protected. For example, in 1884 the buffalo hunters said and believed that there would always be plenty of buffalo. In 1885 they went out to hunt them and there was none. It took them two years to realize the fact that the buffalo was practically extinct. Wolves and hunters destroyed the remnant much faster than it could breed.

Of course the buffalo has been overworked as an object lesson in game protection. As opponents of protective measures have pointed out, the buffalo could not have survived civilization except in very limited numbers anyway.

But this is not true of deer, elk and mountain sheep which inhabit the high mountain ranges that will always be a wilderness. There is only one measure which can save them, and that is the provision of game refuges in national forests where these animals can breed unmolested, and the increase restock the surrounding country.

NERVOUS HEADACHE
PAINS IN BACK

Could Scarcely Get About the House —Doctors Did Not Seem to Help Me, But I Found a Cure Which I Can Recommend to Others.

Mrs. H. Crary, 515 Cedar Street, Peterborough, Ont., writes,

"I was suffering from a run-down condition of the system, nervous debility and sleeplessness. I lost a good many nights' sleep, and some nights after going to sleep, would wake up with a start, and then lie awake for hours. I also had frequent headaches, and pains through my back. It got so bad that I could hardly do any work. I had taken doctors' medicine, but it did not seem to help me. Through reading in the newspapers of the help others had derived from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I started taking this medicine. The first box helped me, so I continued, taking about five or six boxes. I found that I was a great deal better, able to sleep well, and do my work with out any trouble. My headaches and nervousness are gone. My mother lives with me, and she has also found great benefit from the use of the Nerve Food. I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for nervous trouble of any kind."

When the nerves give out everything goes wrong. The heart's action is weakened, the stomach fails to digest the food, headaches result, you cannot rest or sleep properly, and you get run-down and discouraged.

There is only one way to get out of this condition, and that is by feeding the nerves and thereby nourishing them back to health. The most successful treatment used for this purpose is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This fact has been proven in so many thousands of cases all about you that it seems as though everybody should know it by this time.

Ask your friends and neighbours about this great food cure, and put it to the test in your own case. You will then understand why so many people are enthusiastic about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.75, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto. The genuine bears the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author, on the label.

THRILLING LOVE DRAMA AT THE EMPIRE

Mary Garden in "Thais"—An Internationally Famous Story

The story of "Thais," the Goldwyn photoplay in which Mary Garden, the most celebrated woman in the world, makes her screen debut, is that of a world-famous novel by Anatole France.

According to the action of the photoplay, "Thais' is a celebrated beauty in the city of Alexandria, whose innumerable love affairs have scandalized the civilized world. The time is just when Christianity is beginning to supersede pagan beliefs. From among her many lovers the fancy of Thais is engaged by Paphnutius, a wealthy young man who is noted for his learning.

The young philosopher at once falls in love with the beauty, whereupon a jealous rival plans his death. Just as he is emerging from the house of Thais, this rival sets upon him, but, in self-defence, Paphnutius kills him.

Although violent deaths are common in the Alexandria of that day, and there is no likelihood of Paphnutius being punished by the authorities, his Christian precepts tell him that murder is a heinous sin; and completely overcome with remorse at what he has done, he gives away all his worldly goods and becomes a monk with a group of other men doing voluntary penance off in the desert.

Then, when he has become celebrated for his holiness, he conceives the idea of converting Thais because it would have tremendous effect on people everywhere in the great cause, by saving the soul of the most notorious figure in the world of sin.

The outcome of this situation is one of the most thrilling portions of the film.

"FURS AND FRILLS"

The unctious drollery of Richard Carle, the charming lilt of Silvo Hein's music, delightful singing and dancing, a wealth of pretty girls in gorgeous costumes, all combined to make "Furs and Frills" at the Grand Opera House, l st night, one Grand Opera House, last night, one ings. In his new vehicle Mr. Carle repeats his earlier triumphs. He is a comedian of the quiet, restrained type, getting his laughs not from horse play, but from the amusing manner in which he gets over his lines. Last night he was suffering from a swollen face as the result of an ulcerated tooth, but although his affection must have been painful, he apparently got a lot of fun out of his misfortune and his impromptu references to his sore tooth came near upsetting some of his fellow artists. As William McTavish, composer, Mr. Carle's work kept a continuous fusillade of chuckles amongst the audience and there wasn't a quiet moment when his tall figure and bald head—or rather his high face, as he expressed it—were in sight.

"Furs and Frills" is an amusing little mix-up, based on women's love for finery, and on the adventures of a certain Russian sable coat which is bought, stolen, pawned, redeemed, pawned again and given away by mistake after a second rescue from the pawn brokers. There are many applications that give Mr. Carle and his assistants frequent opportunities for fun-making.

The cast was a most accomplished one. Burrell Barbaretto, as McTavish's partner, proved a very clever comedian, ably assisting Mr. Carle in the laugh line. Harriet Burt was altogether delightful as Mrs. McTavish. Fern Rogers' work as Mrs. Macey, could not have been improved upon, and Beth Smalley was irresistibly charming as Polly.

The musical numbers are scored heavily. "Furs and Frills," sung by Fern Rogers, and the chorus was one of the most tuneful offerings, while the topical song "You Can't Take It With You When You Die" by Messrs. Carle and Barbaretto was a tremendous hit. Harriet Burt won many encores with her number "It's Easy to Lie to Your Husband," while the duet "Always Take Mothers' Advice," by Mr. Carle and Miss Smalley was a scream. Miss Smalley also won favour in her solo "Heart of My Heart" and in her duet "Does Polly Want Wally," with Mr. Wells.

A pleasing innovation was the work of four girl violinists in the chorus. One of the four effectively played Braham's Hungarian Dances, No. 5, as a solo number. The chorus were beautifully gowned and the scenic investiture lavish in the extreme.

"Fur and Frills" deserved the capacity audience which filled the Grand.

FISKE O'HARA,
At "The Grand" Next Saturday.

The special orchestra carried by Fiske O'Hara last season, which proved so genuine a treat to theatre-goers who witnessed the Irish star's performance, will again be seen with the company when Mr. O'Hara presents his new play, "The Man From Wicklow," in this city shortly. The orchestra will be under the direction of Mr. O'Hara's general musical conductor, and he has selected a choice programme of popular and classical music, which will be rendered before and during the play. Among the members of the orchestra travelling with the company are Albert Pearl, Cass Freeborn and Herman Steisel, musicians of notable skill and distinction.

Mitzi Hajos In "Pom Pom" Booked For The Grand

The capacity house at "Frills and Furs" last night practically assured another big attraction for Peterboro in the near future. Mr. Webber Turner practically secured for the Grand the brilliant Mitzi Hajos in the musical comedy "Pom Pom," one of the most recent of New York hits. The contract for this production is expected from A. J. Small, the booking agent in Toronto, in a few days. It is only necessary to point out that "Pom Pom" is a Henry Savage production to assure theatregoers of its class. It is a military comedy with excellent music, a company of seventy, and a special orchestra. Mitzi Hajos is one of the most prominent of New York's singing comediennes, and will undoubtedly be the stellar attraction of the local season.

$500 Grant Too Small For Care Of City's Parks

To emphasize the inadequacy of the Council's grant of $500 to the Horticultural Society for the planting and care of the parks this year, Mr. Walter Stocker, president of the society, stated last night that last year's expenditure was $885.80. Of this sum $675 was expended for labour, and $230 for plants.

"It will be utterly impossible for us to carry on the work this year with only $500," Mr. Stocker declared. "We are now figuring on the basis of last year's costs, and it is possible that they will be considerably increased this year. We are very reluctant to leave the parks without the usual plants, but there will be no other alternative if the city cannot provide at least $800."

The deputation from the society included Messrs. R. Denne, W. H. Young, S. Jordan, H. Beal, C. Williamson Kennedy.

Alderman Langford said that he was usually not in favour of increasing grants, "but I don't see how the society can get along on less."

Alderman Taylor—I was in favour of giving the same grant as last year when this was up in committee, but other members who I don't think understood it were not in favour.

The society's request for a larger grant was referred back to the Finance Committee.

Industrial Exhibition Too.

Mayor Duncan promised Mr. Denne a reconsideration of the $500 grant to the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition.

ACCOUNTS PASSED BY CITY COUNCIL

The following recommendations were included in the report of the Finance committee passed by the Council last night:

That a cheque be issued to the Quaker Oats Company for $585.60, being the remission of taxes for 1917 in accordance with an order of His Honour Judge Huycke.

That the chairman of this committee be directed to instruct the Tax Collector to have the rolls for 1917 returned on or before April, 1918.

That the chairman of the various committees in securing supplies of any kind in connection with their departments be asked to secure the same by tender if possible except in emergency cases when they should secure competetive prices from the dealers.

THE WAR VETERANS ENDORSE G. N. GORDON

Mr. Gordon Offers Services Free and That of His Staff —Mayor Duncan's Case Referred to Dominion Secretary.

At a meeting of the Great War Veterans held last evening, Mr. G. N. Gordon was unanimously endorsed as a candidate for the position of local representative in connection with the greater production movement and the distribution of labour. Mr. Gordon was selected in preference to Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P. "Keep away from the politicians," admonished Lieut-Col. T. J. Johnston, who was present at the meeting.

President Staunton of the Veterans' Association announced that it was the intention of the Trades and Labour Council to support Mr. Gordon for the position. He also said that Mr. Gordon would not accept the position if there was any salary attached to it. In that case he would like to see a returned soldier appointed. Mr. Gordon was prepared to give his services and that of his office staff free. A resolution naming Mr. Gordon for the position was unanimously supported. Should the Government decide to pay a salary for the work Mr. Gordon's desire to be relieved of the position will be acceded to.

Dominion Secretary Consulted.

President Staunton reported that a communication had been sent to Mr. F. R. Knight, Dominion Secretary of the Great War Veterans's Association regarding the remarks of Mayor Duncan made at a recent meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council when the Veterans request for a five hundred dollar grant was turned down. A letter demanding an apology was sent to the City Council and was fyled without any action being taken. The next step to be taken by the Association will largely depend on the reply from the Dominion Secretary.

Lieut.-Col. Johnston said that he believed the criticism offered by Mayor Duncan might work for the good of the Association in that it would create sympathy for the Veterans. He said the impression had gone abroad that the Association was nothing more than a club, whereas it constituted a council and its chief object was protection.

During the course of the evening two young ladies entered the room and handed President Staunton thirty dollars which had been collected by the Union Jack Club comprising four members. A vote of thanks was extended to the ladies.

William Stanley, a sixty-year-old veteran with two years' service to his credit, Frederick Haylock and William Herbert, were received into the membership of the Association.

Ald. Taylor's Budget Address Concisely Explains How City Is Meeting Money Problems

Complete Statement of Peterborough's Patriotic Grant and How It Is Raised—The School Rates, Interest on Debentures and Other Details That Affect the Tax Rate.

COUNCIL APPROVES 1918 RATE

The formal by-law embodying the city's tax rate of 34.4 mills, plus one mill for the Provincial war tax and one mill for garbage collection, was passed at the regular meeting of the Council last night. In moving the first reading of this by-law, Ald. Taylor, of the Finance committee, presented a detailed and a lucid statement of his budget which every ratepayer who is interested in Peterborough's financial conditions and in the work of the civic administration should read carefully and comprehendingly.

His address was as follows:

The Patriotic Grants.

The whole sum required to be raised for municipal, school and patriotic purposes, omitting local improvement rates and the levy which the Provincial Legislature has made and requires us to collect for them, and which are not dealt with by this by-law, is $433,706.24, and the rate 34.40 mills. Of this sum $8,547.19 is required for the interest and sinking funds for patriotic grants made in previous years, grants to the Patriotic Fund and the British Red Cross Society. We are quite satisfied to provide money for these purposes because the people are united in a desire that is a determination to provide everything possible for the comfort of the wounded soldiers, and to assist in maintaining their dependents whom they have left behind. But the rate required to raise the interest and sinking funds on these past grants, nearly two-thirds of a mill, shows how the issuing of debentures for these purposes affects the rate for years to come. For this reason it is provided in this by-law that these grants this year be paid directly out of the taxes. The rate required for this is 4.82 mills, which added to the 0.64 mills required for the grants of previous years, makes a total of 5.46 mills, or $73,547.19, for patriotic purposes. In considering the total rate, therefore, it should be borne in mind that in this important respect we are following the sound policy of paying as we go.

The School Rates.

Then there are the school rates, over which, rightly or wrongly, we have no control. The School Boards, the members of which are responsible to the people as we are, make up the estimates of their requirements for conducting the schools for the year, and send them to us, and we have nothing to do with them, so long as they are for purposes within the jurisdiction of the Boards, but to raise the money by a levy on the property taxable to pay it over to them. For the Public schools the Board of Education requires $80,714.88, which makes a rate of seven mills, and for the Collegiate Institute $30,178.42, or 2.27 mills. The interest and sinking funds for Public school debentures requires $16,047.21 or 1.40 mills, and for Collegiate Institute debentures $5,139.60 or 0.39 mills. This makes a total rate for Public schools and Collegiate Institute purposes of 11.06 mills, which is 1.23 mills more than last year. The Separate School Board requires $14,725.26, which makes a rate for the supporters of these schools the same as for the Public school supporters. In all $146,895.37 is required for school purposes.

Debentures Interest.

To provide for general city debentures, that is the interest and sinking fund on these debentures, as shown by the statement sent to the Council by the City Trust, $30,134.62 is required, for which the rate is 2.52 mills. And for interest and sinking funds which have to be paid by the city as a whole on local improvement debentures—for sewers, sidewalks and pavements constructed in previous years—the amount is $35,660.88, or three mills.

There is in addition $2,056.61 required for maintenance of old people sent to the Protestant Home, in accordance with an agreement made with the Home several years ago, and $650.99 for the debentures which were issued at that time for the portion of the expense of constructing the Home which was contributed by the city, making a rate for the Protestant Home of 0.26 mills. And, also, in accordance with an agreement made several years ago $455.78 will be paid for the care of old people to the House of Providence, making the same rate, 0.26 mills. As the Protestant Home rate is levied on Protestants only, and the House of Providence rate on Roman Catholics only, the total rate for these purposes is 7.26 mills on each class of ratepayers.

Summary of Rates.

By summing up all these sums and rates it will be seen what a large amount, and what a large proportion of the total rate, is outside the control of the Council as follows:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Collegiate Institute | 2.27 | $ 30,178.42 |
| Public schools | 7.00 | 80,714.88 |
| Public school debentures | 1.40 | 16,047.21 |
| Collegiate Institute debentures | 0.39 | 5,139.60 |
| R. C. Separate schools | 8.40 | 14,725.26 |
| Protestant Home | 0.20 | 2,056.61 |
| Protestant Home debentures | 0.06 | 650.99 |
| House of Providence | 0.26 | 455.78 |
| City General debentures | 2.52 | 30,134.62 |
| Citys share Local Imp. debentures | 3.00 | 35,660.88 |
| Patriotic Grants debentures | 0.64 | 8,547.19 |
| | 17.48 | 224,311.44 |
| This Year's Patriotic Grants | 4.82 | 65,000.00 |
| | 22.30 | 289,311.44 |

This leaves of the total requirements $144,394.80 and of the total rate 12.10 mills and shows to some extent the comparatively small amount over which the Council has control.

Other Expenditures.

And even of this amount there are considerable items which the Council has no power to govern. The Police Department is entirely administered by the Police Commission, the public library by the Public Library Board, and the isolation hospital by the Board of Health. And to these the Council must levy and pay the amounts required by these bodies. Further the amount payable to the county for the city's share of the administration of justice was fixed for a period of years by arbitration, and we have no control over that. The law also provides that public hospitals must receive indigent patients who require hospital treatment and that the municipalities of which they were resident at the time of admission must pay for their maintenance. Under this law we are not only called upon to make payments to the local hospitals, but also to hospitals in other cities and towns, and we have no option in the matter. Sums must also be paid, although not large, to the industrial schools for boys and girls residents of Peterborough, who are committed to these schools by the courts of law, and the salary of the Police Magistrate is also fixed by law. These further items, which we cannot control, amount to the following

| | |
|---|---|
| Police Department | $ 16,000.00 |
| Public Library | 4,900.00 |
| Isolation Hospital | 4,000.00 |
| Payable to County | 5,037.21 |
| Public Hospitals | 2,565.00 |
| Industrial Schools | 522.79 |
| Salary of Police Magistrate | 1,400.00 |
| | $34,422.00 |

These sums make a further rate of 2.87 mills, and of the 12.10 mills levied for the general city purposes, leaves only 9.23 mills under the control of the Council.

The Council's Limited Control.

Of the total amount required to be raised, of $433,706.24, the Council, as the analysis shows, has, apart from the patriotic grants, control over only $110,972.80. And of this amount the Council only has control over it in the sense that a manufacturer has control over the expenses required to carry on his factory or a business man to carry on his business. For out of this sum must be paid the expenses of the fire department; the maintenance of the streets and bridges, including the oiling or watering of the streets and the removal of the snow; the lighting of the streets; the payments for the hydrants for fire protection; the expenses connected with the care of public health and sanitation; the general administration of the affairs of the city, and the grants for social purposes and all the other expenditures connected with the services of the government of the city.

Explanation of General Rate.

There is one more phase of the matter to which I wish to take time to refer. I have said that, even including items amounting to $34,422.00 which I have pointed out the Council have no control, the city general rate is 12.10 mills. This is an increase of 1.88 mills over last year. But the increase in the assessment is $399,785, so that the increase in this particular rate might be said to be 2.28 mills, and I wish to explain this increase.

Last year there was a surplus of $18,471.87 brought over from 1916, while we have a surplus from 1917 of $1,937.00, a difference of $16,534.97. This accounts for 1.38 mills of the increase. There is an increase in the Police Commissioners' demand of $1,922.00 and in the Public Library Board demand of $400.00. The increase in the appropriation for the fire department is $6,500.00 caused almost entirely by the action of the Council of last year. These three items together with the difference in the surplus brought forward in the two years, account for 2.11 mills of the increase of 2.28 mills in the rate for general city purposes, leaving only a balance of seventeen hundredths (0.17) of a mill. And when the increases in the cost of carrying out any work, both for material and wages, is taken into account, I think that it will be conceded this small increase shows that the Council has prepared the estimates with care and with a view to keeping as low as possible the expenditures and the rate over which we have control.

SCHOOL FOR THE BLIND

Halifax, N.S., Jan. 15th, 1918.

To the Friends of the Blind in Canada:—

In view of the recent terrible explosion in Halifax, and the number of persons who have become totally or practically blind as a result of the same, the several organizations in Halifax for the care and training of the blind find themselves almost overwhelmed in meeting the new conditions which have arisen. Even before the disaster the resources of the Halifax School for the Blind, the Home Teaching Society for the Blind, the Maritime Association for the Blind, etc., etc., found it almost impossible with their limited resources to meet the demands upon them, but these demands have been suddenly increased by the necessity for providing shelter, care and training for upwards of two hundred men, women and children who lost their sight as a result of the recent disaster. Under these circumstances it is imperative that an appeal be made to all sympathetic and public spirited Canadians. The best and most effective way of making provision for these sightless people is to immediately increase the Blind Endowment Fund so that it may reach a total of $500,000.00. The income arising from such an endowment fund will enable us to meet the problems of the blind in Halifax in a systematic and practical manner, and would bring to many a one now helpless and hopeless new opportunities to fit himself or herself for the battle of life. No greater need to help the blind has ever risen in any part of the world and I believe that when the people of Canada fully appreciate the situation generous help will be forthcoming.

The Blind Endowment Fund is in the hands of three trustees, namely, the President of the Board of Managers of the School for the Blind, Halifax; the Treasurer of the School for the Blind, and The Eastern Trust Co. of Halifax.

A Few Typical Cases of the Recent Disaster May be Cited.

A woman of 31, now totally blind, is a patient in one hospital, while her little daughter, 9 years of age, totally blind, is a patient in another. Two other children of this mother were killed in the explosion, and two were badly cut but will recover. The husband and father was killed at his work.

In another family the mother, 35 years old, is totally blind, the father has lost one eye and a child aged 5 is totally blind. There were seven children in all in this family, of whom the remaining six are being cared for by aged grandparents. One of these children is tubercular.

A young wife of 18 whose husband is in the army is still in hospital, four months pregnant and frantic over practical blindness.

In another family the mother was killed. The father, a discharged disabled soldier, who has lost one leg, was not injured in the explosion. When their two children, little girls, were seen in one hospital, one about 2½ years old had one eye enucleated, a hand nearly severed by cuts and bad cuts on face; the other child, about 20 months old, had to have both eyes enucleated; the visiting workers met the volunteers heretofore inexperienced in nursing, who had the night of the disaster, held these children during their operations.

A mother, 45 years of age, now totally blind, had five children, of whom one is missing, one lost a leg, one is suffering from other serious injury, and one is totally blind. The father was probably killed, as he has been missing since the explosion. The child of their married daughter is also totally blind and badly mutilated.

A mother, of 39, totally blind, had a child of ten totally blinded in the explosion who has since died. A second child, aged 12, has lost one eye. The husband, a soldier, is in the trenches overseas.

Contributions towards the Blind Endowment Fund may be sent to the Examiner Office, or to

SIR FREDERICK FRASER,
School for the Blind, Halifax.

EGGS HAD A HISTORY AND ALSO WERE VERY COSTLY

TORONTO, March 4. — Eggs travel long distances in these days of high cost of living. At the same time the price soars rapidly. It is rarely the history of an egg is known from the time it leaves the producer until it reaches the consumer in a big city like Toronto, but Mr. A. J. Clague, 192 Scarboro' road, made an investigation a few days ago and found that eggs he was using came from Duck Lake, Saskatchewan.

On February 15 last Mr. Clague bought some eggs from a Toronto grocer at sixty cents a dozen. They were marked "T. J. Urton, Duck Lake, Sask." Curious as to the history of the eggs, Mr. Clague wrote to Mr. Urton for information. In reply he was told that the eggs were sold by Mr. Urton fourteen months ago at twenty cents a dozen. "You can tell your grocer that he is sure making use of the high cost of living," added the Saskatchewan man.

COUNCIL WILL TAKE THE LEAD IN GREATER PRODUCTION WORK

Mayor Duncan Announced Early Initiative—Peterboro' Endorses Movement for National Daylight Saving—Other Routine Work at Regular Meeting Last Night.

Mayor Duncan sounded a new call for greater production of foodstuffs in Peterborough at the regular meeting of the Council last night. Following his statement that the leadership in this movement apparently devolved upon the Council, the Mayor announced that this subject would be discussed at a meeting of the Committee of the Whole, which will be called in the near future.

From his experience last year Ald. Dobbin advised the Council that success depended upon action. Some one would have to obtain permission from property holders to use their vacant lots for gardening. He suggested that Assistant City Clerk Ingram might find time to assume the duty of listing these lots and apportioning them to citizens who hadn't gardens of their own.

DAYLIGHT SAVING.

Ald. Worth's enquiry about the progress of the daylight saving scheme preceded his motion to inform Mr. J. H. Burnham that Peterborough endorses this proposed innovation, providing it is applied to the whole of Canada.

SPECIAL COMMITTEE.

Mayor Duncan named Aldermen Worth, A. A. McIntyre and Edgar as a committee to act with the Board of Education and Greater Peterborough Association in a concerted effort to secure for this city the proposed technical training school to be provided in this district for invalided soldiers. In suggesting immediate action, Ald. Edgar urged that Peterborough get busy at once and present to the Government the city's claim for this school.

STATEMENT OF ROLL.

Tax Collector Green's statement, ending February 28th, is as follows: To total amount of roll...$376,999.60 By total deposit..... 351,490.24

Balance.....$25,509.36
Deposited in February '..... $2,067.48

DEBENTURES AT 6 PER CENT.

The Utilities Commission recommended the Council to increase the rate of the sub-station debentures to 6 per cent., also that the offer of the City Trust to take the $13,200 waterworks debentures at par. be accepted.

ASKS FOR 78 CENTS REFUND.

Mrs. R. Fitzgerald petitioned the Council to remit 78 cents interest added to her tax bill. She had paid all her other bills in the required time and would have paid this one had she received it earlier. She had thought all her bills paid.—Finance Committee.

HYDRO RAILWAY ASSOCIATION

T. J. Hannigan, Secretary of the Hydro-Electric Railway Association, invited the Council to send representatives to the general meeting of the Association in Toronto on Tuesday, March 12.—Referred to Railway Committee.

TRAINMEN MUST FLAG THE PARK ST. CROSSING

The official report of the Dominion Railway Board on the disproval of the C. G. E. Company's petition for permission to shunt cars across Park Street during the day time was received by the Council. As previously published, the Company was granted this permission for the duration of the war. Trainmen must "flag" the crossing for all train movements between 7 a.m. and 6 p.m.

$14,725 REQUIRED BY THE SEPARATE SCHOOL BOARD

James Drain, Secretary-Treasurer of the Separate School Board, notified the Council that $14,725 would be required by the Board this year, and would represent a rate of 8.4 mills on an assessment of $1,753,008. Payment was requested in ten monthly installments of $1,472.50.

GOVERNMENT'S FISH SUPPLY REMAINS WITH 4 DEALERS

"The war clouds have not lifted and the need of conserving food is more urgent than ever," wrote S. L. Squire of the Government Fisheries Sales branch in a letter announcing the completion of plans for distributing fresh water fish this year. "We anticipate being able to take care of any demands."

Mr. Squire asked for a list of the dealers the Council would propose to serve the local consumers.

Ald. Edgar—"I don't think it is wise to limit this business to two or three dealers." It is stated that they are getting not only the Government fish business but other business is driven to them from dealers who are not receiving this fish.

Mayor Duncan—"The Government asked us to recommend two or three dealers, and we proposed four. We have to gourantee the payment of their accounts."

Alderman Dobbin and Edgar favoured the admission of all the dealers to this privilege.

Ald. Worth remarked that the Government couldn't deal with all of them, and moved, seconded by Ald. M. McIntyre, that the business remain with the dealers appointed last year.—Carried.

The Government's fish supply is now sold by Messrs. J. Steinberg, R. C. Braund, Douros & Gettas, and G. A. Pringle.

Mayor Duncan explained that there wasn't enough of this fish to divide among fifty dealers. "We'd wind up by getting none at all," he said.

Ald. Edgar—"We're not getting much anyway. If they can't sell this fish to all the dealers, let the Government open a store of its own."

COLLECTION OF GARBAGE FROM ST. JOSEPH'S HOSPITAL

City Solicitor Gordon informed the Council that "regarding the refusal of the garbage collectors to collect garbage from St. Joseph's Hospital I do not think the collector can be compelled to enter the grounds of the hospital unless he cares to do it, unless there is a lane."

The by-law, Mr. Gordon explained, provided for the collection of garbage from lanes and street lines. "In my opinion the garbage requires to be placed near the street line of the street upon which the property abutts which is within the area and the garbage collector cannot be required to go on Concession street to collect the garbage from St. Joseph's hospital grounds."

Mr. Gordon added that he doubted that the by-law gave the city power to extend the area.

Ald. M. McIntyre stated that the garbage collectors had offered to remove the hospital's garbage for $60. The present tax rate is $45.

According to the contract Concession street at the rear of the hospital, is outside the collection area. There is no lane on the north side of the grounds. The garbage will, of course, be taken away by the contractors if it is placed on Rogers street, and this requires that it be carried by the hospital employees down from the back of the deep lot to the street line.

Ald. Edgar stated that the hospital authorities had offered the contractors $30. "This is a matter for the Hospital authorities and the collectors to arrange he added.

Ald. Dobbin—"If they put the garbage on the street line it will be collected. I don't think we should make an exception for one case."

Mayor Duncan—"I don't see what we can do."

Ald. Edgar—"The garbage collectors are doing good work and we ought to leave them alone."

Ald. A. A. McIntyre—"They (the Hospital authorities) are asking the do something extra."

Ald. M. McIntyre moved, seconded by Ald. Langford, that the question be referred to the Property Committee.

CITY ACCEPTS NEW CHEMICAL ENGINE

Mayor Duncan was authorized by the Council last night to sign the certificate of acceptance of the Fire Department's chemical engine, and Ald. Worth's motion provided for the payment of the apparatus according to the contract.

Ald. Dobbin read Chief Grange's report that the motor truck had been sent over all the hills in the city, including "Smithtown." It put out one fire before the horse-drawn apparatus arrived. The Chief's test found that the chemical engine shot a stream thirty feet high. The equipment includes 200 feet of hose more than specified.

"I question very much whether there has been a trial of sufficient duration to constitute a complete acceptance," Mr. Gordon wrote.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mr. Arthur Haimes, Ashton Farm, Perley, Sask., writes: "Two years ago whooping cough was very bad in this part of the country; our eight months old boy caught it and had a very severe attack. A neighbor advised the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and we gave it and nothing else with splendid results. When the older brother took the whooping cough we used this medicine promptly and prevented serious trouble, as the cough passed off in two or three days."

CITIZENS CLAIM DAMAGES FOR LOSS OF PROVISIONS BY FLOODS

Thomas Blodgett, 358 Dublin street, informed the Council last night that e Downie street creek's rampage d filled his cellar with water almost the kitchen.

"In not keeping the creek free from ow and ice this winter," he wrote, ou have failed to line up to your ntract and placed yourselves liable damages."

He listed his loss as follows: Two gs of potatoes, thirty cabbages, ght quarts of raspberries, four arts of canned peas, five pint jars pickles, six pints of ketchup. Mr. odgett intimated that he could not ford this loss and suggested that e Council pay him at their own estiate.

Mayor Duncan stated that he did not think that the city was at fault in this matter.

Mr. Blodgett's communication was referred to the Board of Works.

Sugar Destroyed.

Ernest W. Middleton, 513 Reid street, claimed damages from the flooding of his premises on February 23, in a letter from his solicitors, Peck, Kerr and McElderry.

"Negligence of the municipal officials in not having opened the manhole on Reid street" to prevent the accumulation of water, was alleged by Mr. Middleton as the cause of the flooding. His carpets were damaged and a large quantity of sugar stored in his cellar was destroyed. Referred to the Board of Works.

Want Peterboro' Planing Mill In New Fire Limits

A petition signed by Chas. Rishor, Schneider Brothers, Alex. Gibson and other property holders, requested the Council to amend the building by-law in order that the fire limits shall include those parts of lots two, west of George street, south of Dublin, west of George and north of London, lying east of Division street.

This communication was referred to the Property committee. It is evidently a movement to demand fire walls and other stringent specifications designed to prevent fires in the planing mill on Dublin street, which was seriously damaged in a recent blaze.

STOMACH TROUBLES ARE DUE TO ACIDITY

Tells Safe, Certain, Speedy, Relief For Acid Indigestion.

So-called stomach troubles, such as indigestion, gas, sourness, stomach-ache, and inability to retain food are in probably nine cases out of ten, simply evidence that excessive secretion of acid is taking place in the stomach causing the formation of gas and indigestion.

Gas distends the stomach and causes that full oppressive burning feeling sometimes known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach. The trouble lies entirely in the excessive development or secretion of acid.

To stop or prevent this souring of the food contents of the stomach and to neutralize the acid and, make it bland and harmless, a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, a good and effective corrector of acid stomach, should be taken in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water after eating or whenever gas, sourness or acidity is felt. This sweetens the stomach and neutralizes the acidity in a few moments and is a perfectly harmless and inexpensive remedy to use.

An antacid, such as bisurated magnesia which can be obtained from any druggist in either powder or tablet form enables the stomach to do its work properly without the aid of artificial digestents. Magnesia comes in several forms so be certain to ask for and take only Bisurated Magnesia which is especially prepared for the above purpose.

SALARY INCREASES TO CITY OFFICIALS HELD UP BY THE COUNCIL

"I'd like to see the salary increases to city officials made upon their request and not upon the suggestion of two or three members of the council," commented Ald. A. A. McIntyre discussing a clause in the Finance Committee's report last evening.

The increases recommended by the committee were: City Clerk, $100; City Treasurer, $100; Tax Collector, $100; Assistant Treasurer, $50; and stenographer in treasurer's office, $50.

Mayor Duncan: The tax collector asked for an increase, and I mentioned Mr. Evans at the meeting of the Board of Works.

Ald. McIntyre: I am not objecting to the increases, but I think that all salary questions should be referred to the Committee of the Whole. We should not make fish of one and flesh of another. He moved that the question be referred to the whole council.

Ald. Worth seconded the motion, saying that $100 was too small an increase for City Clerk Armstrong. "It's so small it looks fishy," he remarked.

The motion was defeated, only Ald A. A. McIntyre supporting it. The latter opposed the subsequent bylaw sanctioning the recommended increases stating that a two thirds vote was required.

A discussion ensued on this point and Ald. McIntyre moved an amendment, seconded by Ald. Langford, that the bylaw be stayed until the City Solicitor's opinion was obtained.

The council tied on the vote, those supporting the amendment being Ald Worth, Langford, Jones, A. A. McIntyre and M. McIntyre. Those opposing it were Mayor Duncan, Ald. Saunders, Taylor, Edgar and Dobbin. Ald. Weir was absent.

The vote was reversed on the motion to pass the bylaw, which was subsequently withdrawn or at least suspended.

SKIPS' BONSPIEL CONSOLATION WON BY GEORGE MORROW AFTER HARD SERIES OF VERY CLOSE GAMES

"CONSOLATION" WINNERS.

Semi-Finals.

W. C. Morrow 12, J. W. McDermid 11.

A. W. Archibald 9, A. C. Kay 14.

Kay 9, Morrow 11.

Defeated in the semi-finals of the primary round by the score of 10-9 in an extra end with Rollie Waddell, George Morrow came right back and grabbed the consolation honours by defeating Alex. Kay last night by the score of 11 to 9. When the crowd in "No. 8" get to tooting the horns of absent members, they've got to sound a long and loud blast for Mr. Morrow. Last Thursday night in the primary eights he eliminated Alex. Kay with a last shot that gave him a three end and the game by a margin of one. Out in the semi-finals he tied up his game with Waddell in the last end, and lost in the extra by one stone that wasn't far away when the horseshoes were cast.

Coming to the semi-finals of the consolation round last night, Morrow disposed of McDermid with a single point margin, then clashed once more with Kay and won out by the score of 11 to 9.

All of these were close, keenly-contested games, and to win last night Morrow had to play twenty-four ends, was rather severely shaken up in a fall on the ice and in short defeated two first-class skips like McDermid and Kay. That's some exhibition of the old fighting spirit that showed strongest in the pinches. And when full recognition has been paid Skip Morrow don't overlook his vice, Jim Connal, whose play throughout the bonspiel has been as good on the "tee" as it was on the firing line.

HOCKEY AND SKATING AT BROCK STREET RINK TO AID THE VETERANS

To-morrow night's game between the Peterborough Old Boys and the Peterborough Junior O.H.A. team in aid of the Great War Veterans' will be a real battle. The old guard are confident that they can show this year's team how the game can be played, while the juniors on the other hand expect to show their opponents that the game is getting faster every year. The old boys team is strong in all departments.

The game will start at 8 o'clock, with Jerry Coughlin refereeing. There will be skating afterwards with the band in attendance. A big night is promised.

Peterboro' Boy Stars With Sarnia Juniors Scores Seven Goals

SARNIA, March 4.—Stratford earned the right to go into the Northern League final against Chesley, when the semi-finals. Stratford defeated they held Sarnia to an 8 to 4 score here to-night in the return game of Sarnia in Stratford by 6 to 1, and thus won the round by 10 to 9. It was a thrilling contest from start to finish, with the score on the round tied four times in the final period. Lavelle of Stratford, won the round for the visitors when he scored the fourth and deciding goal about five seconds before the bell rang for termination of play.

The Stratford wings had no trouble in evading the opposing forwards, but the sterling defence work of Montgomery and Crouchman of the home team broke up many promising rushes and forced the visiting forwards to shoot from far out. The work of Montgomery can be described as sensational. The clever Sarnia defence player scored seven of his team's eight goals, checked back like a fiend and was a tower of strength defensively. The teams:

Stratford (4) — Goal, Malone; defence, Hoffman and Seebach; centre, Moranz; wings, Thorne and Lavelle.

Sarnia (8) — Goal, McAllister; defence, Montgomery and Crouchman; centre, Garvey; wings, Brown and Jacobs.

Referee—Munro, London.

HOCKEY

Guelph Is Trying A New Election Plan

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

TORONTO, March 5.—By unanimous consent of the Private Bills Committee of the Legislature to-day, iment in civic government which may, the City of Guelph will try an experin the opinion of the committee, be followed by other cities of the province. This bill provides for the election of six members of the city council for a three-year term, six for two years and six for one year, and the mayor to be elected by the council instead of directly by the vote of the people. The bill provides also for the absorption of the powers of a board of light and heat commissioners, radial board and sundry other ...n bodies by the city council. Sam Carter, M.P.P. and Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Solicitor-General of Canada, who is a citizen of Guelph, were the sponsors for the bill.

The Veterans Want Inquiry

Canadian Press Despatch:

HAMILTON, Ont., March 5.—The Great War Veterans of Hamilton have passed a strong resolution calling on Sir Robert Borden to order an immediate inquiry into the soldiers voting overseas, and charges that the men in the trenches were misled regarding the soldier candidates in the field.

Dog Catcher Is A Left-hand Shot

James Gates, official dog catcher, brought in a couple more dogs this morning. Gates is conceded to be one of the best left-hand shots in the city, and his next shooting expedition may be expected to produce big results. Six dogs were accounted for yesterday, and the complete total of dogs captured and disposed of since the creation of the office is highly gratifying to the civic authorities.

Egg Story Discounted

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Ont., March 5.—W. F. O'Connor, Cost of Living Commissioner, is inclined to be skeptical about Toronto's latest egg story. The story was to the effect that a Toronto grocer had sold eggs recently at sixty cents per dozen which eggs T. J. Tirton of Duck Lake Sask., declared he had sold the grocer 14 months before for 20 cents a dozen.

"No eggs were sold anywhere for twenty cents a dozen fourteen months ago. That is ridiculous. Moreover, an egg won't last 14 months. At the end of that time it would not be an egg. It would be nothing but an unpleasant memory."

"Supposing the story proves true?" Mr. O'Connor was asked. "What action could be taken in the matter?"

"I am not a prosecutor," he replied. "I am only an investigator. Any Canadian citizen can institute action in the usual way providing he is sure of his facts."

Ministers Still Acting Says Premier

Special to The Toronto Star and the Peterboro Examiner.)

OTTAWA, March 5.—'Mr. Sevigny is still Minister of Inland Revenue and Mr. Blondin is still Postmaster-General on leave of absence," declared Sir Robert Borden to-day, in reply to an inquiry as to the reported resignation of the former, contained in a despatch from Quebec yesterday.

Pressed as to whether Mr. Sevigny had actually resigned or not, Sir Robert declared that he would rather not savanything more about the matter at present.

From present indications, F. F. Pardee, former Chief Liberal Whip, is still the best bet for Postmaster. Inland Revenue, it is anticipated, will be absorbed into the customs.

Parliament Will Meet March 18th

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, March 5.—It is officially announced the Dominion Parliament will meet Monday, March 18th. It is expected Hon. E. N. Rhodes will be elected speaker. Sir Robert Borden met press representatives to-day for the first time since his return from Washington. He expressed great satisfaction with results of the mission and conviction that there would henceforth be full co-operation between the United States and Canada in winning the war.

Commissioner Re-Appointed

Canadian Press Despatch:

DETROIT, March 5.— Police Commissioner James Cousens, who was removed from office yesterday by Acting Mayor Joseph Walsh, an alderman, was re-appointed to-day by Mayor Oscar B. Marx. Walsh took action yesterday while Mayor Marx was in New York. Cousens ignored Walsh's order.

Aldermen Tell Of Dead Furnaces And Cold Homes

Mr. Alex Murray of the Trades and Labour Council was so disgusted at the failure of a delegation of machinists to attend last night's Council meeting to appeal for efficient control of coal allottments this year, that he exclaimed indignantly: "The Trades and Labour Council is just a false alarm, like a good many other Councils."

Paraphrasing the question in ancient parable he implied the query: "And where are the other nine?" In this case nine of the machinists had promised to give Mayor Duncan's meeting a pointer or two, but Mr. Murray was the only attendant. Probably the rest remained away because they knew Mr. Murray would be there.

e urged the Council to build up a plan of distributing coal this year that would guarantee to working men their share of the supplies received.

Mayor Duncan replied that the Council has been considering the establishment of central distributing office, where all orders for coal would be filed and recorded, and handed to the dealers designated by the purchasers. It was hoped that the dealers would agree to this scheme; in fact some of them had already endorsed it.

"But I don't see how we can force any dealer to come in," added the Mayor.

His letter in the press, incidentally asserting that members of the Council were out of fuel was doubted by Mr. Murray.

"My fire has been out for three or four nights," Mayor Duncan replied.

Ald. Saunders—"I've had no nut coal—for six weeks and have barely been able to get big grades."

Ald. A. McIntyre—"My furnace has been out for ten days"

Ald. Jones—"I've been out of coal for days and have had to burn old scantlings."

Ald. Worth said his furnace had been out at least a week.

OBITUARY

W. A. HALL.

Death last night removed one of the oldest residents of Smith Township, when William Alexander Hall passed away at the family residence, 88 London street, after an illness of only a few days' duration.

The late Mr. Hall was born in Smith township 81 years ago, and was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Hall, two of the pioneer residents of Smith Township, who came to reside there from Galashiles, Scotland. During his long life, which was spent until eight years ago, when he removed with his family to Peterboro he resided continuously on the farm upon which he was born. Although somewhat hampered by deafness from taking an active part in public life, he was keenly interested in all public matters and was a staunch Liberal. In religion he was a Presbyterian, and a member of St. Paul's church. He was widely known, and universally respected by all with whom he came in contact.

There are left of his immediate family his wife, formerly Isabella Bertram, sister of the late John Bertram, and six children: Mrs. Archibald Davidson, city; Miss Agnes, at home; John Bertram, of Toronto; Alexander George, of Toronto; Hugh Johnston, Edmonton, and Lt. W. Gordon Hall, of the Eastern Ontario Regimental Depot, Seaford, England; and two brothers, Richard and John, of this city.

Funeral on Thursday morning, at 11 o'clock, to the Little Lake cemetery, Rev. Mr. Pogue officiating. (No flowers, please.)

Social and Personal

Miss Mary Elliott, of Montreal, is the guest of Miss Elliott, Water street.

The many friends of Mrs. Bernard Welsh, of 221 Princess street, will be pleased to learn that she has sufficiently recovered from her recent ailment to permit of her going to her people at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. Her daughter Maidie Ryan, of the C.G.E., will likely accompany her mother across the line and possibly remain there.

Much interest is being taken in the illustrated lecture on the "Yukon" to be given on Thursday evening, the 7th inst., in the basement of Trinity church, by Mrs. Louise Armstrong of the White Horse Chapter, I.O.D.E.

Mrs. Roy and her son, John, Toronto, are the guests of Mrs. Paquette, George street south.

Mr. Louis Potvin spent the week-end in Toronto.

Miss Elsie Mowatt has returned from a few days' visit with friends in Toronto.

Mrs. Ridpath, who has been visiting her sisters, the Misses Wade, 87 London street, has returned to her home in Lethbridge, Alta.

Miss Edith Daubuz, Lakefield, is in the city for a short visit.

Mrs. Gilbert Pakenham is in Nicholls Hospital undergoing treatment.

Mr. Robert Fair is in Montreal on business.

Mr. E. L. Goodwill is in Ottawa to-day on business.

Miss Geraldine Hooper has returned from Toronto, where she attended the Royal Flying Corps' dance on Friday evening.

Her many friends in the city will be interested to learn that the wedding of Miss Marion Pinchin, daughter of Mr. Pinchin, formerly of Peterborough, and Captain Clarke Roose, R.F.C., lately returned from overseas, will be celebrated to-morrow in Toronto.

Mr. Walter T. Orde, Wininpeg, was in the city yesterday renewing old acquaintances and will return to the city after a few days' visit with Mr. Robert Orde, Otonabee.

Miss Florence Scott and Miss Margaret Neill left to-day for Toronto to attend the wedding of Miss Marion Pinchin and Captain Clarke Roose.

Mr. J. Bertram Hall and Mr. A. George Hall, Toronto, have been called to the city by the death of their father, the late Mr. W. A. Hall, 88 London street.

Mrs. George Smith and children of Campbellford have returned home after spending a week with Mrs. J. Moreau, 113 Rubidge street.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Myers (nee Aggie Linster) of Woodrow, Saskatchewan, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Morten, 213 Stewart street, left this morning for Fenelon Falls and Brantford on their way home.

Harold Jones of the Royal Flying Corps, Toronto, is visiting friends in the city for a few days.

Miss Lillian Calder has been successful in passing her third pianoforte examination at the Toronto College of Music.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Pte. William McKinstry, who gave his life for King and country, March 5th, 1917:
Not good-bye, only good-night,
For we shall meet in the morning light.
—From Mr. and Mrs. Lee and Family.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of Pte. William McKinstry, killed in action March 4th, 1917, the beloved husband of Elizabeth McKinstry, Orpington Road:
Sleep on, beloved, sleep and take thy rest,
Lay down thy head upon thy Saviour's breast;
We loved thee well, but Jesus loved thee best. Good-night!

Only good-night, beloved, not farewell,
A little while and all His saints shall dwell
In hallowed union, indivisible. Good-night,
Until we meet again before His throne,
Clothed in the spotless robes He gives His own.
Until we know even as we are known. Good-night.
For King and country he did his best,
God grant his soul eternal rest.

British Won First Cambrai Battle And Germans Won Second

German Advance, After Byng's Spectacular Success, Was So Swift That It "Appears to Have Overwhelmed Our Troops"—Fresh Forces From Russia Relieved Foe's Weary Troops.

SHELLING FACTOR IN FOE'S COUNTER-ATTACK

LONDON, March 6.—(Delayed).—The War Office to-night made public a long despatch from Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig covering the much-discussed battles on the Cambrai front last November. It relates in much detail how the operations were carried out, tells of the successes at first achieved, and alludes, quite as frankly, to the substantial reverses which compelled a withdrawal from territory that had been captured, no blame being imputed to anyone for this latter occurrence.

Discussing the reasons for the decision to attack on the Cambrai front Field Marshal Haig says that the repeated assaults in Flanders had caused a weakening of the enemy's line elsewhere, and that of these weakened sectors that of Cambrai was deemed the most suitable for the surprise operation contemplated, the ground being favourable for the employment of tanks, the plan being to dispense with previous artillery preparation, which would have prevented secrecy, and depend instead on the tanks to smash their way through the enemy's wire.

FRESH ENEMY LINES.

"The enemy" writes the Field Marshal, "was laying out fresh lines of defence behind those which he had already completed on the Cambrai troops would be redistributed as soon as our pressure in Flanders relaxed. He had already brought large forces from Russia in exchange for divisions exhausted in the struggle in the western theatre, and it was practically certain that heavy reinforcements would be brought from the east to the west during the winter.

"Against the arguments in favor of immediate action, I had to weigh the fact that my own troops had been engaged many months in heavy fighting. The conditions of the struggle had greatly taxed their strength.

Only a part of the losses of my divisions had been replaced and many of the recently arrived drafts were still far behind being fully trained and included in the ranks of the armies.

Eventually the British commander decided in favour of immediate action.

"The infantry, the tanks and the artillery, working in combination," he continued, "Where to ende.r to break through all the enemy's lines of defence on the first day. If this were successfully accomplished and the situation developed favorably cavalry were then to be passed through to raid the enemy's communications, disorganize his system of command, damage his railways, and interfere as much as possible with the arrival of reinforcements.

"It was explained to all the commanders that everything depended upon secrecy up to the moment of starting, and after that on bold, determined, rapid action. Unless the opposition could be reduced quickly no great results could be looked for."

SPECTACULAR SUCCESSES.

The attack, the field marshal notes, was started at 6.30 o'clock on the morning of Nov. 20. The spectacular successes which first attended it have ben told in the correspondents' reports written at the time.

I was on the last day of November that the triumph began to give way to disaster.

"At the northern end of the Bonavis ridge and in the Gonnelieu sector," the commader relates, "the swiftness with which the advance of the enemy's infantry followed the opening of his bombardment appears to have overwhelmed our troops, both in the line and the immediate support, almost befroe they had realized the attack had begun. The nature, of the bombardment, which seems to have been heavy enough to keep our mn under cover without at first seriously alarming them, contributed to the success of the enemy."

Submarines Are Being Sunk By Allies Fast As They Are Built

Exaggeration of Sinking is Getting Worse, Says Sir E. Geddes—Shipping Output is Being Rushed—But Some Time Must Pass Before Desired Output is Reached.

ADDITIONAL FORCES

LONDON, March 6. — "For some months," said Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty, "we believe that we and the Americans have been sinking submarines as fast as they are built."

The trend of the figures of loss of shipping by enemy action was steadily improving, Sir Eric stated. The loss to the world's tonnage during February was little more than half the loss during February of last year, he said.

LONDON, March 6.— "Our allies are making every effort to increase their production of ships," Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty, said yesterday. "But despite glowing reports in the American press and great as the effort of that country doubtless is, there is no doubt a considerable time must elapse before the desired output is obtained."

Sir Eric said the rate of exaggeration in the German reports of tonnage alleged to have been sunk was increasing steadily. The exaggeration in the second quarter of the period of unrestricted submarine warfare was twice that of the first quarter. The rates in the third and fourth quarters were three and four times that of the first quarter and in January four and one-half times the first quarter.

Sir Eric, whose address was delivered in the House of Commons, said the naval forces of the allies in European waters would be augmented shortly by a force of Brazilian warships.

"I believe the individual piece worker on ships works as hard now as he did last year, when he is actually at work," Sir Eric continued, but he seems readier to take holidays, and we cannot afford holidays. If improvement is not speedily made, the point where production balances losses will be postponed to a dangerous extent."

The First Lord said he was seriously concerned at the increasing number of vessels lost at night. It appeared the enemy was assisted in this matter by negligence on the part of ship owners who displayed lights instead of darkening their vessels.

U-Boat's Chief Field.

In the waters around the British Isles, which had been the enemy's chief field for submarine operations, the greatest successes against the U-boats had been obtained so far, latterly with the help of American naval forces, said Sir Eric. On the other hand, conditions in the Mediterranean had been more difficult. Losses there accounted for some 30 per cent of merchant ships sunk. The resources for combatting the submarines in those waters were less adequate, the successes obtained less satisfactory.

It becomes increasingly evident, the First Lord went on, that as the resources for combatting the submarines improved it would be possible to turn attention more to the Mediterranean. He continued:

"I recently went to Rome for a meeting of the allied naval committee and also inspected naval establishments in the Mediterranean, including those of the Greek navy. British naval officers are assisting the Greeks in reorganization of their navy, which already is co-operating in the Mediterranean and rendering valuable service."

MURDER CASE AT BELLEVILLE.

BELLEVILLE, March 5. — The Spring Assizes opened in this city yesterday presided over by Hon. Justice Rose, who was complimented by County Attorney Carnew, representing the Hastings County Bar Association, on his elevation to the bench.

There are five criminal cases to be investigated. Samuel Rogers, a young man will to-morrow be placed on trial on a charge of murder, which may be reduced to manslaughter. The accused, it is alleged, was only defending himself from the attacks of his victim, James Gallagher, and struck him a fatal blow over the head with a shovel. The affair took place in Marmora Township on the 18th of July last while the parties were working on a country road.

The importance of Germany's trade interest in Siam, notes a correspondent, may be judged from the fact that the imports from that country into Siam through the port of Bangkok amounted to $2,097,266 in the fiscal year ended March 31, 1913, and to $2,458,889 in 1914, while exports of native products from Siam to Germany were valued at $2,110,085 and $2,747,266 during the respective periods.

A large share of the shipping was also under German control, so that out of the total number of 914 ships of all nationalities that entered the port of Bangkok during 1914 those of German registery numbered 261 vessels. At the time of Siam's declaration of war on July 22, 1917, the German vessels in the Bangkok harbor consisted of nine steamships, of 11,786 tons; five steam lighters, of 1,317 tons; two tugs, of 55 tons; seven barges and two large coal hulks.

JOY FOR THE MEN AT TEA

Some Good Samaritan Has Invented Oval Saucer That Safely Holds Cup and Dainties.

Any man who knows that, sooner or later, he must go to another afternoon tea cannot but rejoice at the recent invention of an oval, platterlike saucer, large enough to hold with ease a cup, a lettuce or other sandwich, and a dainty trifle of pastry. The thing was needed, the modesty of the anonymous inventor—evidently not Mr. Edison—reveals him one of the large body of occasional and unwilling tea-goers.

We, the reluctant and unwilling, are all strangely alike at these functions; and we have all been embarrassed by the old-fashioned saucer. Circular in shape, and hardly larger than the cup that belies its reputation and dances drunkenly whenever another guest joggles our elbow (which happens so often that we suspect conspiracy), the old-fashioned saucer affords no reasonably secure perch for a sandwich; responds with instant delight to the law of gravitation if left to itself; and sets us wishing, those of us who think scientifically, that evolution had refrained from doing away with an extension by which alone we could now hope to manage it. We mean a tail! If afternoon teas had been started in the Oligocene epoch instead of the seventeenth century, we are convinced that evolution, far from discarding this useful appendage, would have perfected it. A little hand would have evolved at the end of it, such a little hand as might hold his saucer while a gentleman sips from his teacup.—Atlantic Magazine.

NERVES ARE EXHAUSTED.

When you have frequent headaches, find yourself easily irritated and annoyed, feel discouraged and down-hearted, cannot rest and sleep well, and find appetite fickle and digestion bad, you may know that the nerves are in bad condition. Don't wait for these symptoms to become chronic but start in early with the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and head off disaster.

MEMORIALS FOR THEIR DEAD

Serbians Ever Keep Green the Memory of Deceased Members of Their Families.

It is not quite accurate to entitle this ceremony a funeral, for it is not that, but we have in English no one word or two words with which to express the meaning. In order to secure complete accuracy, it would have been necessary to head this sketch with the words, "Ceremony Performed by a Serbian Family on the Anniversary of the Death of One of Its Members," and no newspaper copy reader would pass a title like that, writes a correspondent.

It is the custom of the country to remember the dead on the anniversary of death by a pilgrimage to the graveyard, with all appropriate ceremonies. A morbid custom, and one that might be productive of endless and needless grief, according to our ideas, but the Serbs are a hard race and face their sorrows without covering them. All of the family flies to the cemetery, accompanied by close friends and headed by priests. Flowers are laid on the grave, prayers are offered and the women weep. The virtues of the dead are extolled and he is addressed and apostrophized.

This part of the ceremony over, the company sit down to a meal that they have brought with them. The affair takes on the aspect of some grave social occasion. Wine is drunk and much food is eaten. It is customary to tell all the anecdotes and incidents relating to the dead man that those present can remember. Even bits of the past that have a humorous turn are not barred. It is in some sort a bringing forth of his whole memory and setting him again before his people, brushing aside the passing days that were hiding the thoughts of him from view.

It is interesting to speculate on the meaning of this unusual practice, and on the human tendency that gave it birth and keeps it alive. It seems to root in the old human dread of being forgotten completely. As these people do it unto the dead, so they expect their children and their relatives to do unto them, and they cherish the custom as a fountain that will keep their own memory green when their time comes.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards—Receipts yesterday, 50 cars, with 725 cattle, 246 calves, 967 hogs, and 36 sheep and lambs.

The market was steady, with Monday's 25c. decline from last week on all grades of butcher cattle. Trade is still draggy. The choicest of the butcher offerings are in fairly good market, but the common to medium stuff is decidedly slow and inclined to further weakness.

Stocker trade is slightly more active at the lower prices, the decline from recent to high levels stimulating a fresh demand.

Butcher cows, bulls and canners hold fairly steady.

Sheep and lambs steady with very light offerings.

Hogs held firm at the $19.75 fed and watered basis, the small offerings not permitting any decline.

Learn Value of Men.

In one of the chapters of "A Student in Arms," by Donald Ennkey, a volunteer in the English army at the beginning of this war, this authority says: "On the whole, though, actual experience of war brings the best men to the fore, and the best qualities of the average man. Officers and men are welded into a closer comradeship by dangers and discomforts shared. They learn to trust each other and to look for the essential qualities rather than for the accidental graces. One learns to love men for their great hearts, their pluck, their indomitable spirits, their irrepressible humor, their readiness to shoulder a weaker brother's burden in addition to their own. One sees men as God sees them, apart from externals such as manner and intonation. A night in a bombing party shows you Jim Smith as a man of splendid courage. A shortage of rations reveals his wonderful unselfishness. One danger and discomfort after another you share in common until you love him as a brother. Out there, if anyone dared to remind you that Jim was only a fireman while you were a bank clerk, you would give him one in the eye to go on with. You have learned to know a man when you see one and to value him."

"THE CLUE IN THE AIR"

A DETECTIVE STORY—Isabel Ostrander

"There are, but not in the dust!" Dennis proclaimed. He had halted at the first air shaft window nearest the door and raising it was examining the sill. "Look here, will you? Someone has had a clothesline or pulley across the air shaft at one time or another. This hook is old and rusty now; it would not bear the weight of a cat, but look what's caught on it."

He turned and held out a frayed strand of shining yellow manila.

"Maybe, 'tis a bit of clothesline left," McCarty suggested slowly.

"Clothesline nothing!" retorted the other in disdain. "Ain't I after telling you that hook has not been used for years, maybe. This rope is new! It caught on the hook when he jerked it in! Don't get too close, Mac, for I'm keeping my sleeve from touching the sill. There is a kind of smude in the dust oh it inside here now—see it?"

"I do, but even Terhune with his little spyglass could not make much out of it. 'Tis like the pads of an elephant, Denny. There is no print of a boot here if that is what you are aiming at."

"I'm not!" cried Dennis disgustedly. "If you think any man is going to try a stunt like that with his boots on, to say nothing of the clatter that he would raise jumping in the other windows down stairs, you are a bigger fool than even I thought you! It is his stockinged feet and unless I'm a liar here are more tracks of them on the oil cloth of the kitchen."

He had crossed the narrow hall at a bound and was pointing excitedly to the floor. Surveyed at an obligue angle the oiled floor gave forth a chain of crossed and recrossed narrow elongated blurs at irregular intervals, the whole forming a broken line from the door to the window opening on the narrow court.

"You're right, Denny!" shouted McCarty, convinced at length.

"Neither the inspector nor me went in there at all and as far as I know Terhune hasn't poked his nose in this flat; anyway, if he did it was not without his shoes. The fellow got in that window from the house next door! There's just one thing puzzles me though."

"What?" Dennis was flushed with victory. "It is as plain as the nose on your face, to me."

"This flat was closed up, and the kitchen window shut and may be bolted. I'm not saying that he could not have opened it from the outside with a little jockeying but he would have to stand on the sill to do it. It seems to me it would be too close a calculation for a fellow to take a five foot jump and be able to count on landing on a three inch strip of brick sill on his toes without missing it entirely and falling or else going too far and crashing through the window."

"No more he did! The window is closed but not locked. Look!" Dennis opened it and paused with an unconsciously dramatic gesture. On the sill, where it had been wedged beneath the window frame, was a long splinter and in the slanting ray of lingering sunlight they saw tiny flecks of paint upon it.

"He put a board across and crept from the other house!" exclaimed McCarty. "What's that in the room over there?"

"A painter's scaffold!"

With one accord they turned, and made their way quickly from the apartment and down to the street. McCarty was breathing hard with excitement, but Dennis was calm, although his flush had deepened, and his eyes shone.

They encountered an elderly janitor in the house next door and learning that the seventh-floor apartment on the side was vacant and in the hands of decorators they promptly voiced an enthusiastic desire to see it.

The janitor was unimpressed by their appearance and evidently did not welcome this intrusion on his Sabbath leisure, but he ushered them nevertheless to their goal and listlessly waited outside the door.

Dennis, with a practical calculation of distances, made straightway for the room in which they had seen the painter's scaffold. Its window was partly raised to allow the odour of varnish to escape and several stout boards leaned against a closet door.

But McCarty and his companion scarcely noticed them, for on the fresh grey wall paper beside the window frame was the silhouette of a large dusty hand and beneath it on the baseboard, where the drying varnish had held it unmistakably clear, was the imprint of a carelessly dropped boot.

They looked at each other in triumph.

"You've done it, Denny!" McCarty's voice had sunk to a piercing whisper. "You've called his game! 'Tis Terhune should be taking lessons from you, for you are wasting your time in the fire department. You have stepped in at the last minute and landed the truth!"

CHAPTER XXV.

THE PASSER-BY.

"Has anybody been looking at that apartment lately?" asked McCarty of the apathetic janitor, as they descended once more.

"Two ladies last week, an old lady the week before, and a young man a fortnight ago. He come twice and I guess maybe he'll take it." The man eyed them shrewdly. "He is to let me know in a few days now, but in case that he don't, if you want to leave your name——"

"We'll be back again," interrupted McCarty quickly. "My friend here wants his wife to see it."

Dennis glared, then turned to the janitor.

"I suppose you know one of them rooms will have to be papered over again," he remarked. "There's a big blotch of dirt on the wall."

"Sure, I know!" the man responded surily. "The painters swear they did not do it, but it is up to them or the paper hangers and they have been arguing back and forth about it for nearly two weeks now. They say it happened between Saturday a fortnight ago and the next Wednesday; they did not come to work on the Monday and Tuesday because they had a hurry up contract to put through somewhere else. It couldn't have happened then though because nobody came near the apartment, I had it locked."

"Was it before that the young man came to look at it?" asked McCarty.

"Yes, sir, both times just before."

"Well, that janitor'll be disappointed, I am thinking," McCarty averred to Dennis, as they emerged upon the street. "The young man will not be occupying that apartment if I can lay my hands on him, but a small, little one with a green door at the end!"

"You've not got him yet," Dennis reminded him. "You know his general looks and you can pretty well judge the strength of him, but the woods are full of spry, dark, cleanshaven young men with the muscles of piano movers."

"I've got more than that," responded McCarty confidently. "The girl's dying guess was not so very far wrong, if he didn't exactly fly in he came as near to it as a human being can, Denny, and I've still my other hunch to follow; the fellow that helped to carry her in."

"And where will you look for him?" demanded Dennis.

"He got by with a false name and address to your friend Cunliffe, and he gave you the slip in the crowd at the funeral?"

"How do you know it was a false name and aduress?" retorted McCarty. "Just because the police did not find him there later is no sign. If he's the kind of a fellow I think he may be, he'll be known by something fancier than Jerry Bowker and that with no wrong intent."

"Here! Where're you going?" Dennis caught his arm. "That's a downtown ear."

"And it's what we want. You have an hour yet before you go on duty and we will pay a little call to 812 Twenty-fifth street. I would like to have you go along to hear for yourself if what you guessed about him is right or not."

"What I guessed?" repeated Dennis. "Is it out of your head you've gone, entirely? I've said not a word about him, and for all that I know he might be the devil himself."

McCarty chuckled, then grew swiftly grave.

"No," he said. "To my mind he is just a well meaning, blundering young fool who butted into what did not concern him, and will have the remorse of it though not the guilt, to carry till the day of his death. 'Twas that I saw on the face of him at the funeral."

"But the hat!" Dennis took off his own and mopped his brow. "You told me that he dropped it in the doctor's office, when the girl died, and Cunliffe picked it up and you both saw that the initials were different. How are you going to fit that in with what you have got on your mind?"

"Wait and you will see. 'Twill not be such a long shot as you think. The next corner is ours."

(To be Continued.)

SUFFERED TERRIBLY WITH HER HEART

Would Wake Up Smothering

The terrible smothering and choking up sensations and sinking spells, the feelings of dizziness and faintness that come over those whose heart and nerves are deranged causes the greatest distress of both mind and body.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in cases of such severity.

Mrs. A. M. Powell, Norval Station, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I suffered five years with my heart and nerves, but the last two years I have suffered terribly. If I went to bed I would wake up as if I were smothering. I did not get one night's sleep out of seven. I got so very weak that the doctor was called in, and he said it was my heart, and that I must take great care of myself. I saw your advertisement in your almanac for Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and said I would try them. I have only taken two boxes of them and I feel a new woman. I will recommend them to anyone afflicted with heart trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at very little cost. Every body uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

WHERE "PEP" WAS NEEDED

Secretary Daniels, Discussing Efficiency, Relates Story of Girl's Advising Beau to Kiss Old Mare.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels is a firm believer in speeding up. Efficiency is the watchword of his department. A big navy can't be built fast enough for him. And he was discussing efficiency and high speed. He wants to cut out red tape.

"Discussion is well and good," said Secretary Daniels, "but the main question is whether it is idle talk or not. Is it practical or is it foolish? Is it like Torkins and his girl?

"Torkins, by the way, was out with his girl during the days before the automobile, when a young man who wanted to be popular would call on his girl with a horse and buggy to take her for a drive. You know the faster the horse the better the impression.

"Torkins, on his first call, took the girl for a long drive, and when they found themselves in the midst of a country road, he ventured for a kiss.

"'A kiss?' asked the girl. 'What good would a kiss do?'

"'Oh,' replied the embarrassed youth, 'it would make me feel gay and lively.'

"'Well, Charley,' the cold-blooded, unemotional damsel retorted, 'if it is as you say, and we expect to get anywhere before it's time to return home, you'd better get out and kiss the old mare once.'"

ONE-TIME PIRATES

Esthonian Outrages Enkindled Wrath of Danish Kings.

Records Show They Were Regarded as a Daring, Predatory People of the Baltic.

The Esthonians, who constitute four-fifths of the population of the Russian Baltic province of Esthonia, which lies between Riga and Petrograd, are the subject of a bulletin issued by the National Geographic society from its Washington headquarters:

"Like the Finns, to whom they are closely related, the Esthonians or Esths, a race numbering 1,000,000 people, more than 400,000 of whom reside in Esthonia, retain many characteristics which bespeak their Mongolian origin. They are long-armed and short-legged, have broad face and low brows, are usually beardless and have oblique eyes.

"The first record of the Esths in Europe reveals them as a daring, predatory people of the Baltic whose piratic outrages enkindled the wrath of Danish kings as early as the twelfth century. In 1194 and 1196 Canute VI sent a strong expedition against them and forced a number of the lawless bands to accept Christianity and allow themselves to be baptized. Hardly had the warlike proselyters left the Esthonian shores, however, than the inhabitants reverted to barbarism and their heathen practices. A quarter of a century later Waldemar II was more successful. He subjugated the northern portion of the land and brought the inhabitants under submission to the Danish crown. It was never a willing submission, however, and for more than 100 years the inhabitants gave their conquerors endless trouble until 1343 Waldemar IV decided that they were 'not worth the bother,' and he sold his interest in the rebels and in their land to the Knights of the Sword, who were gradually spreading their net of power northward from Teutonic lands.

"For more than 500 years thereafter the lot of the Esthonians was virtually that of serfdom under their German landowners.

"In the sixteenth century both the nobles and the fortified towns of Esthonia placed themselves under the protection of the Swedish crown, but they were forced to acknowledge a new master after Peter the Great's successful wars against Charles XII.

"For the last thirty years the Russian imperial government has been making systematic efforts to abolish the Esthonian language, to which the people have clung tenaciously. Harsh regulations as to the use of the language in the schools have not served to wean the people from their language, however. One characteristic which has served to preserve the Esth language through the centuries has been the people's love for poetry, and they have rare natural gift for versification.

"The Orthodox Greek church of Russia also has conducted an active program in Esthonia, but according to the latest religious census 96 per cent of the inhabitants are still Lutherans."

First Aid to Marriage.

Of what use is a diamond, anyway? Conservationists who are for cutting out all extravagance during the war are asking the question, says the Kansas City Star.

The answer, based upon statistics furnished by jewelers, seems to be that the diamond is most valuable as an aid to marriage. It is said that the trade in diamonds goes up or down in ratio with increasing or decreasing numbers of marriages. This is because the diamond is used so much as the setting in engagement rings.

Last year the United States imported $34,000,000 worth of diamonds, an increase of 70 per cent over 1915 and 110 per cent over 1914.

Looking into this startling growth of the diamond trade it was discovered that, according to leading importers, "every girl expects a real diamond in pledge of plighted troth these days, and the growth of that custom, coupled with good times and an increase in the number of marriages, accounts for it."

To Stop a Persistent, Hacking Cough

The best remedy is one you can easily make at home. Cheap, but very effective.

Thousands of people normally healthy in every other respect, are annoyed with a persistent hanging-on bronchial cough year after year, disturbing their sleep and making life disagreeable. It's so needless—there's an old home-made remedy that will end such a cough easily and quickly.

Get from any druggist "2½ ounces of Pinex" (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Begin taking it at once. Gradually but surely you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether, thus ending a cough that you never thought would end. It also promptly loosens a dry or tight cough, stops the troublesome throat tickle, soothes the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes, and relief comes almost immediately. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma there is nothing better. It tastes pleasant and keeps perfectly.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and is used by millions of people every year for throat and chest colds with splendid results.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

DOMINION RUBBER SYSTEM

Guard Your Health With Rubbers.

THERE'S one side to the economy of Rubbers, that some people may overlook. Rubbers save doctors' bills, just as they save boots.

With streets coated with slush or a river of rain, Rubbers are certain protection against getting wet feet, and your being laid up with a severe case of grippe or worse.

If you want to come through the spring thaws without even a cold, get rubbers for each pair of shoes; and if you are buying new shoes, be sure to have them fitted with the right Rubbers.

There's a style and shape for every shoe—for men, women and children—in these six brands of staunch, well-fitting Rubbers, sold by the leading shoemen:

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Where Did You Lunch?

By Annabel Wade

(Copyright, 1917, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Hello, Bob."

"Oh, hello, Jane."

"Bob, mother just telephoned from the country that she's coming to town for the day, and I'm going to meet her. Can't you have lunch with us?"

"Why, yes, I guess so. Where?"

"At the Ivey Lane tearoom—you know, in Thirty-ninth street. We've been there."

"Oh, yes; one of those frothy, whipped-cream places—I know!"

"Well, it's all right, Bob—and mother loves their chicken pies."

"I'm awfully sory, Jane, but I've thought of something. I'm afraid I can't make it. I've just thought of something—an engagement, you know. A business engagement, dear, that I can't very well break."

"Why, Bob, how funny! First you said yes and then you said no. You have to have some lunch, don't you?"

"Yes, but I'll just run in my usual place. It's right in this block, you know."

"But, Bob, please come!"

"I tell you I can't."

"I think you're perfectly horrid, to spoil my day like that!"

"Oh, for goodness sake, don't begin that. I don't see what difference lunch makes. If you're crazy to have me lunch with you, why don't you come down to my place?"

"I wouldn't have lunch with you for anything, Bob Lane. Crazy to lunch with you! I should say not! Not in that greasy little Italian table d'hote place, anyway."

"Now, Jane, don't go and get all excited—"

But Jane had snapped back the receiver on the hook and she heard no more. With wrathful thoughts she hurried into her coat and furs and left the little apartment, where, as she thought sadly, Bob and she had so lately had a delightful breakfast. She hurried downtown to meet her mother.

It was a preoccupied Jane who shopped that morning, and usually Jane liked shopping. That was why Mrs. Carter, her mother, had telephoned that she wanted to buy new furnishings for the living room in her country house and wanted Jane to help in selecting them.

"What's the matter, Jane?" asked Mrs. Carter, as they made their way from one of the shops to the Ivy Lane. "You haven't taken a bit of interest in anything we've done."

"I'm just upset about Bob. He's acting so strange, mother. He would not have lunch with us today."

"Maybe he had an engagement. You know the Ivy Lane is a mile or so from his office."

"But first he said he would and then he said he wouldn't, and he never acted that way before."

"Probably the poor boy is rushed to death and just can't take time. Do be sensible, Jane."

"But, mother," explained Jane, "he called the Ivy Lane a horrid, old, frothy, frivolous place, or something like that. I think that was hateful."

Mrs. Carter laughed. "Men never like tea rooms," she said. "Where does he usually go?"

"Oh, to a grubby little Italian table d'hote down in Eighteenth street."

"Well, let's go down there and surprise him. He probably just couldn't stand the thought of lunching in a tea room, crowded with a lot of shoppers. There aren't many men usually at the Ivy Lane, you know."

"So you suppose that was it?" Jane's face cleared a little. "I thought he just didn't want to lunch with me. But maybe that it is. Oh, mother, you're wonderful. Let's go right down to Eighteenth street."

Jane was buoyant. Bob himself had suggested that they meet him at the table d'hote, she remembered. Yet for a little while she had almost felt jealous of Bob. Jealous! Of Bob! The idea was absurd. And, anyway, what was there to make her jealous because Bob hadn't wanted to lunch with her?

A few minutes later a Jane with spirits restored to their usual cheerful pitch walked down the two or three steps that led from the sidewalk level to the Italian table d'hote where Bob lunched daily. Jane had been there before, and as the savory odor of the stew on which the chef of the little place specialized met her nostrils she suddenly saw Bob's objection to the whipped-cream sort of lunch she usually got when shopping. A good substantial meat dish—that did make a more staying lunch for a man. And as she served corn bread and whole-wheat muffins for breakfast and tried to have fish several times a week for dinner, she couldn't blame Bob for indulging in a luncheon each day that could make him forget war-time restrictions.

Jane smilingly bowed to the proprietor.

"I'm Mrs. Lane," she said. "Will you show us Mr. Lane's table?"

The proprietor graciously bowed them to a corner table, where Bob always lunched. But Bob was not there. They sat down and waited. But Bob didn't come. At last they ordered lunch and ate it.

That is, Mrs. Carter ate it. Jane did not. She toyed with a roll and crumbled it with her nervous fingers. And she did not even taste the wonderful stew.

"Jane, you're the silliest girl I ever saw," commented Mrs. Carter, as she ate the good things provided by their Italian host with a relish. "I really think that, with as good a husband as you have, Jane, you ought to show a little self-control and confidence. You are jealous now, aren't you?"

"I am not jealous," flared Jane. "Only why on earth did Bob tell me he was coming here when he didn't intend to at all. He knew I wouldn't come here—I never would have, if it hadn't been for you. All the time he intended to have lunch some place else."

"Of course, what you're thinking, Jane, is that he is having lunch some where else with somebody else, isn't it?"

"Well, I'd like to know how I can help thinking that!"

Mrs. Carter lifted the thick little cup of black coffee to her lips and then ate her last morsel of cheese.

"When your father and I were young, Jane—"

"Oh, please don't go and preach about you and father. Of course, you never got jealous. But father probably never did a thing like this."

Jane pulled her fur collar about her neck. "I suppose that hateful, ingratiating little man knows I'm mad," she thought. But the proprietor bowed with an inscrutible smile as they left the restaurant.

When Jane got home she first decided to make some sandwiches and leave them, with a pitcher of milk, on the dining-room table, and then go to bed with a pretended headache. But after she had thought the matter over a little she went to work to prepare a dinner of unusual excellence.

"I'll just let him know I'm not jealous, anyway," thought Jane. "And I'll never tell him I went to his horrid old lunch place, either. If that proprietor don't tell him—but, then, of course, he won't."

Jane bustled about planning and cooking dinner. Then she dressed in a frock that Bob especially liked, and when he came in was ready to greet him with more than her usual enthusiasm. So intent was she on her effort not to seem peeved that at first she did not notice Bob's grouchiness. But when he sat down opposite her at dinner she saw his frown, an unusual thing with Bob.

"Where did you lunch today?" His first words were disturbingly direct.

"Why—at the Ivy Lane," lied Jane quickly.

Bob looked at her keenly. Suddenly the tables were turned and Jane appeared to be on the defensive. Bob had asked her the one question that she longed to ask him.

"At the Ivy Lane, did you? What time?"

"Oo—at one; yes, at one."

"That's mighty strange," said Bob, and a quick look of distrust came into his face.

"Oh, Bob, don't look at me like that! I didn't have lunch there at all. I—"

"Well, then, why did you say you were going to?"

"I'd like to know what right you have to get cross about where I had lunch. Where did you have lunch?"

"Why, at the Ivy Lane. I hate those tea rooms. But you seemed so cut up about it when I said I couldn't come up that I hustled up there, and then you weren't there."

"Bob!" Jane was out of her chair and around at his side in a moment. "Bob, listen to me. I had lunch down at your grubby little Italian place. Mother and I thought we'd come down and surprise you—and then you were not there—and I thought—"

"What did you think, Jane?"

"Oh, I don't know what I thought! But I think you're the most wonderful man alive!"

Women, Prepare!

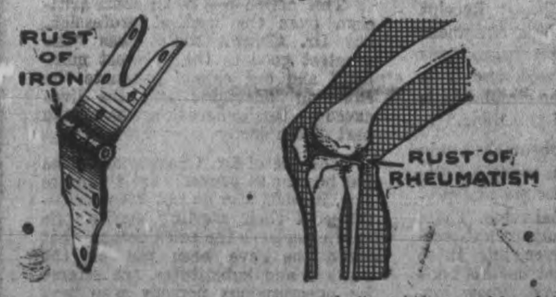
Thousands of women in Canada have overcome their sufferings, and have been cured of woman's ills by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This temperance medicine, though started nearly half a century ago, sells most widely to-day. It can now be had in tablet form as well as liquid, and every woman who suffers from backache, headache, nervousness, should take this "Prescription" of Dr. Pierce's. It is prepared from nature's roots and herbs and does not contain a particle of alcohol or any narcotic. It's not a secret prescription for its ingredients are printed on wrapper. Send 10c for trial package to Dr. V. M. Pierce, Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., or Bridgeburg, Ont.

Hamilton, Ont.—"When I reached the critical period I was a nervous wreck and suffered with hot flashes and dizzy spells. 'Favorite Prescription' relieved me of all these ailments and brought me through this trying time safely. For woman of middle age there is no tonic equal to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and I never hesitate to recommend it to my friends."—Mrs. Annie Soules, 41 Hess St. N.

Stratford, Ont.—"I was greatly benefited by taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription; it was before twins came. I had become all run-down, was nauseated, very nervous and weak, and suffered with backache. Was not able to do anything for three months, when I began taking 'Favorite Prescription.' It soon gave me relief and it was not long when I was strong and healthy. 'Favorite Prescription' was surely a great help to me and I am glad to recommend it."—Mrs. L. J. Mantle, 61 Kent Lane.

DRINK HOT WATER AND RID JOINTS OF RHEUMATIC RUST

Why rheumatism and lumbago sufferers should drink phosphated hot water each morning before breakfast



Just as coal when it burns leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not completely eliminated each day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels. From this mass of left-over waste material, toxins and ptomaine-like poisons, called uric acid, is formed and then sucked into the blood where it contin es to circulate, collecting grain by grain in the joints of the body much like rust collects on the kinge as shown above.

Men and women who suffer from lumbago, rheumatism, or sore, stiff, aching joints should begin drinking phosphated hot water, not as a means of magic relief from pain, but to prevent more uric acid forming in the system. Before eating breakfast each morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will first neutralize and then wash out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's accumulation of toxins and poisons; thus, cleansing, sweetening, and freshening the entire alimentary canal, each morning, before putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug-store, but is sufficient to make any rheumatic or lumbago sufferer an enthusiast on the morning inside bath.

Millions of people keep their joints free from these rhe matic acids by practicing this daily internal sanitation. A glass of hot water, with a teaspoonful of lime phosphate, drunk before breakfast, is wonderfully invigorating; besides it is an excellent health measure because it cleanses the alimentary organs of all the waste, gases and sour fermentations, making one look and feel clean, sweet and fresh all day.

Those who try this for one week, headaches, constipation, bilious attacks, sallowness, nasty breath and stomach acidity may find themselves free from sick

PROFESSOR IN A QUANDARY

Educator, Accused by Wife With Not Kissing Her as He Left House, Blames Self With Short Memory.

Speaking at a dinner, Senator John W. Smith of Maryland referred to the subject of absent-mindedness, and fittingly recalled a story about a professor who had lapses along that particular line.

On returning home to dinner one evening, the professor was met at the door by his wife, who led him into the house with a reproving air.

"Do you know, John," said the good woman, a little pontfully, "that you went away this morning without kissing me good-by?"

"You don't really mean it, Mary?" returned the professor, laying aside his hat and gloves. "Surely you must be mistaken."

"Oh, no, I am not!" declared Mary, with great positiveness. "Not a single kiss did you give me!"

"Is that so?" rejoined the professor, with a thoughtful expression. "Then who in the deuce did I kiss?"

Mongoose as Cat Understudy.

Islands in the tropical or semi-tropical seas furnish ideal conditions for rats, and in many instances they have increased until they have become intolerable pests, threatening the total ruin of the inhabitants. On one sugar cane plantation in Puerto Rico 25,000 rats were killed in less than six months.

In Jamaica an effort was made to suppress them by introducing the mongoose, which resulted in the establishment of a second pest. In the Hawaiian Islands the introduction of the mongoose caused the rats to take refuge in the tree-tops, where many of them have nests and have arboreal habits, like squirrels. Wherever present on these islands the mongoose has rendered it exceedingly difficult to raise domestic fowls of any kind.—National Geographic Magazine.

Cocoanut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

Largest Catch of Salmon.

New fish are introduced every year and new fishing grounds discovered and surveyed for the benefit of fishermen. Rescue work among the fishes is also undertaken and last year more than 8,000,000 fish, left stranded in evaporating pools, were saved to grow up to a life of usefulness—that is, big enough to be fit for the table.

A skilled investigator has been studying frog culture, and the Alaska salmon fisheries have been so guarded and protected in accordance with federal laws that this season's catch has been enormous, the largest ever made.

The Alaska seals constitute the most valuable herd of wild animals ever owned by any government, and the bureau of fisheries is their custodian.

Disciplinary Garden.

The city of Somerville, Mass., has established a disciplinary garden. Those compelled to work this garden are youths who have been caught trespassing in, or in some way injuring, a garden or park. In referring to this novel arrangement the Youth's Companion says: "The idea has grown out of a practice of the Somerville police court which compels young evildoers to make some sort of restitution to those whom they have injured."

UNIFORM MAKES MANY MEN

Apparently Dull and Impossible Recruits Quickly Catch on When They Don Khaki Clothes.

"Want to see something funny?" asked a lieutenant of a correspondent. The correspondent did.

"Well, come over here and watch that beauty drill."

The lieutenant led the correspondent over in front of one of the companies.

"Watch that man," he said.

The man was a red-faced, vacant-looking specimen in civilian clothes, who seemed not gifted with mere ordinary intelligence. He could not stand up straight, could not manage his hands and feet, could not learn right face, right about face or left face. Every time the sergeant gave a command the beauty gave him a silly grin and considered that he had done his duty. So the sergeant took him to one side.

"Well, now, we will have a lesson by ourselves. Now watch me."

The sergeant was very patient. For half an hour he tried to ...um a little intelligence into his pupil's head, but at the end of that time the man was even more confused than before.

The next day the same sergeant said to the correspondent:

"Want to see something grand?"

The correspondent did. The sergeant pointed to the same man.

"Just look at him," he said proudly. The private was standing straight, his eyes were bright, his feet were obedient and he looked like a man.

"Wonderful," gasped the correspondent. "What did it?"

"It's the uniform, bless it," said the sergeant. "It makes men out of the most impossible."

"We are all little boys still, aren't we?" mused the correspondent. "I think even I could be a soldier in a uniform. And think of owning a sword!"

Children Make Trains Jump.

A number of children playing about the New Jersey Central railroad station, says a Vineland (N. J.) correspondent, discovered that by placing joint plates on the rails they could make trains "jump," and it was great sport until trainmen discovered the dangerous game and stopped it.

Suggests a Hilarious Finish.

Most hilarious and mirthful would be the ending of the war under the scheme of a Henniker (N. H.) humanitarian. He would have all the Germans, the kaiser included, laugh themselves to death, says the Boston Journal.

Briefly, the scheme is to spill a new kind of laughing gas, which the writer says he has invented, all over the German forces. The gas, according to the plan, can be carried over the German trenches in airplanes and dropped.

READY!

In the newspapers there recently appeared articles telling of the arrival of the American fleet at Queenstown—telling how the Officers of the English Navy had gone to Vice-Admiral Sims and asked him when he would be ready for action. Every American thrilled with pride at his answer—

"WE CAN START AT ONCE."

"READY TO START AT ONCE"—What a wonderful motto for every man, and yet how many of us realize that at any moment we may suddenly be called away from Business, from Home and Friends, from this world of ours to pass in to the Great Beyond.

Are you Mr. Reader, "READY TO START AT ONCE?" Have you made provision for those dependent on you should the call come?

"READY TO START AT ONCE." No man can do more—we c not afford to do less.

If your loved ones are not already protected against such an emergency you had better act while you have the opportunity. To-morrow may be too late.

The Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada will protect your Dependents providing you do your duty while the opportunity is yours.

HOW TO GET RID OF RHEUMATISM

"Fruit-a-tives" Point the Way to Quick Relief

VERONA, ONT.

"I suffered for a number of years with Rheumatism and severe Pains in my Side and Back, caused by strains and heavy lifting.

When I had given up hope of ever being well again, a friend recommended 'Fruit-a-tives' to me and after using the first box I felt so much better that I continued to take them; and now I am enjoying the best of health, thanks to your wonderful fruit medicine".

W. M. LAMPSON.

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c.—or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Chinese Cooks.

It is said by those who have employed them that the Chinese always cook by rule, if they have any rule to go by—following the receipt with the same scientific exactness with which the druggists put up a prescription. Hence their results are equally satisfactory. They never burn or spoil anything, nor spill materials on the floor; consequently, nothing that goes through their hands is wasted. They cook just enough and no more.

The King of Space.

An albatross in a storm is a wonderful sight. No matter how furious the gale, no matter how fierce the hurricane squalls of Cape Horn, the great bird soars up against the blast grim and serene. Then wheeling, he comes sweeping down on the wings of the gale at a speed so tremendous that it cannot be less than eighty or ninety miles an hour, when, describing a low but immense circle, with the tip of his lee-wing just brushing the top of the giant waves, he again takes his flight upward against the storm. No living creature conveys the idea of boundless freedom so perfectly as the King of Space, the Wandering Albatross.—Paul Elie Stevenson.

Invariable Exception.

Again the old familiar cry
That we have learned to know too well—
"The price of everything's too high—Excepting things I seek to sell."

FACE NOTHING BUT RUNNING SORES FROM ECZEMA

No rest day or night for those afflicted with that terrible skin disease, eczema, or, as it is often called, salt rheum.

With its unbearable burning, itching, torturing day and night, relief is gladly welcomed.

There is no remedy like Burdock Blood Bitters for giving relief to such sufferers; no other remedy has done, or can do so much for those who are almost driven to distraction with the terrible torture. Apply it externally and it takes out the stinging, itching and burning, and promotes a healthy healing.

Take it internally and it gets at the source of the disease in the blood, and completely and permanently drives it out of the system.

Miss Mary V. Chambers, Anagance Ridge, N.B., writes: "I used Burdock Blood Bitters for eczema. I had it when an infant, but it left me. Two years ago it came back. I used doctors' medicine, but it did good only while I used it. At last my face was nothing but a running sore. I saw in the paper what B.B.B. did for people. I took it, and to-day I am free from that terrible disease."

Chestnuts to Aid War.

British children all over the country wherever the chestnut tree grows are gathering horse chestnuts as told in the Christian Science Monitor. It is their particular contribution to the winning of the war, for ripe horse chestnuts have been discovered to provide a good substitute for the grain which is used in the making of munitions. It will be quite valuable service, for the computation is that every ton of chestnuts will save half a ton of grain. The gathering is organized by committees in connection with the schools, and woods and lanes see bands of young patriots enjoying their "war work" hugely.

Vermont Increases Food.

The hope that the appeal for the production of more food might result in some increase of wheat-growing in the East has been justified in Vermont. It is estimated that 81,000 bushels of wheat were grown this year, against 25,000 bushels last year. The Vermonters have also done well along other lines, for the estimated yield of corn, wheat, oats, barley and potatoes in 1917 is 10,698,000 bushels, compared with 7,847,000 bushels in 1916.

"Twilight Sleep" Has Competitor.

"Twilight sleep," it is said, will be superseded by the use of nitrous oxid-oxygen gas to make childbirth painless. The latter gas, the new use of which was discovered by Dr. Carl Henry Davis, in Rush Medical college, is practically harmless, while "twilight sleep" is regarded by American doctors as being extremely dangerous to the patient.

Nitrous gas, according to Doctor Davis, deadens all pain, but allows freedom of thought and action. A patient under its influence can follow instructions, and it need be inhaled only in small quantities and at infrequent intervals to be successful.

OPERATION FOR APPENDICITIS.

Mrs. J. A. Ballantyne, Sturgeon Falls, Ont., writes: "My husband was treated for appendicitis and the doctors ordered an operation. But he would not consent to an operation and began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Since doing so he has had no need of an operation or even of a doctor as the trouble has completely left him. I cannot find words to speak our gratitude for his cure."

Odd Indian Foot Race.

A foot race among the Tarahumare Indians is a most picturesque scene, especially after nightfall, when the course is lit up by flaming torches carried by the eager friends of the runners, who steadily pursue their way, the only silent people in the excited crowd. How in this weird fitful light the men contrive to keep the ball in view is a mystery. One would think that so small an object would be lost in the flickering torchlight; but Indians have wonderful eyes as well as wonderful muscles, and somehow the ball survives all perils and is there at the finish.

In these races the runners receive no prizes, but only honor and glory and the admiration of the women, which no doubt fully repays them. It is, however, customary for those who win wagers on the race to give some part of their winnings to the men who have won; but this is optional.

Splinterless Goggles.

Splinterless goggles are a new development that is expected to be of great value in military gas masks and for aviators, as well as for machinists, welders and other workers requiring protection for the eyes. The lenses consist of two layers of optical glass separated by a layer of celluloid, the whole being perfectly welded together. The product is claimed to have the advantages of ordinary glass without its dangerous splintering on being broken, and the strength of celluloid without its inflammability and lack of rigidity. The heat insulating effect of the celluloid is said also to prevent clouding by moisture.

Can You Beat It?

Once upon a time they published an order prohibiting gambling in Sing Sing. Two inmates were seen exchanging token money and they were haled to the court.

"What's the charge?" asked the judge.

"Alleged gambling," said the deputy.

"I thought all the cards, dice, gambling paraphernalia and such were destroyed."

"They were," answered the deputy, "but these two fellows were bettin' on whether it will rain today or not."

Make Your Stomach Your Best Friend

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Digest the Food, Prevent Sourness and Make You Feel Fine All Over.

If you feel any distress after eating take a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet. You will then have a good, steady friend in your stomach. For no matter what you eat there will be no gas, no sour risings, no lump in your throat, no biliousness, no dark brown taste in the morning. And should you now be troubled, eat a tablet as soon as possible and relief will come promptly. These tablets correct at once the faults of a weak or overworked stomach, they do the work while the stomach rests and recovers itself. Particularly effective are they for banqueters and those whose environment brings them in contact with the rich food most apt to cause stomach derangement. Relief in these cases always brings the glad smile. Get a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, 50 cents, in any drug store. Be good to your stomach.

BLINDING HEADACHES FROM CATARRHAL IRRITATION NOW QUICKLY CURED

The New Inhaler Breathing Treatment Does Away With all This Sort of Thing.

"A stuffy cold in the head, or an old-fashioned attack of Catarrh are simply ancient history to me nowadays," writes S. Nathan Smith, from Cornwall, Ont. "I used to have the worst kind of blinding headaches. They were torture to me on damp days when my catarrh was bad. I would still perhaps be suffering but for the fact that I saw a friend inhaling Catarrhozone with apparent pleasure, and I got the dollar outfit in the Windsor Hotel Pharmacy in Montreal. I could scarcely believe the way Catarrhozone cleared out my head. It let me breathe easier than I had breathed for five years. Catarrhozone has cleared away every vestige of Catarrh from my system. My breath used to be rank—now it is tweet. My digestion was constantly disordered, but since the catarrh is cured I have no stomach trouble. I am a perfectly well man, and Catarrhozone did it all."

For speakers and singers and persons troubled with an irritable throat, bronchitis, asthma, catarrh or la grippe, Catarrhozone is of inestimable value.

The inhaler can be carried in your pocket and may be used at any time or in any place.

Large size, guaranteed, and sufficient for 2 months' use, costs $1; smaller size, 50c.; sample size 25c.; all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

THE ISLANDS OF ARAN.

One of the Beauty Spots of Old Ireland.

The laburnums of Eyre Square were fountains of gold, and the lilac was delicate and cool; a perfect stillness lay upon Galway. Passing on through the streets there was no sign of life, and the morning sunshine smote on ranks of muffled windows; here and there on the old houses the coats-of-arms of the Galway tribes uplifted their melancholy witness to bygone greatness, but the town spoke with no living voice. Emerging at length from behind blind-eyed house fronts, the docks were reached, and in the large vacant spaces of water now to be found where was once the second port of the United Kingdom, the smoke of a little steamer rose in lonely activity, with the mountains of Clare and the glitter of Galway Bay for a background.

There was some delay in departure, owing partly to a genial sympathy with the unpunctual, partly to a question of precedence among a pig family in the process of embarkation. The captain, a large clerical man in a soft felt hat, bore it with the equanimity of one who has learned in many journeys between Galway and Aran what is the full significance of the devils having entered into the swine. The boat moved out at length into the gleaming breadth of the bay; slowly the gray town grouped itself in its low-lying corner, the spires rose waist-deep in roofs, and the heavy tower of St. Nicholas bore its associations of seven hundred years in the brilliant youth of the spring sunlight. Inexpressibly pure of plumage the gulls rode the clear wavelets, and swooped from poise to poise with striding wing, masters of art in the elements, with cold eyes observant to the cumbrouse creatures that crawled on the face of the waters with smoke and foam and splashing. Thirty miles away a low blue mound on the horizon represented those Islands of Aran described in the ancient "Book of Rights" as "The Aras of the Sea"; the bows of the steamer swung to them, gradually the grown and ragged coasts of Connemara opened away to the north, and to the south the barren verge of the County of Clare was shorn perpendicular to the sea at the thousand-foot drop of the cliffs of Moher.

The steamer plodded on at her ten miles an hour, the pig families uttered no more than an occasional yell of fractiousness or dolor, and a party of Aran women sat and conversed under their red shawls with that unflagged zest and seemingly inexhaustible supply of material that may well be the envy of the cultured.

It was eight o'clock when the anchor was let go in Kilronan Bay, opposite the principal village of the principal island, while the changeless sunshine shone on shallow green water, on dazzling whitewashed cottages, on dark hills and valleys of gray stone. Round the steamer flocked battered punts and tarred canvas corraghs with their bows high out of the water; tanned faces, puckered by the sunlight, stared up from them, and in a storm of Irish the process of disembarking began—the phrase but feebly expresses the spectacle of a kitchen table lowered from the deck and laid on its back in a corragh, or the feat of placing an old woman sitting in the table with a gander in her lap. The corragh has no keel, and a sneeze is rightly believed to be fatal to its equilibrium, but an Aran old woman and an Aran gander can rush in where Sir Isaac Newton might fear to tread.

A crowd waited at the pier's end, as the boats came creaking and gliding in to their feet; a crowd of large and angular people, their faces strong and inquisitive and instantly remarkable to any one accustomed to the mild and half-bashful expression of West Galway eyes. There is about them the air of a foreign race and of an earlier century. Under circumstances less stirring than the arrival of the Galway steamer, their long, composed faces express their monotony of mood; their eyes are steady and far-looking, as those that from day to day measure the sweep of great horizons. Men and women alike wear "pampooties"—slippers of raw cowhide, with the hair outside—and walk with the alertness and erectness that are learned from rocky ground and the absence of stiff and high-heeled boots; the men affect the short, full trousers, ending high above the ankle, so that the pampootie is freely displayed in its varieties of dun or black or speckled hide. Topping the costume is a "Tam o' Shanter" cap probably made in Birmingham. It is not a graceful dress, but the square shoulders and flat backs would dignify a worse one, and the mild and mottled pampootie loses its effeminacy with the people's singularly emphatic tread.—From "Some Irish Yesterdays," by E. O. E. Somerville and Martin Ross.

The Difference.

A story is told of a mediaeval sultan who had all the mirrors removed from his palace so that he might avoid the pain of seeing his own face. This sultan called on his grand vizier one day and by accident happened to catch sight of his reflection. His hideousness overpowered him and he broke into violent sobbing.

In this outburst the vizier joined. Finally the sultan calmed down, wiped his eyes and got ready to smoke and talk. But not so the vizier. He sobbed on and on.

At length the sultan got angry and exclaimed: "Why do you weep longer than I, vizier?"

"Alas!" the grand vizier replied, "you wept, O comamnder of the faithful, because you saw your face but for an instant, but I see it every day."

His Regret.

The boy come into the house, weeping and his mother was naturally solicitous. "What's the matter, Willie?" she asked. "The boy across the way hit me," he replied. "Oh, well, I wouldn't cry for that," she returned. "Show that you can be a little man." "I ain't crying for that," he retorted. "He ran into the house before I could get at him."

The Tables Turned.

It is really amusing how the tables have been turned in France. It is now the turn of the Government officials to get anxious and worried when a newspaper appears with a sheet which obviously has been censored. The other day a solemn official note was issued to this effect: "An evening paper has appeared with a blank in its latest news columns. It was never asked to delete anything." The mysterious occurrence was explained on the following day by the Temps, the paper concerned. It had blanked out some of its own news, having found a repetition at the time of going to press. The consternation of Government officials is the subject of a good deal of amusement, but it is also much appreciated, as very clearly showing the entirely new basis on which the censorship is now being exercised.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

IT IS HARD TO UNDERSTAND

CHAPTER VIII.

"Now Helen I want to talk to you," George said, and I noticed that the look of animosity was surely on his face. "If you can't learn at least the simplest beginnings of good form we will either desist from meeting people until you do, or I will engage a woman to teach you!"

I could not understand. How could I—I, in love with my husband!

There was a dead silence. Then George resumed.

Please do not make me, my ability, the subject of conversation at any time. Especially so when I am in the room. It is not only annoying, but it is an atrocious taste."

"Why George, I didn't say anything but nice things." I protested, not yet understanding.

That isn't the point. It isn't good form to discuss a person to his face; and when one of your own family—at any time. Please remember this, or I shall certainly employ some woman to inform you as to that and other things."

A Teacher of Good Form is is Threatened.

"Why George, you couldn't do a thing like that — I'm a married woman, not a school girl," and as I thought of how perfect the boys at home had thought me, how proud my brothers always had seemed of me; the tears came into my eyes.

"There, stop that crying, and go to bed!" he exclaimed. And I, glad to escape before the sobs, which I knew I could not suppres, made him angry, hurried up-stairs.

I now realize perfectly that when I was married I was but a simple country girl with all sorts of foolish ideas and ideals. I thought that love lasted with others as it had with father and mother; and others in our town, who lived —or seemed to live very happily together. Occasionally I found myself wondering if it were only seeming, if when they were alone they found fault; if they were unkind each to the other.

I undressed very slowly. I must try to adjust myself to the new conditions. I realized that all my reasoning when based upon my life at home was at fault. I had made no progress in my attempt to bring back that spirit of our courtship days. I had no weapons to fight discouragement. I must not give way. It is hard to tell of the workings of an immature mind. I think all young wives who marry into a new sphere in life must go through something very like what I did. If I am right, they will perhaps understand and appreciate my feelings.

"What are you doing? Why aren't you in bed?" George asked half an hour later, when he came into the room.

"I couldn't go to bed."

"Why couldn't you? Does your arm pain you?" the last more gently.

"No, not at all," I answered truthfully. I was tempted to say that it did; that it was because of that I couldn't rest; but I had never lied to George. It didn't seem quite decent for a wife to lie to her husband—then.

"What is it then?" he demanded.

"Only that I am trying to understand, George. I want to please you dear; but everything is so different. I seem so lonely and alone in this big town where I know no one. And you are sometimes very impatient with me."

"If I am it is for a good reason! Now go to bed," and he again left me.

Discouragement.

The tears streamed down my face as I crept into bed. Would I ever learn so long as I lived not to anger him? Had he really meant what he said about hiring a woman to teach me the usages of polite society?

Then a thought flashed over my brain. I would go to the book store and buy every single book on social customs I could find. Surely then I could at least learn what to avoid.

In about an hour George came in and went to bed. He didn't speak, neither did I. I was afraid to. Afraid to again bring up the subject over which I had blundered.

In the morning he scarcely noticed me. He read his paper and drank his coffee without a word. I had taken especial pains with my morning toilette, but it brought forth no comment. But just before he rose from the table he asked:

"How is you arm this morning?"

"It is all right."

"Keep it in the sling until the doctor tells you that you may do without it. You might have a stiff arm if you do not."

I felt happier that he had shown some interest in me; if it was only that my arm wouldn't stiffen. At that same time the thought came that perhaps it was only that he would be ashamed of a wife who was physically imperfect, as he surely was of mental imperfections.

Just as soon as I could dress, I ordered the car and, taking Annie with me, I visited the book stores in search of books on etiquette.

To-morrow—Unkind Merriment.

RETURNED SOLDIER TELLS EXPERIENCE

Trouble of Five Years' Standing Ended—Gains 12 Pounds

"If my testimonial will be the cause of others taking Tanlac you are welcome to it, for I certainly feel sorry for anyone suffering like I did and am glad to do what I can to help them," said James Benson, who resides at 683 Runnymede Road, Toronto, in a conversation with a Tanlac representative, recently. Mr. Benson is a returned soldier having gone overseas with the York Rangers. He is now employed by the Harris Abattoir Company.

"Tanlac has relieved me entirely," continued Mr. Benson, "of a case of stomach trouble that had been bothering men off and on for five years and that is why I so willingly recommend it. My appetite seemed to be fairly good that is I could eat—but nothing agreed with me. My food would just stay in my stomach undigested and the gas formed by it would bloat me all up causing severe pain, not only in my stomach and sides, but around my heart. I was so nervous I couldn't rest well and often had dizzy spells. I was badly constipated and all day at my work I had that dull, tired out feeling. I had lost several pounds in weight and was getting worse all the time.

"My wife had been reading the Tanlac testimonials and she finally succeeded in getting me to try a bottle. Well, I didn't stop at one bottle. It helped me so much that I bought another, then another, and when my third bottle was gone my stomach trouble was gone too. I'm never bothered now with any kind of pain or discomfort, and I eat just what I want. My food digests perfectly and the best proof of this is the fact that I have gained twelve pounds, which is several pounds more than I had lost. In fact, Im simply feeling fine and can certainly praise Tanlac for the way it has relieved my troubles and built me up.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Everybody Knows
Dr. Chase's Receipt Book

"Ever since I can remember, this was the most valued book in the bookcase."—Mrs. S. Thompson, Smith street, Kingston, Ont.

"Mother has had Dr. Chase's Receipt Book for 20 years, and, I tell you, it is a good one."—Mr. John Miller, S. Salt Spring, B. C.

IT may be safely said, without fear of contradiction, that there is no more useful book to be found in any home than Dr. Chase's Receipt Book. The proof of this statement rests in the fact that several millions of copies have been sold, and it is sometimes said that the circulation is second only to that of the Bible.

From the time he began the study of medicine it was a hobby of the doctor to collect all recipes and prescriptions of exceptional value. There is so much of the doctor's own experience and history woven into these recipes that you cannot use his book without feeling that you know him personally and appreciate his sterling character.

The Receipt Book was soon widely circulated, and aroused so much favorable opinion towards the doctor that he found the demand for his medicines far greater than he could supply. This led to the decision to select a few of his most successful prescriptions and place them on the market for general sale.

This action met with some criticism from the medical profession, but Dr. Chase's motto was "the greatest good to the greatest number," and one cannot estimate the suffering alleviated and the lives saved by this generous action on the part of the doctor.

The use of Dr. Chase's medicines has become so general that there are few, indeed, who do not know something of their sterling merits. So enormous have the sales become that imitations have been put on the market and substitutes are offered by unscrupulous persons who seek to steal the reputation of their originator.

But the doctor has protected you by having his portrait and signature printed on every box of his medicines. By taking care to see these on the box you buy you can be certain that you are getting the genuine.

The latest edition of Dr. Chase's Large Receipt Book, containing over 1,200 pages, will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, $3.75, by Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

Dr. A. W. Chase's medicines are for sale by all dealers, or sent on receipt of price by Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

LENINE PLOTTING TO BETRAY ALLIES

48 DROWNED IN SINKING OF CALGARIAN

LENINE TRYING TO AROUSE RUSSIA AGAINST ALLIES

Important Communication Received in Washington Shows That Russian Prime Minister Is Endeavouring to Deliver Revolutionary Russia Into the Hands of the Germans---Many British Raids on the Western Front Are Reported---Petrograd is Being Evacuated.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Robert J. Bender—Copyright 1918 by the United Press).

WASHINGTON, March 6.—That Nikolai Lenine, the Russian Prime Minister, is deliberately attempting to deliver revolutionary Russia into the hands of the Germans is the substance of highly important communications received in Washington to-day from an unquestionable although confidential source.

The communication shows also that Lenine is simultaneously trying to arouse the Russians against the "militarism of the Allies." This latest development in the ever changing Russian turmoil is particularly significant in view of the Japanese threat in Siberia. The communication received to-day is in part as follows:

"Lenine takes the stand that there must be no agitation against German militarism, but that the agitation should continue against the militarism of the nations at war with Germany. He is using every influence to have the new peace treaty terms 'between Germany and the Bolsheviki spokesmen' obeyed in all particulars of non-interference with Germany."

In Lenine the Government now sees the man behind the treachery to revolutionary Russia. Trotsky, the Foreign Minister, officials here still believe is the spirit trying to keep the revolution alive and honoured. The statement of Lenine's policy towards the invading Germans leaves no doubt here that he is playing hand in glove with the Teutons. It explains many things that during recent months have perplexed the Allied Diplomats. With Lenine's course now exposed, it is clear that a military expedition into Siberia, fostered of Japan, and approved by America and the Allies, would be a sword in the hands of the Bolsheviki leader, officials say.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 6.—An official Russian statement, received here to-day, says Ensign Krylenko, the Bolsheviki Commander-in-Chief, has sent a message to the German and Austrian Chief Commanders, stating that the Germans and Austrians are still fighting, notwithstanding the conclusion of peace. Ensign Krylenko asks whether the German High Command has taken steps necessary for the cessation of hostilities.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 6.—Some question having been raised over the meaning of the statement made by Sir Eric Campbell Geddess, the First Lord of the Admiralty, in his speech to the House of Commons yesterday with regard to the chances of destruction which a German submarine takes in cruising into British waters, Sir Eric was asked to amplify it. It means—the First Lord stated to-day—that one submarine is lost out of every four or five submarines which start from enemy ports.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 6.—(Official).—English troops raided the enemy's trenches early this morning east of Bullecourt and captured a few prisoners and two machine guns. Our casualties were slight. Successful raids also were carried out by our troops last night north of the Scarpe and in the neighbourhood of Lens. South-east of Gouzeaucourt a hostile raiding party was repulsed. Additional prisoners and a machine gun were taken by us as a result of these encounters.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 6.—The evacuation of Petrograd has begun. The State Ministries, according to a Reuter despatch from Petrograd, dated Tuesday, have started to leave the capital, from which the population also is fleeing hastily. The Bolsheviki Government propose to declare Moscow the Russian capital and Petrograd a free port.

THREE YEARS FOR FORGERY

Canadian Press Despatch:

KINGSTON, March 6.—Three years in the penitentiary was the sentence imposed to-day on Private Reuben James Smith, of Gananoque, for forging military checks.

Prizes For Field Crop Competition

The Industrial Exhibition Board decided last night to hold field crop competitions this year in spring wheat and white oats. Farmers are urged to participate in this competition. Prizes aggregating $100 are offered in the wheat contest and $75 for oats. Entries should be made early with Secretary Hall or at R. Denne's store. There should be a big entry list.

President Denne's proposal to enlist the services of school children was reviewed last night. Inspector Mowat was present. It is planned to provide seeds for pupils, who will be assisted by their teachers. In the fall their garden produce will be entered in a fair of their own and prizes given to those who have made the best showing. The children, of course, will retain the vegetables they grow.

DON'T WORRY over the bad business of yesterday. Use newspaper advertising and make it good to-morrow.

Peterboro' Soldier Returns Home

The city has been notified that Gunner J. Meagher of Peterborough, left Kingston yesterday afternoon for Peterborough. Gunner Meagher was invalided home.

Plant May Not Be Re-opened

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Ont., March 6.—There is considerable doubt here as to whether the Canada Blower and Forge Company of Kitchener, which was closed down by the Imperial munitions plant will again be re-opened.

ACTIVITY IN REAL ESTATE

Real estate has shown considerable activity during the past few weeks, and several houses will change occupants presently. Mr. W. R. Morris has purchased Mrs. David Mulholland's residence on Homewood Avenue. Mrs. Mulholland has bought Dr. Walmsley's house on Downie street. Mr. and Mrs. Roland Waddell will occupy Miss Bennett's home, 553 Gilmour street during extensive alterations, which will be made on their own home on Monaghan Road, and Mr. Fraser manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia, the present occupant of Miss Bennett's home, will occupy the house at present occupied by Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Morris, Rubidge street.

SINN FEINERS SEIZE TOWN

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, March 6. — Sinn Fein volunteers have seized Kilimagh, it was reported here to-day. They are guarding the exits from the town and are drilling.

(Kilimagh cannot be located in any of the standard maps or gazeteers.)

The town of Killegh may have been meant. This place is about fifteen miles east of Queenstown on the railway running from Cork to Youghall.

SOLDIERS ARE TO BE MOVED TO KINGSTON AT ONCE

Shortage of Coal is Given as the Reason For Shifting Peterborough Company of Depot Battalion From the Local Armouries

MAY GO TO-MORROW

According to a telegraphic message received by Major R. P. Watt, commanding the local company of the 1st Depot Battalion, E.O.R., at the Armouries, yesterday from Lieut.-Col. Smart, the commanding officer of the Battalion, the establishment here is to be broken up at once, and the company will be moved to Kingston. A shortage of fuel was the reason given for the shift, and it is stated that the local armouries will be completely closed up.

There are some 60 officers and men at the local armouries just now and to-morrow may see their departure for Kingston.

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Ont., March 6.—Some of the members of the Dominion Alliance will be summoned as witnesses next week in the case of the Crown against Capt. George T. Bailey, A.M.C., for making statements prejudicial to the recruiting and administration of His Majesty's forces.

Inspected Before License Is Granted

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, March 6.—The Legislative Municipal committee to-day reported a bill compelling all bakeries and manufacturers of confectionery to secure a license from municipalities, and no premises will be licensed till the Medical Health Officer has reported on the fitness of the same. There will be no license fee. The bill of Thomas Magladery, of Temiscaming, increasing the statute labour tax from $1.50 to $3.00 was also approved. This is mainly to tax foreigners who are at present more or less immune.

48 LIVES WERE LOST

Official Announcement of Torpedoing of Canadian Allan Liner "Calgarian" Used as a British Armed Merchant Cruiser

A FORMER TRANSPORT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 6. — A British official announcement says two officers and 46 men were lost in the sinking of the Calgarian which was being used as a British armed merchant cruiser. She was torpedoed on March 1st.

The Calgarian was a Canadian Allan liner of 17,000 tons, built in Glasgow in 1914. The last report of service from Canada was when she left Halifax with troops in 1916.

Captain Kendal, who was in command of the Empress of Ireland when she sank, and has had many narrow escapes since the war began, was her navigating officer. From the fact that the Calgarian was sunk by four torpedoes it is believed the submarines concentrated to sink her.

Will Make A Demand For Street Railway Extension

Mr. W. R. Breyfogle and Mr. C. H. Pennefather Enlighten Railway Committee—A Chance For Sir Adam Beck

At a meeting of the Railway Committee of the City Council held last evening Mr. W. R. Breyfogle, of the De Laval Dairy Supply Company, and Mr. C. H. Pennefather, manager of the Union Bank, were present, and extensions of the street railway were discussed.

Mr. Pennefather spoke of a prospective factory south of Braidwood Avenue, and the need of street railway extension. A lucid explanation of the situation was given by Mr. Breyfogle.

Mr. Breyfogle had the district marked out and an estimate made of the population, prospective revenue, etc. It was a business-like assembly of conclusive details and formed a marked contrast with the feeble efforts of the Committee to solve the difficuly in a round table discussion. This evening the matter will be presented to Sir Adam Beck who will be informed in so many words that the street railway is indebted to the city for the many concessions granted, and it is up to the Hydro-Electric Power Commission to meet the increasing demands for an improved railway service.

WANTS A SIDING.

A letter was read from the Railway Board regarding a siding that the Peterboro Fuel and Transfer Co. wish to have placed at mile post 59 on the Peterboro-Belleville line.

Mr. T. Wedlock, who was present, said that the company had at present 700 cords of wood cut and would increase this amount to a thousand or more if a siding could be secured. The shipping point is at Keene, but objection is taken to Keene as a shipping point owing to the steep hills in that vicinity.

E. H. Mann, F. McIntyre, T. Kitney and E. McGreyson were also present in support of the siding.

The total number of cords in prospect for use in Peterboro was estimated at two thousand, providing a siding was provided.

The Fuel and Transfer Company will make an application for a siding, and will be assisted by the Railway Committee.

Mayor Duncan and Ald. Edgar will make another trip to Toronto on the 12th of March to attend a meeting of the Hydro-Electric Radial Railway Association and the Ontario Municipal Electric Association.

AMERICA WILL NOT APPROVE JAPANESE ACTION IN SIBERIA

Washington Proposes to Keep Hands Off In the Eastern Situation However and Will Enter No Objection to the Plans of the Japanese.

MAY ALTER THE PLANS

(By Carl D. Groat.)
(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterboro Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Through allied channels, the United States government has officially declared it does not assent to the Japanese intervention in Siberia. The allies have so informed the Japanese government.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The United States now proposes to keep hands off in the Japanese-Siberian situation, according to official intimation today. As exclusively announced by the United Press this government will not give its approval of an expedition into the vast east Russian territory. On the other hand, according to intimation, a definite objection to the proposal would serve no good purpose at this time. However the problem still admits of alteration though the above is the official thought to date.

Whether the fact that the United States withholds approval will deter the Japs from penetrating Siberia is unknown. Persons close to the Japanese embassy, however, still insist that they want America to approve the move.

May Alter Plan.

In some quarters the thought existed that this absence of approval may alte the plan, particularly as the Japanese press comment reaching here indicates that there is a growing division among the Japanese people themselves as to Siberian action.

There were indications to-day that the allies have already definitely approved the plan to Japan that she is free to go ahead even though the United States is not in the plan.

The withholding of positive approval, though is likely to serve the American purpose sufficiently. Objection to the Japanese plan might involve voicing a suspicion of Japanese motives, though the objection could be based on the effect the move would have on Russia and on the absence of need for action.

NO FORMAL NOTICE.

The United States is understood to be in a position to keep hands off without official commitment of itself. She has been "sounded out" but it was officially suggested to-day that there have been no formal notes sent here. In these circumstances she can sit quietly by if she chooses without any official statement of her position whatsoever, for apparently nothing actually official is before the government requiring a definite answer.

The British are understood to be the sources through which the United States is communicating its views. Counsellor Barclay of the British Embassy consulted Acting Secretary of State Polk at length late yesterday, afternoon, after Polk had conferred with President Wilson. From this, it was deduced that the British were given a full outline of the American position, but it is understood that no direct communications have been had with Japan.

SWITZERLAND HAS BEEN HARD HIT BY THE WAR

Little Republic Would Be Starving, Freezing and in Revolt Were It Not For the Wonderful Organization in Vogue

FOOD IS SCARCE

(By William Philip Simms.)
(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

BERNE, Switzerland, March 5. — Switzerland has been harder hit by the war than any of the Allied nations except in the matter of money spent and men killed. But for her wonderful organization she would be starving, freezing and in revolt.

With almost everything she requires coming from the warring countries Switzerland by maintaining her neutrality and feeding her population, while doing more than her share of ministering to the bleeding world, has proven that democracy is worth fighting for. This country is rationed more strictly than is France, the principal battlefield of the world. I have eaten a better meal in Arras, Verdun, Toul, Belfort or Rheims itself, than I can get here in as fine a hotel as there is in Switzerland, and you can't beat a Swiss running a hotel.

In France the bread ration is 300 grams per persons a day. Here the daily bread ration is 225 grams, and the the quality is not so good. In Paris you can order eggs, fish, chicken, meat and game, fruit, cheese, dessert, coffee and the rest, but here you can have but one meat, and if you have meat you cannot have eggs or cheese; if cheese, then no meat and no eggs, if eggs, no meat and no cheese.

SUGAR SCARCE.

In Zurich, at one of the finest hotels in the city, they would not let me have any sugar. Here in Berne I get a couple of very small lumps—the ration differing a trifle in the various cantons. This apparently unfair and undemocratic demonstration of sweets is really the reverse. Sugar is given out according to the number of Swiss mouths to feed. In cities like Zurich crammed with German war refugees, the sugar ration per head is naturally less than in some other cantons where there are fewer visitors.

SQUEEZED FOR COAL.

Prussia squeezed Switzerland to the tune of 150,000,000 francs before letting her buy a puny 225,000 tons of coal monthly—about a quarter of what they got in peace times.

Switzerland as a nation was too poor to furnish this money. A corporation of coal users had to be formed. Every user of five tons of coal a year had to take a 500-franc bond. This money is a loan and presumably will be paid back. Germany gave her neutral victim nine months in which to pay the full 150,000,000 francs, the time being up this April. Almost everything Switzerland gets she had to get like she gets coal — by special treaties and special bargains. She does not get anything for nothing save perhaps from the United States.

FRONTAGE TAX BILL HELD OVER BY THE COMMITTEE

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, March 6.— The Legislature Municipal committee to-day held over for further consideration a bill of J. T. H. Regan and P. S. Wentworth "to amend the Public Utilities Act to enforce special frontage tax on land fronting on water mains." Mr. Farmer, counsel for the town of Dundas, pointed out that owners of vacant lots derived a special advantage from water mains. Sam Carter, South Wellington, protested against the serious danger of the public being exploited by real estate men. There should be no concessions to owners of vacant lands in the construction of public utilities, said Mr. Carter.

REDMOND LED HOME RULE FIGHT FOR MANY YEARS

Nationalist Leader Whose Death Is Announced Once Known as a Stormy Petral But Loyally Supported the Prosecution of the War

OPPOSED SINN FEINERS

LONDON, March 6.—John E. Redmond, the Irish Nationalist leader, died this morning at 7:45. Redmond underwent an operation last Friday, passed a fair day yesterday, and apparently was making progress.

The Irish Convention which had been supported by Redmond yesterday adopted a move of sympathy in which earnest wishes was expressed for his early and complete recovery.

Death was due to heart failure following a recent operation for intestinal trouble.

A HOME RULE LEADER.

For more than twenty-five years John E. Redmond fought for Home Rule in Ireland, and for the greater part of that time he was the recognized leader of Ireland's "struggle for liberty." As chairman of the Irish Parliamentary party the Nationalists, he exerted powerful influence in bringing about the creation of the Irish Convention organized in July, 1917, to devise a system of government for the island.

Redmond was one of the delegates to the convention which sat at various times at Dublin, Belfast and Cork, in 1917 and 1918. Born in 1851, son of W. A. Redmond, deceased member of the British Parliament from Wexford, Ireland, John E. Redmond had sat almost continuously in the British House of Commons since 1881.

There his Parliament fights for Home Rule earned for him the sobriquet of the "Stormy Petrel of the House." He was an able lawyer but never practised. He devoted himself almost entirely to his Parliamentary and political duties.

SUPPORTED THE WAR.

With the entrance of Britain into the war, Redmond immediately defined his position as squarely with the Government in the earnest prosecution of war. His support of the Government brought upon him the open and bitter condemnation of Sinn Fein party. He maintained his loyal position even during the exciting days of the Sinn Fein revolution.

John E. Redmond was the brother of Major William H. Redmond, who was killed in action in Flanders. Captain William A. Redmond, M.P. for East Tyrone, and son of John E., was awarded the distinguished service order cross for gallant conduct in the war.

News of the death of John E. Redmond brought messages of regret from all classes and sections of the community. Lloyd George will move the condolences of the Commons at first opportunity. The funeral will probably take place in Dublin with a requiem high mass in Westminster Cathedral.

KENMORE TORPEDOED

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, March 6. — The British steamer Kenmore has been submarined, the Admiralty announced to-day. Six persons were saved. The Kenmore was a steel screw steamship of 1,330 tons, built in 1895 at Newcastle. She was registered at Cork by the City of Cork Steamship Packet Co., Ltd.

American Steamer Beached

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, March 6. — United States' steamer Armenia, 5,164 tons, is beached on the British coast, as a result of an attack by submarine. The crew has arrived safely at an Irish port. She had previously been pierced by a German torpedo and patched up.

John Day Had Hig Leg Broken

Mr. John Day, who resides on the ninth concession of Smith township, had his leg broken yesterday morning and was removed to Nicholls Hospital.

TO THE PUBLIC.

The Royal programme, which will be given at the Grand Opera House, will be changed daily—to-night, to-morrow and Friday, afternoons and evenings. We have secured 45 reels, in which the best actors and actresses on the screen appear. Something new every day. Good orchestra.

Frank Jenne Says:

Perhaps I do not tell you as often as I should about my range of hats and caps.

Among the hats you will find the latest fashions in "Borsalino" hats. A hat that needs no urging to sell it. A few styles in the famous "Knox" hats.

My range of caps is stylish and wide in variety. Give the proper finishing touch to your spring attire with one of these hats or caps. "Comes to me.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 6TH, 1918.

HEAR SIR ADAM.

The addresses to be given by Sir Adam Beck in the Collegiate Assembly Hall, to-night, will be a most important one, and the building should be crowded, in view of the subjects to be considered. Sir Adam will deal with the question of the nationalization of Canada's railways and of the electrification of the Grand Trunk. It is hoped that local speakers will not intrude very much on the programme. The guest of the evening is the speaker whom the citizens will want to hear, and the decks should be cleared so as to give him every opportunity.

GOOD NEWS, THIS.

In the midst of the bad news from Russia and Roumania the address of Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty in the British Comonms, yesterday, brings a message of good cheer and comfort in the statement that Great Britain and America are sinking enemy submadines as fast as they are built. "The menace is held, but not mastered," says Sir Eric and follows with the announcement that naval warfare is increasingly in our favour, and the curve of losses from the submarine warfare has been downward.

The increasing efficiency of the allied navies in meeting the submarine menace is shown by the remark of the First Lord of the Admiralty that the chances of a submarine returning from the North Atlantic, the North Sea or the Channel are one in four or five.

THREE YEARS AGO.

Three years ago to-day saw the departure from Peterborough on the first stage of their journey to the European battlefield of B Squadron, 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, the largest body of khaki-clad men to leave Peterborough up to that time for the front. The thirty-six months intervening have sped quickly by, but have made lamentable changes. Of the gallant band of one hundred and fifty men who left Peterborough on March 6, 1915, for Ottawa, many sleep in Flanders fields. The terrible bombardment at Zillebeke in June, 1916, saw many of those lads gallantly die for Canada—others dazed and shaken by the terrible shelling of the town by shrapnel or machine gunt bullet fell into the hands of the Huns and are now in German prison camps. Others laid down their lives at Courcelette or at Vimy or Lens, or in that last terrible ordeal of the Canadians at Passchendeale. A few—alas, a very few, are still bravely "carrying on" — waiting to help to hurl back the expected. Some bearing the honourable scars of battle are back home again wearing the badge that shows they braved the worst that the Huns could offer.

All honour to Peterborough Squadron of the 8th. They proved themselves when the test came.

THE NIGHT SCHOOL.

High praise is given the night Industrial School here in the report of Government Inspector G. J. McKay. He compliments the principal and teachers, stating that the Committee has been fortunate in the selection of a staff, and that the teaching throughout is good, adding that the greater number of the teachers are experienced in night school instruction and the new teachers are taking to the work with a will.

Mr. MacKay points out that more equipment is necessary and suggests that the committee should allow no reasonable expenses to stand in the way of making the classes a complete success.

Several recommendations are made that should, and undoubtedly will, be carried out if possible. One is that the committee should endeavour to have other companies adopt the system inaugurated by the Canadian General Electric Company, of paying a bonus to the apprentices who faithfully attend these classes. Another good suggestion is that an effort should be made to acquaint every workman in the city with the fact that the night classes are open to him and that new subjects will be introduced if the demand warrants such a slip. A campaign to interest more women in the night school is another recommendation of the Inspector that might be adopted.

A SPLENDID REPORT.

Peterborough has every reason to congratulate herself upon the magnificent report of the local Collegiate Institute as given by the Government Inspector of High Schools. That official, after his annual visit to the institution in Central Park announces that "the staff is a particularly strog one and sterling work is being done in every department." He adds that "Board, principal, staff, pupils, and janitor all seem to give the best interests of the school first consideration. Speaking of the character of the teaching the report places each department in Grade I. and declares that "the organization and arrangement of the work is excellent and the needs of the various departments have received full consideration."

EVERYBODY QUITE WILLING.

(From the Detroit News)

Dr. Garfield's advice to householders to buy their normal supply of coal for next winter "as soon as it is available" is highly gratuitous. If he had said "Don't buy," his advice would have been disregarded. We have learned not to put our faith in fuel administrators, but to get coal whenever and wherever we can get it.

It is not up to Dr. Garfield to advise us to buy coal. It is decidedly up to him to see that a large enough supply next winter is mined and delivered. All indications point to another squabble over prices before next fall, and a few more interruptions of mining and delivery. These it is Dr. Garfield's business to avoid, or, if he cannot avoid them, to end as soon as possible. He can safely leave the buying end to the people. They cannot again be fooled by advice to wait for lower prices. They have learned their lesson.

By this time Dr. Garfield ought to be fairly well educated in his job. He knows with whom he has to deal, and he ought to know the best way and he ought to know the best way to deal with them. His task is not an easy one nor an agreeable one. A weaker man would have given it up long ago. Dr. Garfield must be given credit for sticking to his work and trying hard to make his administration sucessful. But if he looks for plain sailing from now on he may find unexpected rocks and shoals in his course. The public will expect him to steer with greater skill than he exhibited last summer and fall. It is ready to back him if he will get the coal where it is needed when it is wanted—and he cannot begin too soon.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The grant of 25,000 pounds to Lady Maude, widow of the late General Maude, will be endorsed by citizens of the British Empire everywhere. General Maude's genius restored British prestige in the East.

If it is true that the names of soldier candidates who were not endorsed by the Government were omitted from the ballots submitted to the Canadian troops in France, the Great War Veterans of Hamilton are quite justified in asking for an inquiry.

Even "made in Germany" titles are despised nowadays. A number of prominent British personages have abandoned their Hun "honours".

Jap Works "Flim-Flam" Game.

The captain of the coasting steamer Taiun-Maru, lying in dock at Moji, was visited by a man in police uniform, who said he was sent to examine all bank notes on board, says a Japanese correspondent. He gave as a reason that a new counterfeit of excellent execution had been put in circulation. The captain produced notes for 500 yen ($250), which the alleged officer scrutinized and finally said he would have to call an expert. Meanwhile he apparently placed the money in a jar and sealed it. It was the ancient "flim-flam game." The bogus officer did not return, and there was no money in the jar.

CANADA HAS PARK

Permanent Playground Established in Rocky Mountains.

Highest Peak, Glaciers, Forest Tract, Streams and Valleys Form Attractive Features of the Resort.

Canada is following the example of the United States in setting aside tracts of her Rocky mountain region as permanent playgrounds for the people. The latest of these is Jasper park, far up in the wild Northwest, where the play is still too rough to attract any great hordes of urban dwellers, but which is one of the most beautiful bits of mountain scenery in the world. The building of the Grand Trunk Pacific railroad had a good deal to do with the setting aside of Jasper park.

In Jasper park they have fenced in the highest mountain in Canada, an immense tract of virgin forest and hill country, a miscellaneous assortment of nameless glaciers of various sizes, half a dozen big trout streams and numberless little green valleys that look as though they were laid out by a landscape gardener. That the park is still difficult of access and calls for pioneering methods in its exploration is only another recommendation in the eyes of the lover of the out-of-doors. Here also certain important rivers take a humble start in life—such prominent streams as the Saskatchewan and the Columbia.

The land looks as untouched and as primitive as Virginia must have appeared to John Smith, but as a matter of fact it has a long and romantic history whose record is still to be written. And may the man who writes it wield a skilful pen and may he possess a real imagination, for his subject deserves it. This region lay for centuries on the boundary of the preserves of two great fur countries—the Hudson's Bay and the Great Western. Here they fought battles without number for the trapping rights—skirmishes between man and man instead of between millions and millions, but all the more full of daring, of strategy, and of adventure for that. And there, too, was a favorite hunting ground of those free lances of the wilderness, the free traders, who committed the ultimate sin of bearing allegiance to no company, and many of whom paid for it with their lives. These cold, green glaciers have seen a thousand thrilling dramas played out years before the "explorers" came, for the trappers were too busy to publish accounts of what they found. They were after fur. Nevertheless, in Canada as in the "states," they were the men who really opened the West.

In a Sarcastic Vein.

There was a drumming bombardment at Verdun when an American general officer visited the battlefield. Fifteen minutes after he reached the dugout of the colonel, who was to be his host for the day, the telephone wires were cut. They were never re-established. However, they were not needed. The French advanced systematically. The colonel kept in touch with the rear through his liaison runners.

"By and by," said the American, "he released a carrier pigeon. It flew away through the gunfire. The ground was obscured by the clouds of dust and torn earth. Airplanes were swooping overhead pelting us with machine gun fire. The air was filled with vivid flashes from the massed guns. It trembled with the continuous shocks.

"'Why did you release the pigeon?' I asked. 'Have your other means of communication suddenly failed?'

"'Oh, no,' said the colonel, smiling benevolent. 'It is only that I am very fond of birds and I thought it would please the pigeon.'"

His Coded Message.

That the big Fifth avenue hotels in New York have their camoufleurs, or as they are generally known, "fourflushers," was shown recently to many who were in the Peacock Alley of one hostelry. A bellhop had paged a man successfully and found him seated with two ladies. Obviously the individual enjoyed being with the ladies, and he wasn't a bit indignant about being paged publicly before them. "Here, boy, what is it?" he demanded with an imperious wave. "Telegram, sir," answered the bellhop, presenting his tray. The man took one look at the face of the message, flushed a bit uncomfortably, and then ordered the message returned to the office, where he would call for it later. "It's a code message, and I can't read it now," he explained to his fair companions. "I'll get my code book and get it later at the office." At the office the boy laid down the message with the explanation. "But it's not in code," retorted the clerk. The boy pointed to the face of the message. "It was code as far as his pocketbook was concerned," he said. "His spelling couldn't see the 85 cents." For there on the envelope it read, "C. O. D. 85."

When to Cut Trees.

Trees should be cut in winter, as timber dries more slowly at that time of year and there is little danger of damage from season checking. Logs can be handled most economically in the winter months as four times as many logs can be hauled on sleds as on wheels. If the logs or posts are cut in winter they become well seasoned before they are set, and proper seasoning is the most economical preservative treatment one can give to posts or poles. All the great industrial organizations, such as railroads, telegraph and telephone companies, that use enormous quantities of timber specify that it must be cut between October 1 and March 1. Experience has shown that best results have been obtained by cutting the trees at this time.

Kultur.

The car came to a halt by a broken wall. The party hurried out and dived behind a mound. He was pulled down a kind of shaft, and found himself in a room buried right underground, where three officers were drinking and smoking. The soldiers saluted and handed them a type-written despatch. The officers looked at him drunkenly, and one came up and pulled his beard and spat in his face and called him "an old English swine." He then shouted out some instructions to the soldiers, and they led him out into the narrow trench. One walked behind him, and occasionally prodded him with the butt-end of a rifle. The trenches were half full of water and reeked of gases, powder and decaying matter. Shells were constantly bursting overhead, and in places the trenches ha crumbled and were nearly blocked up. They stumbled on, sometimes falling, sometimes dodging moving masses, occasionally crawling over the dead bodies of men. At last they reached a deserted-looking trench, and one of the soldiers pushed him into the corner of it and growled something, and then disappeared round the angle. Old Sam was exhausted. He leaned panting against the mud wall, expecting every minute to be blown to pieces by one of those infernal things that seemed to be getting more and more insistent. The din went on for nearly twenty minutes, and he was alone in the trench. He fancied he heard a whistle amidst the din. Suddenly one of the soldiers who had accompanied him came stealthily round the corner, and there was a look in his eye old Sam did not like. When he was within five yards the soldier raised his rifle and pointed it at Sam's body. Some instinct impelled the old man at that instant to throw himself forward on his face. As he did so he was aware of a terrible explosion, and he had just time to observe the soldier falling in a heap near him, and then he lost consciousness.—Century.

GOOD ICE FOR TO-NIGHT'S CAME AT BROCK STREET RINK

The thermometer dropped sufficiently through the night to provide good ice for to-night's benefit game at Brock Street Rink between the Peterborough Old Boys and Peterborough Junior O. H. A. team.

The proceeds will go to the Great War Veterans Club Room Fund. The game will start at 8 o'clock, sharp, and will be a real battle as Evans, Halpin, Legros and company are out to show the youngsters that they have a lot to learn about the game. Jerry Coughlin will referee and the teams will line up as follows::

| Old Boys. | | Juniors. |
|---|---|---|
| Legros | Goal. | Murray |
| Halpin | Defence | Girard |
| Lowes | | Hagerman |
| Jackson | Centre | Cherrett |
| McMartin | Right Wing | Park |
| Evans | Left Wing | Bartley |
| Kenneally | Sub. | Williams |

The band will be on hand for skating after the game. There may not be many more opportunities for skating so that the crowd should be big.

KITCHENER FAVOURITES FOR TO-NIGHT'S GAME

(Canadian Press Despatch)

TORONTO, March 6.—From all accounts Kitchener remains the favourite with hockey fans here for to-night's Allan Cup games with the Columbus team of Port Arthur, champions of the Thunder Bay district. Sporting critics agree that the team from the head of the lakes is not showing the form expected, while Kitchener apparently are in shape, and a great crowd and a brilliant game are anticipated.

De La Salle Win Round From Kingston; Dye A Bad Man

TORONTO, March 6.— De la Salle had no difficulty overcoming Kingston's lead of three goals which the latter team secured in the first game of the home-and-home series, taking last night's fixture at the Arena by 7 to 2, thus winning the round by 11 to 9. They will probably meet U. T. S. in the semi-finals. Incidentally last night's exhibition provided the first real serious trouble in the O. H. A. junior ranks this season when Dye of De Salle struck Elmer of Kingston over the head with his stick and was escorted from the ice surface by the police for his action. Dye, who was taking the puck down the right boards, was checked by Elmer, losing the puck to the Kingston forward. As Elmer passed him with the puck Dye raised his stick, bringing it down fairly on the visitor's head. Elmer dropped his stick, whipped off his gloves and the two engaged in a fist fight. They were separated before many blows were exchanged and each given a five-minute penalty. The police warned Dye before allowing him to return to the game.

Kingston Outclassed.

The score give an adequate indication of the merits of the teams. In the first period De la Salle scored three goals and tied the score on the round. In the second period they added four more, holding Kingston to one goal. Playing mostly a defensive game in the final period the Green Shirts held the visitors to one goal, although they did not score.

De la Salle's Good Playing.

On the showing of Kingston last night it is difficult to understand how they managed to win from De la Salle in Kingston by 7 to 4. They were outskated, out-checked and out-manoeuvred at all times. In their anxiety to bore in on the De la Salle defence they frequently carried the puck too far and lost several excellent opportunities to score. In the second period, after beating Cain and Spring, Koster came out of his own goal, broke up a combination rush unaided and saved what appeared to be a certain goal for Kingston.

OSHAWA INTERMEDIATES HAVE A BIG LEAD

Oshawa, March 5. — Playing on sticky ice the Oshawa O.H.A. intermediate team before a large crowd, defeated Thamesville O.H.A. intermediates here to-night in Bradley's Arena by a score of 16 to 2. Oshawa outplayed the Thamesville boys from start to finish, leading by four goals at the close of the first period. The play was very fast considering the condition of the ice. Ettheringon, the lightning left wing man of the Oshawa team, played a steller game, skating around the Thamesville players in circles.

The second period was uneventful for the first few minutes, Oshawa playing a purely defensive game and feeling out their opponents, who soon became completely outclassed. The sensational hockey of the night was provided in the third period during which Oshawa scored seven goals and Thamesville one. It was beautiful hockey. Three and four men rushes kept the play up at a terrific pace, though the players occasionally overskated the puck. The fireworks started in the closing minutes, when the Thamesville team made heroic efforts to score but they could not penetrate the Oshawa defence.

Only two players were penalized during the game.

The return game will be played in Woodstock next Friday night.

BOWLING On Water St. Alleys

De Laval Win From Centrals.

At the Water street alleys last night the De Laval and the Centrals were scheduled for a league match. The Centrals failed to have their team on hand, thus defaulting the three games to the De Laval. A picked team rolled in place of the Centrals.

The scores were as follows:

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| De Laval— | | | | |
| W Fitzgerald | 170 | 148 | 154 | 472 |
| Byers | 130 | 121 | 131 | 382 |

Thamesville Has Defaulted To Oshawa

Canadian Press Despatch:

WOODSTOCK, March 6.—Following their defeat by Oshawa in the Intermediate O.H.A. semi-finals last night, Thamesville has defaulted the second game, which was to have been played here Friday.

Asked To Be On Hand At 7:30 To-night

All the players of the Peterboro junior O.H.A. team, and of the old boys, are asked to be at the rink at 7.30 o'clock to-night in order that the game may start sharp at eight o'clock, and the following are asked to be our: LeGros, Halpin, Lowes, Jackson, Evans, McMartin, Kenneally, Murray, Gerard, Hagerman, Cherrett, Park, Bartley, Williams.

Vice-Skips' Bonspiel Under Way To-night

The vice-skips' bonspiel opened last night with the ice moist and heavy. Five games were played and a feature of them was the restraint imposed on the old skips who were reduced to mere leads. As such they were forbidden to interfere in the direction of the play and were compelled to remain on the outside of the "hog line", looking in.

The scores were as follows:

R. L. Dobbin, 14; L. G. Dobbin, 15.

A. J. Grant, 5; A. L. F. Hall, 10.

W. Menzies, 9; J. T. McCabe, 8.

C. H. Pennefather, 9; J. C. Read, 7.

W. G. Read, 9; C. J. Seymour, 11.

HE MET THE NEW GENERAL

Canadian Officer Omitted Some of His Decorations, and Was Not Recognized by Lieutenant.

Col. R—— of the Canadian forces had just been promoted general and assigned to the command of a brigade at the front. His native modesty was not impaired by his new rank. He put on his cap an almost invisible little bronze ornament and pinned on his shoulders two crossed sabers, likewise bronze and almost invisible. In the press of business, relates a correspondent, he neglected to add the red band of the staff, the blue brassard, or the scarlet and gold fancies that properly adorn the collar of a general officer of his Britannic majesty's army. A couple of weeks had passed and he hadn't yet found time to go to town and buy all the things that make one look like a person of really high rank. And all the time he was living with Spartan simplicity in his dugout.

One day into the dugout blew a very young lieutenant—a lieutenant of infantry, in spite of a cavalier style of conversation.

"Howdo," said the lieutenant. "Dirty hole, what? Rotten sort of sewer you've got to live in. Staff's taken all the decent places, I suppose. I say, tell a fellow a bit of news."

(A lot of questions about the service, Russia, difficulty of getting leave, the acceptance of the polite offer of a cigarette.)

"Well," said the lieutenant at last, "I'm told you chaps have got a new general. What sort is he?"

"Oh," replied General R—, "a pretty fair sort."

"You've got to show me," said the lieutenant, whose language showed traces of both American and insular British influence.

"In that case," said General R—, smiling, "just look him over."

The young lieutenant looked. He took stock of a tunic that didn't show a patch of red anywhere. Then he caught sight of the crossed sabers, and leaped to his feet, redder than the reddest of the proper ornaments of a British staff officer.

General R— continued to smile sweetly.

Natural Gas.

Natural gas is probably formed in the earth by a process of natural distillation from the animal and vegetable remains of past geological ages, and is nearly the same product as it distilled from coal in the retorts of gas factories, only, instead the heat of fires, the internal heat the earth, aided perhaps by chemical decomposition, has caused its formation on a magnificent scale.

Beet and Wheat Food Value.

That there is more food value in one acre of beets than in four of wheat is the contention of German agricultural scientists.

A Question.

Why don't we get dimples instead of wrinkles?

GERMANY'S EFFICIENCY

TEUTON MIND MERELY BORROWS FROM OTHERS.

The Germans Have Invented Very Few Things of Great Value to the World, But Have Claimed a Great Deal of Credit for Adapting the Things Given to Mankind By the Brains of Other Nations.

DURING the last few months I have heard the Germans arraigned as blatant, boorish barbaric, yet in nearly every case the speakers suffixed to their invectives such an expression as, "But when it comes to brains you will have to hand it to them; they have made science."

"What — hand it to them? What epoch-making invention or discovery is of German origin—except a stamp on which is inscribed "Made in Germany"? Their scientists have kicked up a fair amount of spray as they gamboled in their pool, but the world has yet to hear a mighty Teutonic splash. Time and again French, English, American, Spanish and Italian inventors and discoverers have sent tidal waves around the globe. Let us now be specific:

The steam engine has been called the greatest of all inventions; it broke the shackles from slaves; it mingled the marts of the world! It made neighbors of the antipodes. Newcome, a native of Devonshire, obtained the patent for the first partially successful steam engine; Watt, a Scotchman, perfected it; Guynot, Murdock and Trevithick brought forward the locomotive, not on German soil. Stephenson, an Englishman, was the first to apply the locomotive steam engine to railways for passenger traffic. France, England and America applied it to navigation. When all had been completed Germany pulled the whistle cord, shouted "Hoch der kaiser," and tagged it "Made in Germany."

The telegraph, which brings us the daily history of the world, was invented by an American, Prof. Morse, who also suggested the Atlantic cable, which was subsequently laid by that American merchant-scientist, Cyrus Field, assisted in "mooring the new world alongside of the old" by Lord Kelvin, the prince of physicists. A British subject, Graham Bell, the chief inventor of the telephone was born in Scotland and grew to fame in Canada. A young Italian, Marconi, gave wireless telegraphy to the world. The houses of Hohenzollern has made great use of these inventions in telling Great Britain, America and Italy in arrogant verbiage what the vaterland has done for the benighted peoples of the earth.

Cyrus McCormick, a native of West Virginia, produced the reaping machine which harvests the foods of the world; Meike, of England, brought forth the threshing machine, thus was famine banished. Eli Whitney, of Massachusetts parentage, invented the cotton gin; Hargraves, an Englishman, made the spinning jenny; Arkwright, also English, supplied its efficiency with his famous spinning frame; the Englishman Kay introduced the fly shuttle in weaving; Brunel, who devised the knitting machine, and Cartwright, inventor of the power loom, were British citizens. Thus was the world clothed.

Although Germany is militaristic and worships at the shrine of Mars, what votive offering has she made to the god of war? It was not she who contributed guncotton, gunpowder, smokeless powder, percussion cap, nitro glycerine, dynamite, torpedo, shrapnel, automatic cannon, magazine rifle, breech-loading gun, Gatling gun, revolver, Maxim, silencer, hammerless gun, gunboat, ironclad battery or ship armor plate, revolving turret, submarine or airplanes.

Since Germany borrowed her military appliances from other nations, we are not surprised that she obtained her devices of prosperity from the same source. She did not produce the first aniline dye, vulcanized rubber, liquid gases, gas engine, watergas, thermometer, barometer, pianoforte, barbed wire, cut nails, plate glass, circular saw, cable car, electric car, sleeping car, air brake, bicycle, automobile, pneumatic tire, sewing machine, typewriter, calculating machine, cash register, steel writing pen, etc., ad infinitum.

The greatest thing Germany has done is to falsely advertise herself as the light of the world. No son of hers invented the electric light, the gas light, the acetylene light, the kerosene light, the searchlight, the flashlight, the safety lamp, the candle lip or the friction match. America, France, England and other "untutored" nations performed these tasks. The sun, moon and stars are the only lights left for Germany's contention, and according to the Mosaic account, the Lord and not the kaiser made and placed them in the firmament.

Daguerre, a Frenchman, presented us with photography. Edison brought forth the motion picture to delight and instruct the eye, and the phonograph to please and teach the ear. The Germans enjoy reels and records, and, lifting high their steins, drink a prolonged toast to the achievements of the vaterland, "Deutschland ueber Alles."

Galileo, who first saw the heavens with a telescope, was an Italian. The men who first saw the earth and its teeming life with a microscope were not of German origin. Yet many telescopes and microscopes in our colleges, being marked "Made in Germany," have led students to believe that these wonderful instruments were devised by German brains. The Germans are mechanics not inventors.

By use of the compound microscope Pasteur, the French bacteriologist, as early as 1857, demonstrated a connection between microscopic organisms and disease. This was nine years before Dr. Koch, the German bacteriologist, had graduated. In this connection the important antiseptic surgery of Dr. Lister, of England, should be recorded. Edward Jenner, the discoverer of vaccination, and Harvey, the discoverer of the circulation of the blood, were Englishmen. An American taught the world the use of anesthetics. Scientists from this continent excel all others. They are employed by many crowned heads—even the kaiser has his.

The Teutons have not shown the engineering skill of the French, who cut the Suez Canal, or of the Americans, who joined the Atlantic and the Pacific at Panama. The decimal or metric system by which the Germans make their measurements is a gift from France. The method by which they make their steel is that of Sir Henry Bessemer, of England. Many of the fruits and vegetables, of which they eat an enormous quantity, were brought forth by Burbank. No wonder that the Germans can "goose step" so high, for what else have they practiced?

Lavosier, the father of modern chemistry, was a Frenchman; Linnaeus, the founder of botany, was of Swedish origin. To Hutton, of England, we are indebted for geology; to Maury, of Virginia, for the physiography of the sea; to Descartes, of French parentage, for analytical geometry; to Comte, of France, for sociology; to Germany for sauerkraut and pretzels. Germany has not contributed her quota toward the world's advancement. How she struts in her foreign plumage. She is neither inventive, resourceful nor original.

She has made no geographical discoverings of importance. Her neighbors have. What role did she play in discovering various portions of the new world? Did she establish any colonies? I thank God she did not. Her sons did not compose the crew of Magellan's fleet, the first to circumnavigate the globe. A German did not discover the North Pole, nor lead the way toward the South Pole. It is high time to cease talking of Germany's achievements unless one wishes to indulge in satire.

History and study will reveal that the world's greatest teacher, scientist, inventor, discoverer, statesman, general, philosopher, preacher, painter, poet, architect, novelist or singer was not made in Germany.

Wool embroideries are more than ever used.

CHILDREN WILL BE ASKED TO CO-OPERATE IN GREATER PRODUCTION MOVEMENT

Board of Education Will Undertake the Distribution of Staple Seeds Such as Beets, Carrots, etc.—Additional Insurance to the Extent of $110,000.00 Placed on the Various School Properties.

LIST OF ACCOUNTS PASSED

The Board of Education at a meeting held last evening decided to secure the co-operation of the school principals and assistants in the matter of greater production. Children of certain classes will be supplied with staple seeds and encouraged to plant them in the back gardens of their homes. If present plans materialize prizes will be provided by the Industrial Exhibition Board and the Board of Education to be competed for in the fall. The matter was introduced last evening by Mr. R. Denne in the form of a resolution which was seconded by Mr. E. G. Patterson.

A Hand Book.

A survey of Peterborough's educational system will be made and the result incorporated in a hand-book for the benefit of the ratepayers and others who may be interested enough to know how the estimates are expended from year to year. The City Council as included in the list of beneficiaries. The work of compiling the records and information covering each of the schools will be left to the principals. The whole matter was left in the hands of the Supervision committee with power to act.

A letter was received from Colonel Gillespie of the third military district drawing the Board's attention to the necessity of placing insurance on the cadet rifles and equipment. The secretary of the Board was instructed to reply and say that a bond is already in force covering the equipment mentioned in the letter.

New Insurance.

Mr. P. A. Ferguson wrote a letter to the Board soliciting a share of the Board's insurance business. Mr. Thompson, secretary of the Board, informed the members that Mr. Ferguson had been given a share of the new business, which was sanctioned by the Board and which is referred to in the following report submitted by Mr. G. N. Gordon, chairman of the Finance committee.

The Finance committee beg to report that, owing to the increased cost of building and to the many recent fires, we deemed it advisable to place additional insurance, to the extent of $110,000.00 on the various school buildings and their contents.

Accounts Passed.

The Finance committee reported and recommended the payment of the following accounts: H. P. Lindsay, insurance, $6.63; Review Printing Co., maps and stationery, $2.05; Peck, Kerr & McElderry to 1st January, 1918, $50.00; Trebilcock Bros., window shades, etc., $5.25; E. F. Mason, groceries, $5.53; G. A. Gillespie, milk, $1.74; Nelson Typewriter Co., typing art, and music work and inspector's reports, $5.25; Peterborough Examiner Limited, printing and stationery, $40.50; Peterborough Music Co., machine and records, $40.50; Hydro Electric Power Commission, gas, $6.02; Alexander & Miller, repairs and electric supplies, $36.66; Peterborough Canoe Co., repairs, $1.25; J. E. A. Fitzgerald, for coal, $1,288.35; Peterborough Hardware Co., hardware, $27.03; W. R. Turner, repairs, $19.03; Peterborough Utilities Commission, water rates for quarter, $80.00; Wm. Lytle Cartage Co., for transferring coal $58.32; Campbell & Best, hardware, $1.30; Peterborough Utilities Commission, light and power, $80.85; W. H. Hamilton, acct. industrial classes, $16.26; Peterborough Examiner, acct. industrial classes, $7.50; Peterborough Machine & Lubricator Peterborough Planing Mill Co., acct. es $4.65; Alexander & Miller, acct. industrial classes, $14.34; Higgins Hardware Co., acct. industrial class-Co., acct. industrial classes, $3.30; industrial classes, $16.71.

Accounts Confirmed.

It was moved by Mr. G. O. Cameron, and seconded by Dr. F. C. Neal, that the payment of the following accounts be confirmed: E. Hensley, acct. per order, $178.90; Y.M.C.A., use of gymnasium for February, $120.00.

Monies Received.

H. R. H. Kenner, balance fees, $3.00; text books fees, $326.67; City Treasurer, municipal grant, $10,000.00. Total, $10,329.67.

Teachers' Convention.

The School Teachers' Convention will be held in Toronto on April 3rd, 4th and 5th. Any member of the Board who can spare the time to attend was instructed to do so.

Miss Caldwell, of the Public school teaching staff, was granted one month's leave of absence on account of illness.

SERVANTS WENT TO DANCES, STAYED IN BED NEXT MORNING

A charge of non-payment of wages against Mrs. C. Perry of the American Hotel was dismissed by Magistrate Dumble this morning.

Beatrice Woodcock, a little girl of fifteen or sixteen years, said she had bargained with Mrs. Perry to work in the kitchen for three dollars a week.

"I was paid for one week, but I got nothing for four days last week, from the 25th to 28th of February. My sister was working there, too. She gave a week's notice that she was going to quit, and Mr. Perry fired me, then. He said he didn't want such trash as me there."

Mrs. Perry stated that she had asked the girl to stay. The girls had been out to dances and on three mornings stayed in bed until 10 o'clock.

"I had to get up and do the work myself," she said. "When the sister said she was leaving she told Beatrice she had to go, too. I asked her to stay. I told her that her sister wasn't paying her and that she couldn't get her money till the week was up."

Mrs. Perry said that the complainant and worked two days and a half in the second week.

Mrs. Wm. Cameron, sister-in-law of the defendant, corroborated her evidence. The Woodcock girl's sister "cursed and swore something terrible when leaving," and was dismissed because "she had come into the dining room with her hair down and her boots unfastened."

RESIDENCE FOR NURSES OF NICHOLLS HOSPITAL

The Nicholls Hospital Board have purchased the handsome residence at present occupied by Mr. Bert Manning, 49 Argyle street, and in the near future a long felt want will be filled when the house will be turned into a nurses' residence, for the nurses from the Nicholls Hospital. Another ward will then be available for the patients.

MEMBERS OF THE REFUGEE PARLIAMENT TO MEET

WASHINGTON, March 5.—Members of the Belgian Senate and Chamber of Representatives, who are refugees in France, Holland and England, will meet this month as a deliberative body in France, according to an official despatch received here. King Albert will attend the meeting, which will be the first unified session of Parliament since the German occupation.

VICTORIA, B.C., March 6.— After several allots, Hon. John Oliver was several ballots, Hon. John Oliver was new leader of the government here and premier. He will retain the portfolio of Agriculture also.

PARLIAMENTARY SESSION EXPECTED TO BE SPEEDY ONE

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA, March 6. — Monday, March eighteenth promises to be the liveliest and most business like opening of the Canadian parliament since Confederation. No time will be lost in unnecessary ceremony, as the government is desirous that the actual work of the House shall be commenced without delay. It is expected the debate on the speech from the Throne will be rushed through to make way for the discussion of war and the general budget, which, it is expected, will reach record amounts. Sir Robert Borden is anxious that the session be concluded by the end of May to enable a representation of the government to leave for the Imperial conference in London.

Owing to scant accommodation in the Museum, which is the temporary Commons Chamber, no seats will be allotted except for Cabinet members. Private members may sit where they please, or rather where they can find room.

PREPARED TO WITHDRAW TO URAL MOUNTAINS

Canadian Press Despatch:

PETROGRAD, (Tuesday.) — Bolsheviki leaders are prepared to withdraw even as far as to the Ural mountains rather than submit to the defeat of the revolution, said Leon Trotsky, the Foreign Minister, in an interview today with the Associated Press.

Arraigned On Charges Of Manslaughter

Canadian Press Despatch:

HALIFAX, March 6.—Captain Lamedoc, former master of the French munitions ship Mont Blanc, Pilot Francis MacKay and Commander Wyatt, were again arraigned in police court to-day on charges of manslaughter in connection with the Halifax catastrophe. The evidence given was largely similar to that at the former enquiry.

Many Bank Clerks To Be Put Into Khaki

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA, March 6.—Two thousand bank clerks will be called up for service in batches from now till September 15th as the result of judgment given by Mr. Justice Duff to-day under the Military Service Act. Nearly every bank is affected.

Montgomery In Toils At Cobourg

Wm. Montgomery, a former Ashburnham man, with a police record in Peterborough, Lindsay, Barrie and Southampton, is under arrest in Cobourg, charged with forgery. Chief Ruse just returned last night, and was unaware that the nets were out for Montgomery, whose latest escape was in Southampton a week ago. Because the jail was cold, the kindly officials took him to a hotel and put him to bed handcuffed. His appreciation of this courtesy was shown by his escape during the night, a regular Houdini feat. Previously he had broken his way out of the Barrie jail, and is wanted in Lindsay, it is said, for forging cheques. Hence, when Chief Ruse asked Chief Thompson if he knew Montgomery, it was an interesting, though sketchy, story the wires carried.

TWIN CITY DIVIDEND IS NOW REDUCED

A cut is announced in the Twin City dividend from 6 to 4 per cent. A despatch says: "Twin City Rapid Transit to-day declared a dividend of one per cent. on the common and 1 3-4 per cent. on the preferred, payable April 1st to record of March 15. The dividend on the common is a reduction from a 6 per cent. basis to 4 per cent."

There is quite a lot of Twin City stock held locally. At one time it was liberally traded in but of recent years has been bought more for investment than for speculation.

Nine Dogs And Four Summonses For Gates

Jimmy Gates smiled with evident satisfaction this afternoon, when he reported nine dogs captured and four summonses to be issued.

"I got two summons for Driscoll Terrace. That's a pretty good day."

At Weber's Drug Store there is on exhibition the splendid prizes to be given to the scholars of the Temple Sunday School on Thursday night. These prizes are to be presented at a special meeting to-morrow night at the Temple by Mr. Joseph Wearing. A special programme will be given by the Brigadier Juniors in connection with the meeting.

AGENTS OF KAISER.

A New York Polish Newspaper, Tears Mask Off the Bolsheviki.

"It is probably known that the counter revolution in Russia, which helped to the downfall of Kerensky, was inspired by Germans; still, not many understand how many Germans took part in it," declares the Wolna Polsha, a New York Polish paper that has excellent sources of information.

"Not only that the leader of this movement received money from the German Government, but, in fact, he is a Prussian agent. It is known that not only he, but the majority of his comrades, are German Jews.

"A Petrograd correspondent who investigated the past of every member of the present Russian Government (Bolsheviki) was convinced that the Russian names of those men were pseudonyms only.

"For example, the real name of the premier is not Lenine, but Zeberblum.

"The ex-Secretary of Agriculture, Tabernow's name is Feldman.

"The notorious Parvus, who was the mediator between Lenine and the Prussian Government, is Helbarb.

"His confidant, who calls himself Ganscki, possesses the real name of Finsterberg.

"The other Lenine camerades who took part in this counter-revolution, calling themselves Zinovieff, Kamyeneff, Goreff, Matzkersky, Marlow Suchanoff and Zagorsky, are nobody else but Applebaum, Zederbaum, Rosenfeld, Goldman, Goldberg, Hinmer and Kraehman.

"It is sufficient to examine their names to discover the German ruse. The counter-revolution which was consummated fully by the Russian nation, desiring liberty, presents itself as a ruse organized in Prussian style. The Prussians have always used such means for centuries in order to conquer nations which they detested. The best proof is Poland. There, where they were unable to win the war in an honorable way, they used ruse, employing intrigue and murder as well in order to obtain their object.

"The present war gives us enough similar examples of the detestable ways used by Germans. With the old of treason and fooling they try to conquer the whole world. Only a fool could believe in the smallest promises from Berlin, until the Hohenzollerns' reign, supported by treason and brutal force, shall be totally crushed."

Fire Protection For The Schools

Board of Education is Looking into This Important Matter

At the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Education held last evening the matter of additional fire protection for the schools of the city was discussed. Mr. A. A. Fowler, a member of the Board, submitted a report enumerating the number of hydrants at each of the Public schools that come under the supervision of the Board.

The Report.

The report is as follows:

1. Queen Alexandra —2-way hydrant, 180 ft. from school.
2. Queen Mary— 2-way hydrant, 185 feet away. Another 470 feet away.
3. King George—2-way hydrant, 140 feet away.
4. Central School—2-way hydrant, 95 feet away. Two others 270 and 380 feet away.
5. South Central— Well provided for, 4 hydrants, 115, 160, 280, 450 feet from school.
6. King Edward —2-way hydrant, 170 feet away. 3 others in suburbs.
7. Collegiate Institute—2-way hydrant, 45 feet away, 4 others ranging from 280 to 540 feet away.

Mr. E. G. Patterson wanted to know if there was a standpipe in each of the schools and was informed that the Collegiate institute was equipped with one standpipe and a length of hose. Mr. Patterson was of the opinion that standpipes should be placed in each of the schools and that the hose and standpipe in the Collegiate Institute should be tested, as it has not been in use since it was installed ten years ago.

The Supervision committee will further deal with the matter and confer with the Utilities Commission and Fire Chief Grange regarding the matter of fire protection. Mr. J. W. Worth thought chemical fire extinguishers would be a good thing.

36.—1 Peck Early Potatoes.
37.—2 Small Fruits, Black or Red Currants, Gooseberries, Raspberries, or 2 Grape Vines.
38.—25 Strawberry Plants.

This is a big opportunity to secure plants, flowers, etc., at a bargain. Citizens are strongly recommended to join the Society. Membership tickets may be obtained at R. Denne's store, The Examiner Office, and from members of the executive committee.

St. Andrew's Men To Canvass Every Member Of Church

Campaign Next Week to Visit All Members of the Church--Funds Required This Year One-Third More Than Last

MEETING LAST NIGHT

At an enthusiastic meeting of the men of St. Andrew's Church last night it was decided to hold the "every member" canvas on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. The plans were reviewed and practically every detail is now complete for the three day campaign. Affected by the general financial conditions that are advancing the cost of living and of business operations, churches, too, are forced to meet greater demands. By the "every member" canvas, St. Andrew's aims to obtain increased contributions to meet this year's needs for local purposes and for the support of the church's mission. The requirements for 1918 are one-third greater than last year, and the men who are assuming the responsibility of visiting all the members are confident that the required amount will be secured.

Last night's meeting followed a luncheon provided by the ladies of St. Andrew's Red Cross Society. Mr. W. I. Chisholm, M.A., presided, and around him were gathered about fifty men whose enthusiasm and evident determination augured well for the success of their three days' work next week. Addresses were given by Mr. Chisholm, pastor, Rev. W. L. Rowand, Mr. G. Tower Ferguson, President of the Toronto Stock Exchange, and a prominent member of Bloor Street Presbyterian Church; Dr. James Waters, who is home on furlough from India; Mr. G. Walter Green, Mr. Richard Lees, Mr. W. S. Campbell, Mr. A. Macnab and others.

THE CHURCH AND THE WAR.

Mr. Ferguson spoke of the large part the Church has played in the war. Its members have filled the ranks of the armies, are serving as nurses and chaplains and have also contributed a great service through the Y.M.C.A., which, Mr. Ferguson remarked, was an institution of the churches. He emphasized the importance of maintaining missionary work in the home, as also in the foreign fields. The budget of the Presbyterian Church aggregates $1,200,000, of which twenty-seven per cent. is alloted for foreign mission and the remainder for home missions, social service and other departments of the church's work. Mr. Ferguson recommended the growing practice of members giving as much for missions as they contribute to the support of the home church.

DR. JAMES WATERS.

Emphasizing the importance of foreign missions, Dr. Waters rejected the opinion that this war would end wars for all time.

"That is absurd," he declared. "Only the message of the Prince of Peace will end war. So long as there is one non-Christian nation the world will not be a safe place to live in.

Nothing short of the whole Gospel to the whole world will make this world safe for democracy, and prevent a repetition of the terrible catastrophe before us. A man's job, surely."

Recent loosening of the bonds of caste in India, Dr. Waters stated, was partly a result of education, but only part. "It's the impact of Christianity with its permeating influence working its way into every fibre of Hindu life and thought; and that's exactly the fruit of foreign missions in India. Caste has been the greatest obstacle to missionary work in India.

Votes of thanks were extended to the Red Cross Society, to Dr. Waters and to Mr. Ferguson.

MR. J. E. L. GOODWILL.

Mr. J. E. L. Goodwill, of this city, has been appointed Grand Master of the 3rd Veil of the Royal Arch Masons of Canada.

Why I Believe In Nuxated Iron

As a Tonic, Strength and Blood Builder

By E. Sauer, M. D.

Probably no remedy has ever met with such phenomenal success as has Nuxated Iron. It is conservatively estimated that over three million people annually are taking it in this country alone. It has been highly endorsed and used by Former United States Senators and Members of Congress. Physicians who have been connected with well-known hospitals have prescribed and recommended it; Monsegneur Nammiai, a prominent Clergyman, recommends it to all. Former Health Commissioner Wm. R. Kerr, of Chicago, says it ought to be used in every hospital and prescribed by every physician.

Dr. A. J. Newman, late Police Surgeon of the City of Chicago, and former House Surgeon Jefferson Park Hospital, Chicago, says Nuxated Iron has proven through his own tests of it to excel any preparation he has ever used for creating red blood, building up the nerves, strengthening the muscles and correcting digestive disorders.

Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor dep't.) New York, and the Westchester County Hospital says there are thousands of men and women who need a strength and blood builder but do not know what to take. In his opinion there is nothing better than organic Iron-Nuxated Iron—for enriching the blood and helping to increase the strength and endurance of men and women who burn up too rapidly their nervous energy in the strenuous strain of the great business competition of the day.

If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained.

Note.—Nuxated Iron, which has been used by former members of the United States Senate and House of Representatives and other prominent people with such surprising results and which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians is not a secret remedy but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older Inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed by all good druggists. McDermid & Jury, druggists.

PARENT CIRCLE ENJOYED A FINE PROGRAMME

The Parents' Circle of Queen Mary School held a very successful business and social afternoon at the school on Monday, March 4th.

The teachers of the school staff, who had the programme in charge, delighted those present with their many splendid selections which consisted of an instrumental duet by Misses Caldwell ad Moffatt.

Humorous reading—Miss Thomas.

Vocal Trio—Misses Jackson, Stewart and McKay.

Address on Russia by the Principal, Mr. Voaden, and a closing chorus by the staff.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the teachers by the members of the club for their very enjoyable entertainment.

The members of the club intend giving a tea on the afternoon of March 22nd, at the residence of Mrs. M. A. Morrison, 452 Hunter street. All members and their friends are cordially invited to attend.

WEDNESDAY FISH DAY

This was fish day for all who were obeying the Food Controller's orders. Those who cannot realize the conditions under which the war is being carried on because of our distance from the scenes of conflict, are slow to see the need of complying with the Controller's regulations. Life in the trenches, however, demands that we make sacrifices to provide energy-giving foods and clothing for our fighting mn. All can "serve by saving" for our soldiers whatever is demanded to comfort and husband their strength and endurance.

"What can you do to help?" The use of fish more generally in our dietary will release more meats, bacon, eggs and other stimulating foods for our soldiers who need the stronger body-building diet. Are you doing your share? The excellent assortment of fish offered by Messrs. Douras & Gettas, fruiterers and fish dealers of George street, provides ample opportunity for "doing your bit" by adding more fish foods to your daily bill of fare. The large demand on their fish boxes to-day was an index of the growing demand for their sea and lake fish, which comes regularly by express.

DIPLOMA OF HONOUR FOR AN OSHAWA WOMAN.

Oshawa, March 1. — The National Service Committee, Oshawa, through its recent Valentine sock shower, received 692 pairs of socks and $108 in cash. This organization has worked Summer and Winter, observing no no holidays, since the outbreak of the war. During that time it has shipped over twelve thousand pairs of hand made socks besides many hundreds other pieces of field comforts to the soldiers in the trenches. Up to date twenty of its members have qualified for the diploma of honor awarded for knitting one hundred pairs of socks and many more names will be added in the near future.

Peterborough Boy Describes Christmas Fare In A German Prison Camp

The following interesting letter has been received from Lance Corp. Charlton Drummond, a Peterborough boy who has been a prisoner in Germany since June of 1916:

Kriegsgefangenenlager,
Stuttgart, Germany,
Jan. 1st, 1918.

My dear little Sis,—Another year begins to-day and still not much sign of this old scrap winding up. I saw the New Year in last night, but not in the style of other years, especially my last in old Alleron. This year I played cards, French style, with the Frenchmen and at 12 o'clock the year in with a very good salad of cabbage and sardines. That is a new one to you, eh? It is quite good, prepared in the French way.

And Christmas, I suppose you are wondering how I spent it. Well, I don't mind telling you that I could have spent it much nicer at home, but still for the situation, it was not bad. I had my goose it was French, my pudding English, Victoria plum, New Zealand rabbit, German potatoes, English biscuits and orange marmalade and French wine. Quite a mixture, was it not? I would give it all though, for a good sirloin steak and onions at home.

Well, let's hope for something better this year and perhaps next Christmas will be much different. . . I composed this letter before dinner but now I have just finished supper so will tell you what I had. Bean with corned beef, Swiss bread and butter, salad of cabbage and Yarmouth herrings, coffee, German Rhine wine and extra special cider.

Well this is all I can think of now as I have no letters of your to answer this time—not your fault I know. The Christmas holidays have stopped parcels and letters for a little, but next week I will look for a bunch.

Now wishing you the best of luck for the New Year and best regards to all with love to mother and yourself.

Your loving brother,
CHARLTON.

Soldier's Wife Said She Wanted a Dog For Home Security

James Gunn, of Charlotte street, admitted having two tagless dogs, both of which, he said, broke their chains and got out on the street last Saturday.

"The neighbors near the corner of Park street, say that he has four," Mr. Gates remarked in the police court this morning.

Magistrate Dumble: "Do you want me to put four punishments on him?"

Mr. Gates: "Oh, no; I've only one summons, but I know that he had two dogs at large."

Gunn said that he was willing that the dogs be destroyed.

"It will cost you $1.50," Chief Thompson informed him.

"How much to keep them?" he asked.

Gunn found out that he would have to buy tags, and pay for the dog catcher's services.

"I can get $1.50 this week," he said, and he was given until Saturday to scrape up his contribution for Mr. Gates.

Russell Wharman was fined one dollar for permitting his dog to run at large.

Mrs. Sharman said her dog had broken loose on Saturday and got out on the street. "I don't want him destroyed; I want to keep him until my man comes back." Her husband is overseas and the dog is a faithful guardian of herself and two small children. Mrs. Sharman was told she must arrange to keep the dog securely chained.

The Collegiate Institute Has A Strong Staff Of Competent Teachers

High Standard of Efficiency is Referree to in the Government Inspector's Report—The Industrial Night School is Doing a Splendid Work—An Opportunity For Clerks and Shop Workers of Peterboro'

THE INSPECTOR'S REPORTS

At last night's meeting of the Board of Education inspection reports covering the Collegiate Institute and the night industrial schools of the city were presented to the Board. The High School Inspectors report concerning the Collegiate Institute gives that institution a very high standard and in the words of Mr. V. Eastwood, chairman of the Board, "reflects credit on the teaching staff of the school." Grade "1" indicates "good" and grade "11" signifies "fair." The school grounds and lighting are placed in the last named category.

The Report.

Following is the high school inspector's report:

I. GRADING OF ACCOMMODATIONS.

Closets. I.
Water supply. I.
School grounds. II.
School buildings. I.
Class rooms. I.
Halls. I.
Waiting rooms. 0.
Cap rooms. I.
Teachers' private rooms. I.
Desks. I.
Blackboards. I.
Lighting. II.
Heating. I.
Ventilation. I.
Gymnasium. 0.
Assembly Hall. I.

The walls and ceilings in hall and class rooms have been tinted and painted; the light-coloured ceilings are a very great improvement. The light in the four west end class rooms would be much more satisfactory if there were translucent blinds at the left of the pupils. Everything in connection with the building appears to be well cared for.

II. VALUE OF EQUIPMENT, ETC.

| | As last Inspection. | Present Value. |
|---|---|---|
| Library: Reference | $841 | $873 |
| Supplementary Reading | 384 | 585 |
| Scientific Apparatus | 1158 | 1159 |
| Maps, charts, globes, etc. | 85 | 86 |
| Art models | 129 | 164 |
| Typewriters | 723 | 723 |
| Biological specimens | 162 | 182 |
| For Physical Culture | 61 | 81 |

Increases have been made in several departments. The equipment for Middle School Art will meet the requirements; the Library is at present used as an Art room for the Middle school classes.

III. Organization.

Ratio of pupils to teachers: 27.1. There are but few congested classes.

Division of duties among teachers Satisfactory.

Provision for teaching the courses: The organization and arrangement of the work is excellent, and the needs of the various departments have received full consideration.

IV. Miscellaneous.

Staff: All legally qualified.
Discipline: Excellent.
Attendance: One pupil admitted without the Minister's consent. Boys 148, girls 186. Total 334.
Text books: Authorized by resolution.
Registers: Properly kept.
Catalogue of equipment: Satisfactory.
English Literature Texts in Lower school: Satisfactory.
Supplementary reading: Choice from lists.
Sight translation in Latin, Greek, French and German: Provided for school flag: Yes.
Additions to class room decorations: Photos placed in halls of ex-pupils who have won military distinction or made the supreme sacrifice in war.
Fire drill: Not practised. This is a mistake.

V.—Character of the Teaching.

English, I.
History, I.
Mathematics, I.
Science, I.
Geography, I.
Latin and Greek, I.
French and German, I.
Art, I.
Reading. See Record.
Commercial Dept., I.
Optional Com. Subjects, writing only.
Physical Culture.

The girls' work in physical culture is splendid.

VI.—Character of the Pupils' Work.

Reading—Of 34 examined, 21 are good, 13 fair, none poor, none bad.
Spelling—Of 59 examined, 12 are good, 20 fair, 16 poor, 11 bad.
Writing—Of 59 examined, 20 are good, 17 fair, 22 poor, none bad.
Book-keeping sets. Satisfactory. Taken only in Commercial Forms.
Art. Work of very fair quality. Amount not large. Some very satisfactory work shown by Middle School class.
Note Books and Collections in Science. Good collections. Records in general neatly made. Show work covered. Some outdoor notes.

VII.—Special Reports.

1. Under Reg. 3, pp. 11 and 12, as to Approved Schools: None.
2. Under Reg. 37, pp. 121, 122, as amended by Circular No. 9, May, 1915, as to the courses in science, book-keeping and writing. Lower School and Middle School Art.
Courses provided, in Science and Middle School Art.
3. Under Reg. 8, pp. 47, 48, as to Middle School Art, and Reg. 13, pp. 52, as to Physical Culture:
Regulation 8 may apply here; regulation 13 will not.

VIII.—General Remarks.

My commendatory remarks of last year might very well be repeated. The staff is a particularly strong one and sterling work is being done in every department.

The changes in walls and ceilings have made the halls and class-rooms bright and cheery, and the pupils have the full advantage of the education of an uplifting environment. The photographs in the halls are a most interesting feature of the school.

Board, Principal, Staff, Pupils and janitor all seem to give the best interests of the school first consideration.

Industrial School Report.

Report of G. J. MacKay on Night Industrial School at Peterborough:

Classes Inspected—Two visits were made to the Peterborough Night School, on November 14th, two classes in mathematics, the senior class in electricity, one class in mechanical drawing, and one class in dressmaking were inspected. On February 14th, one of the other two classes in mathematics, the class in automobile mechanics, the one in commercial art, and a class in dressmaking were visited.

Attendance—The enrolment is two or three times as large as in former years. The attendance of men is less than I was in November because of the number who enlisted for military duty or were taken by the selective draft. The regularity of attendance of those now on the roll is very satisfactory.

Teaching—The teaching throughout is good. The greater number of the teachers are experienced in night school instruction and the new teachers are taking to the work with a will. They are giving time and thought to the preparation of their courses and discussing the work amongst themselves and with the principal. The committee has been fortunate in the selection of a staff.

Courses of Study—The subjects for the men and boys are well adapted to the needs of the workers of the city. Mathematics is given particular attention, and mechanical drawing and electricity receive their due share. The courses are carefully laid out in advance by the instructors, all of whom know the needs of their students.

Organization and Supervision—The organization has been well worked out and the supervision is thorough and efficient.

Accommodation and Equipment — The accommodation is satisfactory. The lighting since the improvements have been made is good. To give the instructors in electricity, especially in the senior class, facilities for giving their students the grade of instruction they consdeir they should have, more equipment is necessary. The committee should allow no reasonable expense to stand in the way of making classes a complete success. The General Electric Company may be ready to assist the committee in providing as complete an equipment as possible at a minimum of outlay.

General Remarks re Classes For Men

A remarkable advance has been made this winter in night school work for men and boys in Peterborough. This has been brought about by the energy and enterprise of the principal and the assistance given him by members of the committee and others interested in the education of workmen of the city. The work has received a very great impetus from the General Manager of the C. G. E. by his offering a liberal bonus to the apprentices of the company who do a faithful winter's work in the school. Now that the members of the committee are confident that they have efficient courses to offer the apprentices of the city, it is strongly recommended that the committee and the principal make an effort to extend the arrangement made with the C.G.E. to the other companies of the city who employ apprentices. A number of their apprentices are faithful attendants at the classes and should receive the same consideration as that shown by the manager of the C.G.E. to his boys.

It is also recommended that before the classes are re-opened in October, every workman in the city should be made acquainted individually with the fact that the classes are open to him and that new subjects of instruction will be added if there is a demand for them. This can be done best by visits to the plants from men who have the success of the education of workmen at heart.

General Remarks re Classes for Women:

Valuable instruction is provided in the women's classes. The attendance, however, might well be larger. It is recommended that next September a special effort be made to bring the value of the classes before the women clerks and shop workers of the city who have no other opportunity for learning the requisites of home-making.

Concrete Ships.

Ship building has received a tremendous impetus during the past year. The determination of Germany to wage unrestricted submarine warfare has made the question of providing ships to make good the wastage one of momentous importance. Months ago it became evident that a shortage of plates for steel ships was well within the range of possibility. Substitutes were, therefore, sought. One of the most promising is ferro-concrete. This material has been in use in barges, launches and, even to some extent, in larger vessels for a number of years. Consequently, it was not without hope of success that attention was turned to the construction of concrete boats to take care of the traffic on the Great Lakes and, thus, set free for coastal and ocean freighting boats at present plying thereon.

A shipbuilding firm in Montreal has commenced the construction of such vessels. One of these is a 125-feet single screw steamer having structural steel ribs and keel with a hull of reinforced concrete. The shell is from three to five inches in thickness. It is, of course, thicker than a steel plate ship, but it is claimed that the weight of the hull is less than of a wood ship of similar dimensions. One of the outstanding advantages of this method of construction is the great speed that may be obtained in building. Thus, work on the vessel in question was commenced early in September and the boat was launched November 14th.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards—Receipts yesterday, 79 cars, with 851 cattle, 103 calves, 2,712 hogs and 105 sheep and lambs.

There was a slightly better tone to the market yesterday. Cattle offerings were of good average quality, just arrived, and therefore empty. Prices in some cases higher than Tuesday, but, the freshness of the cattle considered, were really no better. On the whole the market was good and steady with Monday's market, prices certainly being no lower.

Sheep and lambs steady.

Calves firm and 25 to 50 cents lighter.

Hogs were firm, with the market practically at a deadlock. Buyers were bidding $19.75, fed, the prevailing price so far this week, but in view of the comparatively light run the drovers were standing out for $20, fed, and up to the noon hour there were no sales.

Germans Are Getting Stronger On Western Front Says Maurice

"Inferiority Rapidly Decreasing," and Germans Superior in Number of Divisions—Hun Subs Down in Mediterranean

U. S. DESTROYERS BUSY

LONDON, March 7. — The Germans now have a superiority of 16 divisions on the western front, Gen. Maurice, director of military intelligence, declared in an interview with the United Press.

The enemy, however, is still numerically inferior, although this inferiority is steadily decreasing.

Maurice's statement indicates his belief that the allied divisions contain more men than the German divisions. At the start of the war all divisions approximated about 20,000 men.

"I have said heretofore that a German offensive was not immediately likely, because the Germans required time to prepare new troops," said Gen. Maurice, "but these major preparations are now more or less complete and the enemy can attack whenever he completes his local preparations.

"It is now to these local preparations that we must look for indications of an approaching attack. These indications are not always easy to gauge. We have now reached a stage when you cannot prophesy. If the enemy wishes to attack there is nothing to prevent."

U. S. Destroyers Busy.

An Atlantic Port, March 7.—American destroyers are operating against submarines in the Mediterranean, Capt. sato Yamamoto, naval attache of the Japanese Embassy in Rome, declared upon his arrival here. He predicted that American destroyers, working with British, Japanese, and Italians, had sunk many U-boats, and practically driven all the Austrian submarines from the Mediterranean.

He predicted an allied naval attack upon Trieste, which city, he said, was used by the Germans as a base for their submarine activities in the Mediterranean.

The Japanese attache declared that 15 submarines were sunk in the Mediterranean last month.

CANNERS GET ORDERS.

WASHINGTON, March 1. — All canners were advised by the Food Administration to hold for war purposes, until further advised, all canned corn, peas, tomatoes, string beans and salmon now on hand.

There must be a note of contrast in the dress.

GRAIN MARKET

There was a change of only an eighth of a cent higher in the Manitoba cash oats, basis in store Fort William, yesterday, but Ontario oats moved up 2 cents and are now quoted at $1 at outside points. In the options there were fractional advances, but with such narrow margins trading is very light. Statistically the market should be bearish, but the slow movement of the crops and consequent light spot offerings keeps the market at the present record levels. Further advances are registered in barley and rye, the former going up 5 cents and the latter 10 cents. There is such an urgent demand for Ontario rye for export to the United States that a 10-cent daily advance is becoming almost a regular thing. The U. S. requirement of 20 per cent. of rye in American flour accounts for the present keen demand for the Ontario crop. The difficulty is that local grain dealers cannot secure cars for haulage of the grain.

ROUMANIA ACCEPTS GERMAN PEACE TERMS

Cedes Part of Province of Dobrudja to Central Powers—Terms of Treaty—Roumanian Army Must Be Demobilized —Austrian Territory to Be Evacuated

TAKES EFFECT IMMEDIATELY

AMSTERDAM, March 7.—A preliminary peace treaty between Roumania and the Central Powers has been signed, says a despatch from Bucharest.

Following are the terms of the preliminary peace treaty:

"1. Roumania cedes to the Central Powers Dobrudja as far as the Danube.

"2. The powers of the quadruple alliance will provide and maintain a trade route for Roumania by way of Constanza to the Black Sea.

"3. The frontier rectifications demanded by Austria-Hungary on the frontier between Austro-Hungary and Roumania are accepted in principle by Roumania.

"Likewise economic measures corresponding to the situation are conceded in principle.

"5. The Roumanian Government undertakes to demobilize immediately at least eight divisions of the Roumanian army. Control of the demobilization will be undertaken jjointly by the Upper Command of Field Marshal Von Mackensen's army group and of the Roumanian chief army command. As soon as peace is restored between Russian and Roumania the remaining parts of the Roumanian army also will be demobilized in so far as they are not required for security service on the Russo-Roumanian frontier.

"6. The Roumanian troops are to evacuate immediately the territory of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy occupied by them.

"7. The Roumanian Government underakes to support with all its strength the transport of troops of the Central Powers through Moldavia and Bessarabia to Odessa.

8. "Roumania undertakes immediately to dismiss the officers of the powers who are at war with the quadruple alliance still in the Roumanian service. The safe conduct of these officers is assured by the quadruple alliance. This treaty enters into operation immediately."

Dandruff Surely Destroys the Hair

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

The people of Ennismore are busily engaged in drawing material for the erection of a new school.

Rev. Father McAuley is preparing a play for March 17th.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder Troubles You

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kindeys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Kinmount News Items

KINMOUNT, March 6. — At last we are having some fine weather to make life worth living.

Miss Cameron is visiting her friend, Miss B. Black, for a few days.

The members of the Presbyterian Church held their tea and concert in the C.O.F. Hall on Friday, March 1st. The weather was very favourable and a large crowd attended. Tea was served by the ladies from 5:30 to 8 o'clock, when the entertainment began. Mr. Armstrong, of Norland, was present, and very much delighted the audience with his Scotch songs. Miss Minnie Dettman gave a very pleasing solo. A play entitled "Aunt Perusha's Quilting Bee" was acted by sixteen of the young people of the village. This represented an old-fashioned quilting bee, supper and the evening spent afterwards. The costumes were good, many of the members not being recognizable. The proceeds amounted to $73.50, which will be devoted to putting a verandah to the Manse.

We regret to hear that Rev. Mr. Williams has been ordered away for a rest, and also that his little son, Charles, is laid up with the measles.

The streets of our village are in a very bad condition at present. When it thaws the water runs in on the lower floor of Mr. J. Cain's shop and also Mrs. F. Wilson's dwelling. Both have had to move and will not be able to return until fine weather in the spring.

Mrs. Dr. White is visiting friends in Cannington.

Pains In The Small Of The Back

Headaches, Dryness of the Skin and Loss of Weight Warn You That the Kidneys Are Diseased

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 6.—"Pains in the small of the back" is the way hosts of people describe their sufferings, not knowing that the pains are in reality the kidneys. Pains in the back, weak back, lame back, backache—these are the first indications of kidney touble. They are the warning which nature gives you. If you heed at once you can be cured. Neglect will soon put you at the mercy of the most painful and fatal of diseases.

Women as well as men have kidney disease, and may well feel anxious when the kidney pains make themselves felt in the small of the back.

Because Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills give you prompt relief from backache, it is well worth your while to take them. But they do more than this. They regulate and invigorate the action of the kidneys and ensure a return to health of these important organs.

Mr James Malley, 488 Crawford Street, Toronto, Ont., writes: "I had been troubled with lame back for nine or ten years, and although I had tried other remedies, they were of no benefit to me whatever. Through reading the advertisements in your booklets for Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, I commenced taking these, and found that they were the best I ever used. I took about a dozen boxes in all, and am now completely cured. I can highly recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

("This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. James Malley, 488 Crawford Street, and believe his statement with regard to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to be true and correct.—John Dunn, J.P.")

WORK AND OPPORTUNITY for ALL

"THE CLUE IN THE AIR"

A DETECTIVE STORY—Isabel Ostrander

The house on Twenty-fifth street was one of a long row of old-fashioned brick and stone buildings set back in dirty littered dooryards. What had evidently to a long-past generation been an exclusive, if modest, residential neighborhood had fallen into gradual decay. Warehouses and lumber yards crowded close and the rank, accumulated smells of the river near by mingled with the odors of none too savoury cooking. Almost every house flaunted tiny cards in the front windows announcing that rooms were to be had within, but the one they approached bore a metal plate beside the door.

"Mme. Oriel, rooms with board," read Dennis. "You're sure we've got the right address?"

"Uh-huh. Cunliffe told me 'twas a cheap kind of a theatrical boarding house. Give a rap on it, dear, Denny; the bell's broke."

Repeated knocking brought at last the sound of shuffling feet within and a frowsy-headed girl opened the door.

"What do you want?" she demanded tartly.

"The landlady, Mme. Oriel." McCarty pushed past her and stepped inside.

"She ain't—she layin' down." The girl stood with her red hands akimbo on her flat hips. "I ain't goin' to get her up now! What do you want? The house is full, and we don't take table boarders."

"You go tell her two gentlemen want to see her——" began McCarty, but a shrill voice interrupted.

"Katie!" Will you shut that door? Do you want all the flies in the neighborhood chasin' in?"

A shining fat face, framed in an aura of upstanding curl papers appeared over the banister rail on the floor above. The voice which floated down had contained more than a flavour of brogue, and McCarty's expression unconsciously lightened.

"Is it Mme. Oriel?" he asked, with bland deference. "Could we disturb you, ma'am? I know 'tis a nuisance to be bothered of a Sunday, but we just dropped in——"

"One minute and I'll be with you." A large hand yanked ruthlessly at the curl papers. "Katie, show the gentlemen into the parlour and pull up the shades. If Callory's dog has slunk in, kick him out!"

The parlour was empty, however, and dismal in its air of unnatural order and calm as if it were holding its breath during the week-end pause.

Dennis seated himself gingerly and looked about him. From the basement echoed an anxious chorus of barks, and far above a thin female voice ran a doubtful scale, ianging in discord with the melancholy groan of a saxaphone.

"Nice quiet place your lad with two names hangs out!" he observed. "How are you going to open up about him?"

"Whist!" warned McCarty, and twisted his mouth into a beaming smile as a heavy foot sounded upon the stairs and the lady of the house swept into the room with a swirl of scarlet kimono draperies.

McCarty rose ceremoniously.

"'Tis a shame we took you from your rest, ma'am——"

"Man dear, don't mention it! My head was splittin' from yellin' at that gump of a girl, or I'd not have been loafin'." She broke in upon his protestations with a broad smile. "You might know she came from County Antrim by the look of her!"

McCarty's own smile broadened.

"You're French yourself, ma'am, by the name," he remarked.

"Get along with you!" She shook her head at him archly. "O'Reilly, rest his soul, was as good a Kerry man as ever came over, but in this business it's a foreign name gets the coin. You'll bewanting board, now. There's not a room in the house, but there'll be a fine double one for two of you to-morrow when I get rid of Callory and his dogs. You will not mind it after them, for I'll clean it good and a bit of mange soap smell is healthier than the perfume most of them leaves behind them."

"No, ma'am, 'is not rooms we want, though I'm a lone bachelor myself, and thinking of moving," added McCarty diplomatically. "We were just passing, when my friend here picked up a gold watch with the initials 'W.D.' on it, and we wondered if it belonged to one of your boarders."

Mme. Oriel's eyes snapped.

"A gold watch!" she exclaimed. "And him stalling me for three weeks board!"

She stuck her head out of the parlour door and called:

"Mr. Delano! Mr. Wilbur Delano, come on down here, you are wanted! Look at that now!" she added turning to them once more. "Them out of work for two months and me thinkin' he had not the price of a meal. What they don't put over on a lone woman in his business isn't worth trying! He is one of the four Delanos, bell ringers, and they open again the Bronx to-morrow."

"Don't show it to him, Denny, until he describes it," warned McCarty superfluously. "Maybe it ain't his, and we'd get into trouble handing it over."

A slight, fair young man with a round face and pale, inquiring eyes, entered and stood looking from one to the other of them.

"Did you want to see me?" he asked.

"If your initials are 'W.D.'," replied McCarty.

"We found a gold watch outside, and if you lost one, and can describe it——"

"Say, what kind of a kid is this?" the young man interrupted. "A gold watch! I hocked a nickel one for cigarette money three weeks ago, and I never had the price of a gold ticker in my life! What're you givin' us?"

"A cigar then, instead, if you'll have it," McCarty responded, producing the article from his pocket. "Say, Mr. Delano, have you lost anything else lately? A hat, for instance?"

"'Lost a hat!'" the young man repeated as he took the cigar. "You fellers haven't been walking around in the sun too much have you? Let me in on this! What's the idea?"

"I want to know if you lost a hat, or any one borrowed one of yours, Mr. Delano." McCarty's smile had disappeared, and a stern peremptory note crept into his voice. "Think, please. A straw hat with your initials inside."

"Why, I—I don't remember." The young man stared blankly at him. "I have only had the one hat all summer——"

"About two weeks ago," McCarty suggested. "Didn't you mislay it or lend it to somebody?"

"No, I didn't, but—say Mr. Oriel, do you remember when Pico grabbed my hat in mistake for his off the rack outside the dining room? What night was it?" He turned to the landlady, unheeding her swiftly warning gesture. "I made a holler about it, because I didn't have any other, and I had to keep a date. I couldn't wear his because of his head being shaped so funny, and I borrowed one from Callory. It was Monday night, two weeks ago!"

McCarty shot a swift glance at Dennis's tense face.

"Thank you, Mr. Delano, that is all I wanted to know. Now, then, Mme. Oriel, I want to see this Pico or Jerry Bowker, or whatever else he calls himself!"

"Bills! by God!" The young man turned pale. "I thought there was some come back about that watch gag. Look here, I ain't mixed up in this, I don't know anything about it——"

"Sure you don't," responded McCarty. "We don't want anything more from you."

The young man took the hint and promptly bolted, and McCarty turned to the agitated landlady.

"I'm sorry, ma'am, but I've got to have Bowker. Where is he?"

"You'll not get him here, thank God!" She faced him with undaunted eyes. "He's left only last night, and glad I am of it that he's got away, for no matter what he's done, he's one of the nicest young fellows ever set foot in my house. You've got a nerve comin' here, the two of you, with your blarney tryin' to trap a decent, law-abidin' woman into givin' away one that slept under her roof and paid regular!"

"Where has he gone?"

"I don't know, and if I did I would not tell you!" the lady retorted. "Ten years have I kept this house and never a cop stuck his nose in the door once except when Gottlieb the Great had the D.T.'s. Mr. Bowker's a fine-spoken open-handed young man, and whatever he's been up to it's between you and him. He left last night, bag and baggage, and that is all you'll ever get from me."

"Listen, ma'am," McCarty's voice dropped persuasively. "The young fellow has done nothing that we know of. We are not holding a thing agi'n him, but we've got to ask him some more questions. There is something he can tell us and nobody else. I'm not trying to trap you or him, it is God's truth!"

She eyed him steadily for a long minute, then drew a deep breath.

"You mean it? 'Twas no lie I told you about his going, for he did leave last night," she said slowly. "I can show you his room, though it is not cleaned yet, for the new feller don't come in until to-morrow. I know he'd done nothing, but when the police come first off, thundering at the door and callin' for Jerry Bowker, I was glad that Katie told them there was no one here of that name. She didn't know any different, for every one calls him Pico——"

"Yes. He's a circus clown, isn't he?" McCarty asked, while Dennis gave a sudden snort.

"He is, and although I don't cater to that trade, as a rule, I'd rather have him here than many a headliner that kicked as if they was at the Waldorf, and skipped out at night leaving a trunk nailed to the floor! I don't know what he can tell you, for he kept early, regular hours, and no bad company, and he is not the kind to get himself mixed up with crooks."

LIVER TROUBLE and HEARTBURN CURED BY MILLBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

When the liver is torpid and inflamed it cannot furnish bile to the bowels, causing them to become bound and costive. The symptoms are a feeling of fullness or weight in the right side, and shooting pains in the same region, pains between the shoulders, yellowness of the skin and eyes, floating specks before the eyes, coated tongue, bad taste in the morning, heartburn, water brash, etc.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills gently unlock the secretions, clear away all effete and waste matter from the system, and give tone and vitality to the whole intestinal track, and are by far the safest and quickest remedy for all diseases or disorders of the liver.

Mrs. A. Cummings, Manchester, Ont., writes: "I have used Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills some time, and can faithfully recommend them to anyone suffering from heartburn and liver trouble. I tried a great many other remedies but they only relieved me for a time. I believe Laxa-Liver Pills to be a valuable remedy for all sufferers from liver troubles."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Man and His Dog

By Julia Nance

Charing Thornton was not an easily satisfied young man and the workmen employed by him to repair and put in order the beautiful old country place left him by a rich aunt labored for fully six months before he was satisfied with the results. But today the last carpenter had gone to his home in the village, and Thornton with pipe in mouth and hands in his pockets had strolled slowly over the lawn, viewing the gables from all points—and he pronounced the work good.

"It took time and thought," he remarked aloud to the clean-limbed, big-eyed mastif Nero, his constant companion, "but it paid, old chap. The old place hasn't looked so well for generations. I'll wager, and the result justifies all the time and money spent. Don't you think so?"

The dog wagged his tail and looked up into his master's face as if to acquiesce in both statements, and the young man, with a final appreciative glance at the great mansion half buried among the trees, led the way down a winding little bridle path to the river that ran about the foot of the grounds.

"I ought to remember where that swimming hole is," he continued. "Don't you recollect how we used to spend the whole afternoons in the water, Nero? Or was it your father who played with me when I was a boy here? Time flies so fast that I cannot separate one generation of dogs from another," and he laughed as he patted the dog's smooth flank. Another turn in the pathway brought them within sight of a quiet little pool in the winding river and Thornton struck his thigh appreciatively.

"Here it is, by Jove!" he cried, "not a thing changed. The same smooth rock where we used to undress—and, by the powers above, some one is taking a dip now, for there are his clothes!"

The young man's gray eyes had caught sight of a small pile of clothing resting just where he had dropped his own, many a time, years before. Before the two had taken another step, the sound of steady, gentle splashing came to their ears, and a moment later a curly yellow head appeared from around a slight bend in the river, while the gleam of two white, well-shaped arms showed through the water. A cheery, girlish face looked at Thornton for a moment, and then the little swimmer's expression changed, and with a cry of surprise, she turned and started quickly for her hiding place.

But before Thornton could utter a cry of warning to the child, the treacherous whirlpool, which he knew only too well, had caught her and drawn her beneath the surface. Thornton sprang to the edge of the stream and threw off his coat. He hesitated a second to make sure that the child was being taken away from shore, and then plunged in. Nero, thinking it some new game, followed quickly and master and dog swam swiftly to the spot where the child had disappeared. But before Thornton reached it, the great dog had realised the seriousness of the affair, and as the girl's head, with the pale face, and the big eyes closed, came to the surface again, the intelligent dog swept past Thornton and thrust his nose under the white arm nearest him. Then he turned and made his way back to shore, the half unconscious child clinging to his great neck. Thornton, too astonished to speak, followed as fast as he might, and lifted her out of the water as Nero reached the shallows. She did not speak or move, and Thornton, who had had experience in such matters before, caught up his coat, wrapped it about her, and began to shake her gently. Presently the big blue eyes opened languidly, and the little lungs, relieved of the water, began to breathe again.

"You are safe now," said Thornton, reassuringly. "We are going to put you to bed, between some warm blankets and—"

He stopped, for there in the pathway above them stood a girl whose fresh, pure beauty fairly took his own breath away.

"What has happened?" she cried, catching sight of the child in Thornton's arms. "Is she hurt? Oh, darling, what have you been doing?" and she ran forward, Thornton motioned her back gently. "She was in the water," he said, "and we frightened her. She went under, and we got her out. She's safe now. If you will kindly bring her frock and things I will carry her. She is far too weak to walk, and too heavy for you."

The girl, whose face was prettier than ever with its sudden flush of excitement, caught one of the cold little hands in hers and covered it with kisses. "Oh, Margery," she cried, "and you promised not to go in while sister was gone. How fortunate this gentleman was here, dear! I thank you more than I can say," she added, turning to him.

"It was nothing," said Thornton, "I really did not do it—"

But the girl stopped him as she picked up the little frock and shoes and stockings. "It was a great deal," she said, "and my mother and I will hope to repay you in part, some time."

"Meanwhile," said Thornton, noting that his little charge was growing faint again, "if you will lead the way we will get Margery to bed and give her something warm."

The girl colored again at the implied rebuke and walked quickly ahead. "We are stopping for the summer at the inn," she said. "My mother is an invalid, and Margery and I came for a walk. But she is such a little lover of nature and the water, especially—"

"A healthful passion at most times," said Thornton, smiling both at her apology and the impression the three were making on the people whom they were meeting on the highway now, "but sometimes dangerous, Miss—Miss—"

"Roberts," said the girl.

"Thank you. I am Charing Thornton of the old place up there. Now if you will go ahead and get a bed ready for our little mermaid, without disturbing your mother, I will slip in quietly and turn her over to you."

Half an hour later Thornton came down to the public room of the inn, where the keeper was awaiting him. "The child is doing nicely, Higgins," said the master of the Gables, as he tried vainly to light a match on his still damp knickerbockers. "I am going home to get some dry clothes myself. I will drop in again this evening, and meanwhile anything that Mrs. Roberts and her children want be sure you get them promptly. They are old friends of my family," he went on unblushingly, "and I expect them to have the best."

"Aye, sir, that they shall have," said the pleased innkeeper, as his fingers closed over the offered coin.

True to his promise, Thornton came later in the evening, and before his little visit was over felt as if he had known the Roberts', as he told Higgins, many years. But whenever he had tried to disclaim any credit for the rescue of Margery, who had taken a violent liking to him as soon as he appeared in the room, and tried to tell them the truth, both Isabel and Mrs. Roberts laughingly stopped him, declaring that all heroes were modest and that he was no exception. So he gave it up, albeit guiltily remembering that some time he must explain it all.

When he reached home again after a dreamy stroll from the inn, in which he had built all manner of strange and new aircastles, Nero met him at the door. His master laughed and he shook the great head gently to and fro. "I have accepted the mantle that is yours by right, old fellow," he said, "and I hadn't the courage to disclaim the praise that was not mine. But tomorrow—"

Yet when tomorrow came the opportunity did not, although some trivial errand led Thornton past the inn, of course, necessitated his stepping in to inquire after the little invalid. She came running to him herself, for answer, and sprang into his arms, nestling her face close to him. "I am all well again," she cried breathlessly, "and I love you and so does mamma!" Thornton felt a strange wave of real happiness rush over him at the child's artless words, and he answered softly, "And I love you, Margery."

Weeks passed. Thornton's visits became remarkably regular. Each day brought its errand in the village, and one evening he accepted their invitation to dinner. A few days later he prevailed upon them to make his evening meal at the Gables less lonely, and both Margery and Isabel went into delighted and delightful raptures over the beautiful old place, while Thornton talked with Mrs. Roberts, both learning much of each other, and making mutual acquaintances and friends in the distant city. But Thornton's eyes strayed often to where the graceful girl and the pretty child walked or sat, and some of his replies were not strictly answers to the questions. Mrs. Roberts asked: for when Cupid makes up his mind to do a bit of archery practice, he does not waste time. And so, before the summer was two months old, Charing Thornton, deep in the net of love, laid his heart at Isabel's feet.

But before he did so, he told her the whole truth of Margery's rescue, as he had often tried to tell before. "And now," he said, when he had finished, "if you can love a man who takes the credit for something he did not do—even if he does take it only from his dog—and still believe him worthy of a woman, Isabel you will make me the happiest man alive."

"I can for I have cared, for a long time, dear," she said. "And if I love you, I must love old Nero, too, don't you know?" she smilingly added.

Six months later, the Gables had a mistress, Charing Thornton the prettiest and happiest little wife in three counties, and Nero a loving companion in the person of Margery, over whom he watched all day, as they romped or walked together, with a loving dignity befitting the animal who had saved a life and helped his master win a woman's love.

Making Tears.

Tears are not made only when we cry. They seem to come only when you cry, because it is then that they spill over. A little part of you is making tears all the time, and your eyes are constantly washing themselves in them. You have often noticed how you wink every few seconds, says the Book of Wonders. You have often tried to keep from winking—to see how long you could keep from winking. Your eyes always feel very dry just before you have to let them wink. That shows they needed washing in tears.

CHAPTER IX.

I had taken Annie with me because of my arm. I was sure that if I crippled myself further George would be angry. It was luncheon time before we finished. Then just as we left the store who should I see but Madge Loring.

After asking about my arm, etc., she mentioned something about her shopping having made her late to a luncheon at an exclusive cafe. I offered to take her in the car, and she gladly accepted. "What in the world have you been buying? A book store?" she asked as the clerk brought out an immense parcel and put it in the car as I had ordered. I didn't intend to waste any time.

"Not quite." I answered gayly. "But there are so many things I do not understand about social etiquette that I bought every book I could find on the subject. George"—I started to say how wise he was etc., then remembered that he had cautioned me not to talk of him, and hesitated, blushing furiously.

"Oh, he's a stickler for form all right!" Mrs. Loring returned quietly enough, but her eyes fairly danced with merriment. Then all suddenly she threw herself back in the car and laughed until the tears rolled down her cheeks.

"Oh, it is so funny, you naive child! Oh, what will George say do that?" and again peal after peal of laughter rang out, while Annie looked in amazement from my indignant, red face to the woman who was finding what I had told her so amusing.

Then suddenly she stopped, and waved to a young man we were passing.

MERTON GRAY APPEARS.

"Do you mind if we stop a moment? I want to speak to Merton Gray."

I signalled the chauffeur to stop. And she swung the door open as a man about twenty-five years old with a fine, intelligent face halted in his walk.

"Oh, Mr. Gray! you are just the man I want to see! I am giving a dinner a week from to-night. Shall you be at liberty?" Oh, pardon me, I forgot that you weren't acquainted. Mrs. Howard, let me present Mr. Merton Gray, an artist and a most charming man."

Mr. Gray lifted his eyes to mine and in them I saw admiration and respect. I was so pleased that I held out my hand and said cordially:

"I am very glad to meet both the man and the artist. That is, if you will excuse my left hand," I added. "I have had a slight accident and cannot use the right one."

"Nothing serious I hope?" and I was pleased to notice real concern in his dark expressive eyes.

"Oh, no! just a cut on my arm," I replied.

"Now will you tell me if you can be my guest?" Mrs. Loring said in a tone that I thought showed annoyance. But I immediately dismissed the idea as foolish, until she said, looking at her watch: "I am late now for an engagement."

Mr. ray consulted a small engagement book.

"Yes, I am free for that night."

"Oh, you popular man! we women spoil you don't we?" and she tapped him lightly on the arm. "By the way you will see Mrs. Howard again — that is, unless she has another accident. Her husband has accepted my invitation."

A peculiar look flashed into his dark eyes as they rested upon me. I felt myself blushing furiously. He, as well as I, had understood that I had not been consulted—that my husband had accepted the dinner invitation without my even knowing we had been invited.

"He's a dear!" Mrs. Loring said. "You'll like him I am sure. He is younger than most of George's friends, and a very talented fellow. But so hard to get hold of. I believe he could dine out every single night in the week if he so desried."

IMMEDIATE LIKING.

"He looks very nice; not a bit like some famous person," I declared.

"You just wait until I tell him that!" she declared, again laughing.

"Oh, you wouldn't!" I exclaimed, "I'd be so mortified."

"Indeed I shall! It is too good to keep."

"Is your dinner to be a large affair?" I asked timidly.

"No, I hate big affairs! It shall have only twelve people."

"I am glad, I can't seem to become accustomed to the crowded restaurants, and the noise." I returned.

"Think of comparing my house to a restaurant!" and once more she laughed heartily.

"Oh, I didn't mean that! But I haven't been to a private dinner since I have been married and I thought perhaps it was to be a large one."

Just then we drew up to the curb before the restaurant. She jumped out, thanked me for bringing her, then looked around rather anxiously, I thought. But I was too much engaged looking at a man whom I could just see through the large swing doors. I wished he would turn around. His back looked very much like George's.

To-morrow—Mixed Reflections.

Strongest Liniment In 100 Years Best For Either Man Or Beast

Nothing For Family Use Can Compare With It

RUB ON NERVILINE

When you have been exposed to wet and cold and your muscles are full of pain, nerves are jumping with neuralgia, then you should have ready at hand a bottle of Nerviline. It robs pain of its terrors, gives relief to all suffering, brings ease and comfort wherever used.

No care or expense has been spared to secure for Nerviline the purest and best materials. It is prepared with a single aim: to restore the sick to health. This cannot be said of the preparation that an unscrupulous dealer may ask you to accept instead of Nerviline, so we warn you it is the extra profit made on inferior goods that tempts the substitutor. Of him beware.

Get Nerviline when you ask for it, then you are sure of a remedy that will cure all aches, strains, swellings, and the pains of rheumatism, neuralgia and lumbago.

In the last hundred years no liniment has been produced that can compare with Nerviline in strength in penetrating power, or in curative ability.

For nearly forty years it has been Canada's household remedy, and mothers will do well to follow the advice of Mrs. Jessie Beggins, of Stella P. O., Ont., who says:

"Very frequently there are ailments in the family that can be cut short if Nerviline is handy. When my children come in from play, with a cough or a bad cold, I rub them well with Nerviline, and they are well almost at once. Nerviline is fine for earache, toothache, chest colds, lumbago, stiffness, rheumatism or neuralgia. In fact there is scarcely a pain or ache in man or beast it won't cure quickly.

The large 25c family size bottle is very economical; at all dealers, or the Catarrhosone Co., Kingston, Canada.

Young's Point Items Of Interest

YOUNG'S POINT, March 6.— Mrs. W. E. Brooks is spending a few days this week visiting Mr. A. G. Young, King street, Peterborough.

Mr. John Carroll of Cobourg, spent a few days last week in the village visiting his brother, Mr. Jas. Carroll.

Mr. Ed. Cane, of Ennismore, spent Saturday in the village visiting friends.

Master Jas. Hayes, of Peterborough, spent the week end visiting friends in Young's Point.

Mr. Jas. Carroll was in Lakefield on Saturday on a business errand.

Miss A. G. Dusk, formerly assistant teacher of the Young's Point Public school, has taken over the principalship of S. S. No. 8, and commenced duties last Friday, owing to the resignation of Mr. A. A. Smith. Mr. Smith has rendered invaluable service as a capable, efficient teacher for a long period.

Mr. and Mrs. Melville Crowe, of Dummer, spent Sunday in Young's Point, the guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Reid.

Mr. Victor Young spent Saturday in Lakefield.

A friendly game of hockey was played at Young's Point on Saturday last at 2.30 p.m. between the Lakefield High school team and the Young's Point septette. The ice on the open-air rink was in poor condition owing to the cold weather, which greatly hampered effective playing by the teams. The visitors were slightly lighter but possessed more speed. The final score was 7-2 in favour of the visitors. The return game will be played at the Lakefield rink on Thursday, March 7; if weather conditions are favourable.

Rev. J. Robbins, rector of St. Aidan's church, Young's Point, has returned home after spending a few days last week in Toronto on a business trip.

Mrs. Edward Young and Miss Clara spent Saturday in Peterborough.

Mrs. R. Charlton spent the week end visiting friends in the village.

Pte. Robert Godfrey, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, who is home on furlough for a short time, spent Sunday in the village renewing old acquaintances.

Miss Agnes Young returned home last Saturday after spending a few days visiting friends in Toronto.

Miss Nellie McAuley of Peterborough, has returned home after spending a few days, the guest of her sister, Mrs. F. M. Young.

Had Bronchitis FOR THREE YEARS COULD GET NO RELIEF

Bronchitis is generally the result of a cold caused by exposure to wet and inclement weather. It begins with a tightness across the chest, difficulty in breathing, and a wheezing sound comes from the lungs. There is also a raising of phlegm from the lungs, especially in the morning. This is at first white, but later becomes of a greenish or yellowish color, and is occasionally streaked with blood.

On the first sign of bronchitis you should check it immediately by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and thereby prevent it becoming chronic and perhaps turning into some more serious lung trouble.

Mr. Theodore P. Beers, Upper Main River, N.B., writes: "I was troubled with bronchitis for three years, and could get no relief. I was always worse when I got wet. I tried lots of different medicines, but none did me any good until a friend told me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I got three bottles and before I had them half used I was better.

"My mother is now using it for asthma. It is a great medicine and we never want to be without it.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c; manufactured only by the T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Mr. William Glass, of Bridgenorth, was the guest of friends in town during the past week.

The milliners for the two department stores have arrived in town, which reminds us that spring is coming and we will soon don our Easter bonnets.

The latest report of Mr. Henry Colwell, now in Lindsay hospital, is that gangerene has set in and one limb will have to be amputated as soon as he is strong enough to stand the operation.

Several of our citizens installed the Hydro lighting system into their stores last week and more are preparing to do so.

CREAM FOR CATARRH OPENS UP NOSTRILS

Tells How To Get Quick Relief from Head-Colds. It's Splendid!

In one minute your clogged nostrils will open, the air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh will be gone.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh—Relief comes so quickly.

Some of the new skirts have shawl draped tunics.

Flour, meal, sugar, salt and spices should be sifted before measuring.

There is more starch in wheat than in any other food that we eat.

A pair of scissors will be found an endless convenience in the kitchen.

NO TRICK TO LIFT A CORN RIGHT OUT

Says There Is No Excuse for Cutting Corns and Inviting Lockjaw.

Sore corns, hard corns, soft corns or any kind of a corn can harmlessly be lifted right out with the fingers if you will apply directly upon the corn a few drops of freezone, says a Cincinnati authority.

It is claimed that at small cost one can get a quarter of an ounce of freezone at any drug store, which is sufficient to rid ones feet of every corn or callus without pain or soreness or the danger of infection.

This simple drug, while sticky, dries the moment it is applied and does not inflame or even irritate the surrounding tissue.

This announcement will interest many women here, for it is said that the present high-heel footwear is putting corns on practically every woman's feet.

Need More Houses.

Vice Consul Hamilton C. Claiborne, Bradford, England, says:

The Local Government Board, anticipating the era of reconstruction that must follow the war, are making an inquiry of local authorities throughout the country as to the housing needs. The Bradford health committee has stated that the city's needs after the war will be at least 10,000 houses.

The great demand for houses and the recent stagnation of building are believed to foreshadow a great demand for all kinds of building material at the conclusion of hostilities.

Vice Consul Thomas H. Bevan, Glasgow, says: The royal commission of Scottish housing has just published its report on present housing conditions of the Glasgow district.

The report shows that the existing housing accommodation in the city, as regards houses of four apartments and under, amount to 213,863; that the vacant houses number 2,071, the overcrowded or sublet houses 2,555 uninhabited houses 5,000, and houses 2,555, uninhabited houses 5,000, and houses defective but remediable 5,000. Additional houses to the number of 46,700 are required at the present time and at least 5,000 to each succeeding year.

The view of the local authorities is that private enterprise, unaided, can not be expected to provide houses for the working classes at the close of the war. It has been reliably reported that the Government has already approved a plan to commence the construction of a large number of houses immediately after the conclusion of the war. The houses to be constructed are of the tenement class, each containing from eight to twelve small flats.

ADAMS BLACK JACK

Everybody likes chewing gum and there is one gum that people seem to prefer to all others—Adams Black Jack. A stick a day keeps indigestion away.

ADAMS

Pure Chewing Gum

A Joker.

It is said that a certain well known portrait painter has almost as great a reputation for joking as for taking excellent likenesses. One evening he was speaking of a beautiful young girl whose portrait he had just finished.

"Her features are exquisitely moulded. I have heard," said a lady who had seen neither the portrait nor its original.

"Beautiful forehead and eyes," returned the artist concisely, "handsome nose, fine chin, but mouth like an elephant's."

"Mouth like an elephant's!" echoed the lady, in dismay. "What a terrible misfortune. Do you mean that it is so enormous, or what?"

"Only that it is filled with superb ivory," returned the artist with his usual gravity.

A Never Failing Way To Banish Ugly Hairs

(Aids to Beauty.)

No woman is immune to superfluous growths, and because these are likely to appear at any time, it is advisable to always have some delatone powder handy to use when the occasion arises. A paste is made with some of the powder and water and spread upon the hairy surface; in about 2 minutes this is carefully removed and the skin washed. You will then find that your skin is entirely free from hair or fuzz. Be sure, however, to get real delatone.

MILLBROOK NEWS

MILLBROOK, March 6.—The contest on the location of the Books of the Old Testament was a splendid success. After a half-hour's cross-questioning the score stood three points in favour of the Reds. Calculating that the questions went the rounds at least a dozen times, that means a score of 102-99, out of a possible 100 points. Thirty seconds was the time set for the answers to be given, but at the last we did one round on a 15-second time limit. We feel that all those who took part deserve great praise. What about the rest of the Leaguers?

"Straight from the bow this mighty truth is driven—They fail and they alone who have not striven."

We are going to go right on and prepare for a similar contest on the location of the Books of the New Testament, to be held probably on the 25th of March. Get into line and "do your bit."

Next Monday night, March 11th, the Leaguers are putting on a debate on the following subject: "Resolved that Japan offers better opportunities for missionary effort than China." The affirmative will be upheld by Mr. Basil Richards and Miss May Byam, and the negative by Mr. Bruce Dawson and Miss Mary Higgs.

A silver collection will be received to help along the missionary funds of the League.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Pritchard were visitors to Millbrook on Tuesday.

We notice in the list of returned soldiers the name of A. Harness, son of Mrs. J. W. Harness of Exeter. This is the second son of Mrs. Harness who has been invalided home and another son is overseas. Mrs Harness was formerly Miss Lizzie of Millbrook.

The people of Millbrook and Cavan will have the pleasure of hearing Rev. Prof. Greaves, M. A., Professor of Expression in Victoria University, Toronto, in the Methodist Church, Millbrook, on Friday, March 15th, at 8 p.m., when he will give his famous lecture entitled "The Art of Reading Aloud." Millbrook Male Quartette, S. S. Orchestra and other local talent will assist in the entertainment.

Bandsmen Arthur Lock has returned from overseas. He was stricken with Bronchitis in England which prevented him going to France. His father died while he was overseas. Mrs. Lock and children accompanied Pte. Lock on his visit to Millbrook to see old friends on Tuesday.

SHE DARKENED HER GRAY HAIR

Well Known Lady Tells How She Darkened Her Gray Hair By a Simple Home Made Remedy.

Mrs. E. H. Boots, a well known resident of Buchanan County, Ia., who darkened her gray hair by a simple home-made remedy made the following statement:

"Any lady or gentlman can darken their gray or faded hair, and make it soft and glossy with this simple recipe, which they can mix at home. To half a pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, one small box of Orlex Compound and 1-4 ounce of glycerine. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair every other day until the gray hair is darkened sufficiently. It does not colour the scalp; is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off. It will make a gray-haired person look 10 to 20 years younger."

Conspiracy To Overthrow The Bolsheviki Government Discovered

Six Students Are Shot As a Result--Russian Government Moving Its Valuables From the Capital---Defensive Triumvirate Has Been Formed--British Repulse Raids at Many Points on the Western Front.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(By Joseph Shaplen.)
(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PETROGRAD, March 7. — The Moscow Soviet voted overwhelmingly to ratify the peace treaty with Germany, following a visit from Zinovieff and others. This is accepted as indicating that Premier Lenine's "steam roller" may succeed. This is not the pan-Soviet Council of Workmen, Peasants, Soldiers and Cossacks, called to meet in Moscow March 12, to pass on the ratification of the treaty.

Both the Bolsheviki and anti-Bolsheviki newspapers regard Hertling,s, Balfour's and Sonnino's latest speeches as an indication of a plan by the western belligerents to conclude an improved peace at Russia's expense.

Germans shot and hanged 200 Russian citizens at Yurieff without mercy, refugees from Esthonia reported to the Smolny Institute to-day. Women's and childrens bodies were thrown in the river they said. Foreign Minister Trotsky was asked to notify the German and Esthonian officials that the continuation of the German outrages would result in the execution of 160 barons and land-owners, held as hostages near Pskoff.

A conspiracy of students and officers to overthrow the Bolsheviki government resulted in a raid on a house near the winter palace. Six students were shot.

German troops, after aiding the Rada Government forces in the occupation of Kieff, moved towards Zhitomir, 100 miles west of Kieff, in Volhynia.

General Petleur led an Ukrainian detachment south to cut off the Russians from the Central Provinces. At Konotop, 150 miles northeast of Kieff, in the Province of Chernigoff, heavy forces of revolutionary troops defeated Petleur and compelled him to retreat. The Germans did not participate in this action.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, March 7.—Spring-like sunshine and breezes are aiding in drying the sea of mud along the British west front to-day. Air fighting has been resumed and great raids continue, though they have lessened in the past forty-eight hours. The artilleries are busy. The situation is generally unchanged.

(By Joseph Shaplen.)
(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PETROGRAD, March 5.—American Ambassador Francis wiring from Vologda to the Norwegian envoy here urged the latter to afford every protection to the Americans in Petrograd.

Ambassador Francis and his staff have left Vologda for Perm (capital of the province of that name, 65 miles east of Vologda and less than 300 miles from the Siberian border).

Despite the signing of peace with Germany the Russian government is removing its valuables from the capital. The Foreign Office is moving to Nijni Novgorod (capital of the province of that name, 375 miles east of Moscow). Women, children, aged persons and invalids continue their exodus. Commissaries Bonchbrujevitch, Schutko and Proschian have been named a defensive triumvirate.

The newspaper Pravda, supporting Premier Lenine, says: "Junkerism is flaunting its reactionary banner with the obvious design of destroying the revolution and restoring the Bourgeoise regime. A Russian counter offensive now would afford the junkers an excuse for completing the destruction of the revolution.

"Peace is unfortunate, but does not matter, as the struggle against imperialism continues under changed forms."

The Novayazeisn, the international Socialist organ, demands a holy war.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

LONDON, March 7.—A raid attempted by the enemy last night east of Epehy under cover of heavy artillery barrage, was completely repulsed, the War Office reports.

Other hostile raiding parties which endeavoured to reach our lines southeast of Bois Grenier and east of Poelcapelle, were equally unsuccessful.

The enemy's artillery has been active in the Scarpe Valley, west of Lens and east of Ypres, and shortly before dawn developed considerable activity in the Neuve Chapelle sector.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

PARIS, March 7. — Wednesday's official statement says: "Rather heavy artillery fighting occurred in the regions of Cormicy and Rheims. Last night the Germans made raids against our trenches at Avocourt Wood and northwest of Hill 344, Verdun front. Our fire everywhere checked the assailants, and prisoners, including an officer remained in our hands. Our lines were bombarded intermittently to-day in the region of Avocourt and north of Douavmont. At times there was heavy artillery firing at various points in Lorraine and Alsace. On Tuesday three German airplanes were brought down by our pilots and two by the fire of our anti-aircraft guns.

Macedonian Front—There was reciprocal artillery activity west of Lake Doiran, in the Cerna Bend and north of Monastir.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

LONDON, March 7. — Germans have captured Jamburg east of Narva while the Turco-German offensive is continuing beyond Trebizond, says a Russian official agency despatch received here to-day. This action, adds the statement, is despite the official announcement by the German high command that hostilities against Russia have ceased.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

LONDON, Wednesday (delayed)—(Official)—After two days of wind and rain the weather cleared slightly on the afternoon of Tuesday. Bombs were dropped on railroad sidings northeast of Lille. In air fighting two hostile machines were downed and one was driven down out of control. One of our machines is missing. After dark the Ingelmunster railway station and an airdrome northeast of St. Quentin were heavily bombed. All our machines returned.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 7.—The German advance eastward into Russia stopped early Tuesday according to an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Petrograd dated Wednesday, but was resumed during the night on several sectors in order to allow the Germans to reach and consolidate a line between Jamburg and Gdoff, east of Lake Peipus and south of Narva. It is reported in Petrograd that banks have been reopened, property of landlords restored, and other conditions appoaching the old regime revived in the towns occupied by the Germans.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON (Official), March 7. — The enemy's artillery has been more active than usual south of St. Quentin and in the neighbourhood of Bois Grenier. Some activity was also shown west of Cambrai and southeast and northeast of Ypres.

Senatorships To Be Filled

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA, March 7.—Two Senatorships which have been vacant in Ontario since the death of Sir Mackenzie Bowell and Dr. f. Sproule will be filled before Parliament reassembles. John Webster, who retired from the field in Brockville and Leeds in favour of Sir Thomas White, is practically certain to be one of the new appointees. Two names mentioned for the other are Col. Mulholland, who retired from the field to make a place for Hon. N. W. Rowell at the last election, and Lieut. William Smyth, former M.P. for East Algoma, who has been overseas for some time past. There are still two Senatorial vacancies in the west that will be filled.

RUSSIANS ARE CONSCRIPTED FOR THE GERMAN ARMY

A Corps is Being Formed Under German Commanders for use on the French Front, Refugees Declare.

THREATENED WITH DEATH

(By Joseph Shaplen.)
(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PETROGRAD, March 7. — Refugees arriving from cities newly occupied by German forces declare the Germans are forming a corps of Russion conscripts under German commanders which will be sent to the French front. The Russians are threatened with execution if they refuse to join the corps.

Wrist Watch From Street Car Men To Mr. D. A. Donaghue

The members of the Street Railway Union and of the office staff of the company, last night presented Mr. D. A. Donoghue with a wrist watch and an address as a farewell gift, before his departure for service overseas. The watch was an excellent one, and the address was as follows:

Dear Brother: On the eve of your departure from Peterboro to go overseas in the service of the King and country, the members of Division No. 622 and fellow employees of Peterboro Street Railway, ask you to accept this wrist watch as a small token of our good wishes for your future.

We hope that you may be spared to wear it for many years, and that it may be a "timely" reminder when across the seas, of the many "runs" we have spent together. We hope before very long to welcome you back in our midst, and see you once more pull into the car barns and take your place at the "front" end of a trolley car.

We do not need to tell you to be on your "watch," as you were always careful and industrious, ready to help in any way.

Wishing you God speed and a safe return.

Yours sincerely,

Heatless Day Order Likely To Be Rescinded

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA, March 7.—That there will be no more heatless days this winter in theatres, movies and billiard or pool rooms is practically certain. A recommendation recalling the order has gone to the Governor-in-Council and is almost certain to be acted upon. The new order, however, has not yet been passed.

BANK CLEARINGS FOR THE WEEK

Clearings for the week ending Mar. 7th, 1918: $747,247.
Same week last month, $686,588.
Same week last year, $707,247.

AWAITING NEXT MOVE

United States Authorities Fear That Japanese Action May Cause the Russians to Side in With Lenine's Policy

MIGHT FIGHT ALLIES

Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterboro Examiner.

Washington, March 7. (By Carl D. Groat.) America having let Japan know her position on Japanese intervention in Siberia, the officials awaited to-day Japan's next move. There was no way of knowing what the Japanese propose to do. The American explanation of the attitude of the United States, admits of further discussion by Japan, and it is fully possible that she will make a statement as to the extent of the proposed operations.

Every effort is being made to let Russia know that the United States does not countenance intervention in the Slav nation east or west. Lenine's reported treachery to his country and his attempt to deliver it to Germany, offers perhaps the potent reason against Japanese intervention at this time. Authorities fear that the Russians, remembering the last blow from the east, would easily side in with Lenine's policy, join the German army, fight the Japanese; and also be used for fighting the other Allies.

The ousting of Lenine is anticipated. That another Russian government will arise is deemed certain, and this government may attempt to upset the Russo-German peace pact, even though the task is enormous.

VETERANS GRATEFUL

Express Thanks to All Who Helped To Make Last Night's Benefit Game a Success

Editor of the Examiner:

On behalf of the Peterboro Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association, may I be allowed to thank those who were instrumental in arranging last night's benefit hockey game, the result of which was a substantial sum for our new club room fund.

Our members feel most grateful to all who helped and we wish to express our thanks to the management of the Peterboro Junior O.H.A. Club, the Junior players and the old boys, to Mr. J. Coughlin, for refereeing the game, to the management of George street church team for the loan of the sweaters, and to Mr. Ed. Cronk, and the members of the rink band, for their kindness in supplying music free of charge, and the public for their patronage.

Yours faithfully,
SIDNEY WHATLEY,
Secretary, Peterboro Branch Great War Veterans' Association.

Another Remand For Bailey

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, Ont., March 7.—Captain George T. Bailey, C.A.M.C., who created a storm at the recent Prohibition Convention here with his statement about the insolitiety of soldiers in the trenches, was again remanded, until March 13th, on bail of $2,000, furnished by his father, John Bailey, Walkerville, Ont.

Accompanied by his father and bondsman, John Bailey, of Walkerville, and by Rev. Tennyson Smith, of Toronto, Captain Bailey appeared in police court to-day after his week's remand to answer to the charge of having by word of mouth spread reports or made statements contrary to the provisions of the Military Service Act. His counsel, W. K. Murphy, Jr., pleaded not guilty and asked for another week's remand which was promptly granted. The entire proceedings did not occupy five minutes. The defendant showed but little signs of nervousness.

"RAILWAY WIZARDS ARE KNIGHTED FOR THE BURDEN THEY HAVE PLACED ON THE COUNTRY"

4,881 CASES SHIPPED IN LAST THREE MONTHS

Miss H. S. Peck, of the Peterborough Progressive Club, has received the following cablegram from Capt. Mary Plummer, of the Canadian Field Comforts Commission, indicating the splendid work that is being carried on:

"Work of Canadian Field Comforts Commission prospering. Great pressure at Christmas time now lessened, but big shipments still coming in including tobacco from Montreal, a splendid consignment of three thousand shirts from Winnipeg, and sixty thousand gift parcels from the Ontario Government just received. Commission have shipped four thousand eight hundred and eighty-one cases to France in the last three months. Baseball request now being received from France and some good baseball equipment would be more than welcome.

Speakers at Meeting of British Chamber of Shipping State That Great Britain Faces a Grave Situation

A NOTE OF WARNING

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, March 7.—Speaking at a meeting of the Chamber of Shipping, Sir John Ellerman and Baron Inchcape both sounded a note of warning that despite the reassurances of Sir Eric Geddes, Britain's vessel losses were not equalled by the new ships turned out. Britain faces a grave situation, they said. The demanded that more information about shipping losses be given to the British people.

TRINITY CHURCH AUXILIARY WORKERS

The following articles have been completed during the month by the Trinity Church auxiliary of the Red Cross Society of which Mrs. Joseph Walsh is President: 36 kitbags, 7 hot water bottle covers, 26 dozen towels, 32 suits of pyuamas, 60 grey shirts, 20 body damages, 12 personal property bags, 98 sheets, 7 pillow covers, and 29 pairs of socks.

ANOTHER CADET IS KILLED AT FORT WORTH

Canadian Press Despatch:

FORT WORTH, Texas, March 7. — Burton Hurlburt, Royal Flying Corps cadet from Prescott, was killed this morning when he tried to make a landing. Instructor in the back escaped uninjured. Hurlburt was the thirty-sixth cadet killed here.

BOULAY ASKS FOR EXEMPTION

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

MONTREAL, March 7.—Michael Boulay, well-known Socialist worker, appeared before Mr. Justice Lane sitting as Military Appeal Court Judge, and pleaded for exemption from service on the ground that his operations as a labour organizer were in the national interests, while he was possessed, he argued "of unusual oratorical ability." Boulay was the defeated candidate in Jacques Cartier at the recent Federal elections.

A QUIET SEND-OFF FOR LOCAL SOLDIERS OFF TO KINGSTON

Peterboro' Detachment of Eastern Ontario Battalion Left This Morning — Establishment Has Been Completely Disbanded

ARMOURIES DESERTED

The local detachment of the 1st Depot Battalion, Eastern Ontario Regiment, left on the morning G.T.R. train to-day for Kingston, where their training will be carried on. The local Armouries are practically deserted to-day, the Army Service Corps detachment and dental clinic being all that is left, and they will move as soon as orders are received.

Major Watt was in charge of the detachment leaving this morning. All the officers and instructors have gone, as well as the cook staff and other details, the local establishment being completely done away with.

There was no martial music, and the boys got a quiet send-off, although a number of their friends were on hand, and there were some tearful farewells.

Reception For Dr. And Mrs. Jas. Waters

Mr. and Mrs. John Allan opened their home, Brock street, to the public, yesterday afternoon when a reception was given to meet Dr. and Mrs. James Waters of India, who are at present visiting Dr. and Mrs. Moir. At the reception, which was given on strictly war-time lines, a most delightful programme substituted for the customary refreshments. This programme included solos by Mrs. Russell Wood, sung in French; Mrs. P. A. Ferguson, Miss Hinchcliffe, Mr. Douglas Carlisle, and recitations by Miss Winnifred Parker and Miss Harvey. Dr. Waters gave a most interesting address on his life in India, in which he told of the great influence for keeping peace amongst the natives since the missionaries have been there and of the slow but sure manner in which the old customs and caste are disappearing. He said he expected in the near future that the ladies will discard their native costumes for the western styles.

At the conclusion of the reception Dr. and Mrs. Waters and their son, Moir, sang a solo in Hindustan, in Indian costume.

The reception was attended by about 150. Miss Dickson presided

HAWK DROPPED A PIGEON IN BACK GARDEN

A few days ago a large hawk dropped a pigeon in the garden of Mr. William Calvert, number two McClennan street. A ring on the leg of the pigeon bore the following initials and number: K.H.A., No. 527, 1915. The hawk was evidently carrying the victim away when he dropped it as he was passing over the garden.

Sir Adam Beck Denounces the Creators of Railway Corporations —Too Much Duplication—Government Loans Used to Pay Dividends.

PETERBORO' RAILWAY

An eloquent plea for the government control and consolidation of the railways of Canada, exclusive of the Canadian Pacific was made at a representative meeting held last evening in the Collegiate Institute at which Sir Adam Beck was the chief speaker. The guardian of the Hydro-Electric interests of the province spoke for over two hours and in that time dealt with such present day problems as the nationalization of Canada's railways and the development of the Hydro power scheme in Eastern Ontario. When asked if the Hydro Power Commission of Ontario, present owners of the Peterborough Radial Railway, would consider the city's request for extensions to the present railway system, Sir Adam replied that he had asked Mr. G. W. Ferguson, local manager of the system, for a report, and when this was received something definite would be arrived at. Sir Adam said the Commission was prepared at any time to dispose of both the gas plant and the street railway to the city, but in the meantime war-time conditions made necessary the curtailment of any expenditures that could possibly be avoided.

Mayor Duncan's Remarks.

I am very pleased to welcome to Peterborough again the Hon. Sir Adam Beck, said Mayor Duncan. We have had a stand and urgent invitation to him for a year or over to come here and address a meeting, and he has not been able to accept the invitation until this evening. We know how pressed he is for time and we appreciate his coming here. There are a number of very important public questions that need settling just now, and that are related to the continued expansion and success of the use of public Hydro-Electric power. Everyone knows what a great success the Hydro-Electric Power Commission has made of the Hydro-Electric business. It has made light and power cheaper, so that the people generally may use it more freely and has taken it to places that did not have the benefit of it before. Of ccurse this has not been accomplished without hard work, the overcoming of strong opposition and the removal of obstacles. Interested persons and companies have tried to obstruct the growth of the use of Hydro power, and to place obstacles of every kind in its way. But the energy and enthusiasm of the chairman of the Commission, Sir Adam Beck, supported by his colleagues, has removed obstacles and overcome opposition and carried on its worw for the benefit of the people. At the present time there are several matters that should be dealt with by the Dominion Parliament. One is the control of the highways and streets by the municipalities that are responsible for them. This is necessary in order that the public utilities owned by the people should not be hampered by any outside Parliament or Legislature, giving private interests rights on the public highways. Another subject is the nationalization of railways and the electrification of the railways or of such portions of them and branch lines as may be electrified at this time. Sir Adam Beck will no doubt deal with these subjects this evening. We have also called Sir Adam's attention to some matters of more immediate local interest, and he may also be kind enough to refer to them. Before calling on Sir Adam Beck I will first ask Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., to speak.

Mr. Burnham's Address.

Mr. Burnham, who followed, said he was heartily in accord with the nationalization of all matters of general public convenience. The public is at liberty to manage and provide for its own needs and purposes. He spoke strongly in favour of backing up Sir Adam Beck, who, more than any other man, was enabling the public to develop and use to its great advantage its great asset of power.

DAYLIGHT SAVING.

The strongest possible argument in favour of the daylight saving movement is given by the report of the committee selected by the British Home Secretary to make an exhaustive inquiry into the working of the measure. Evidence was gathered in all quarters and from all classes and the conclusion was reached that from almost every point of view the change in time was a decided benefit. The daylight savings measure is known in England as the Summer Time Act, and the committee report concludes as follows:

Taking the evidence we have received as a whole, we can unhesitatingly say that the vast preponderance of opinion throughout Great Britain is enthusiastically in favour of summer time and of its renewal, not only as a war measure, but as a permanent institution.

As we have already pointed out, some difficulties have undoubtedly been experienced, but not to anything like the extent predicted by the critics of the scheme, and we have not heard of any that could not be overcome with good will and organization. Indeed, the experience of summer time in 1916 has converted many of its former opponents into hearty supporters. Moreover, as we have pointed out elsewhere, any of those who still hold the view that summer time may be prejudicial to their own interests admit that the general public advantages arising from it more than outweigh any inconveniences that may be caused in particular cases. In a few years we believe that what opposition still remains to summer time will have completely disappeared and that the whole nation will regard it as a wholly beneficent measure.

We recommend, therefore, that summer time should be reintroduced in 1917 and in subsequent years.

ANOTHER RECORD YEAR FOR SUN LIFE OF CANADA.

It is evident from the results obtained by the Sun Life of Canada for 1917, essential features of which appear elsewhere in this issue, that the big Montreal Company has quite kept up with its usual rate of progress.

The Sun again maintained its leadership among Canadian Life assurance companies in amount of new assurances issued, total assurances in force, assets, surplus and income. Assurances for $47,811,567 were issued and paid for in cash during the year, constituting a record for all Canadian companies to date and bringing Sun Life assurances in force to the total of over $311,800,000. Something of the phenomenal growth of the Company in recent years is indicated by the fact that assurances in force have more than trebled in the past twelve years.

Turning to the factors indicative of financial strength it is noted that assets now total over $90,000,000, an increase of over $7,000,000 for the year. The net surplus over all liabilities and capital now stands at the huge figure of $8,550,761. Cash income from premiums and investments totalled $19,288,997.

During the year the Company paid a total of $8,840,000 to its policyholders, bringing the payments to policyholders since organization to over $69,000,000.

Such a record reflects credit upon the directors and officers in charge of the Company's affairs, and should be a source of no small gratification to Sun Life policyholders.

The Company is now housed in its splendid new Head Office building on Dominion Square, Montreal, a structure in keeping with the size and solidity of the Sun Life, and one in which modern methods and equipment will facilitate the continued efficient administration of the Company's vast affairs.

M.P.'S AND THE MILITARY SERVICE ACT.

Mr. T. A. Hartt, M.P. for Charlotte, N.B., is apparently of opinion that the question of selecting men for military duty under the Conscription Act should not be left to the tribunals appointed for the purpose, but that it is one of the matters in which the members of Parliament have a right to interfere. Mr. Hartt has been taking a trip through his constituency. "In the course of his trip, which included two visits to St. Stephen," says the St. Andrew's Beacon, "Mr. Hartt heard complaints of exemption from Military Service being refused in cases where it should have been allowed, and he gave everyone an assurance that if any case of injustice is brought to his notice he will interest himself in the matter and see that justice is done, and this without any question of the political affiliations of the person making complaint." Mr. Hartt's resolve that Tory and Grit—if there are such people any longer—shall be treated alike is, of course, most creditable to him. But there may be some curiosity, in which members of Parliament will share, as to the process by which Mr. Hartt proposes to override the rulings of the established tribunals.—The Journal of Commerce.

CREATE A NEW VIMY.

Ontario in a very short time must enter upon the work committed to her as godmother of devastated Vimy Village, the honourable task being hers not merely to repair the ravages of war, to rebuild and restore the Vimy that was, but rather to create a new Vimy—and that may prove even harder, reawaken hope in the hearts of the villagers, who have under the blows of cumulative misfortunes sunk into apathetic disregard to each fresh calamity, their hopeless motto "nothing longer matters."

Although in the heart of the French coal-mining area, the Vimy that was—and which is now merely a confusion of grotesquely twisted girders and dusty, disintegrating heaps of rubbish that once were happy homes—was the centre of a small agricultural area intensively cultivated and devoted largely to the growth of beets and celery, the former for conversion into sugar; the latter exported to city markets. The village crowned a round-topped knoll, a fatal strategic eminence that won for it the special attention of concentrated artillery fire that aimed to make death, destruction and desolation absolute.

Unique in its limited adaptability as a vegetable and farm products supply centre for contiguous mining areas, the restoration of Vimy at the earliest opportunity is economically, as well as psychologically imperative; and that the reincarnation shall be worthy the deathless deeds Canadians wrought on the nearby ridge is to be the proud trust and delightful task of Ontarians. Already minor monuments to dauntless Canadian daring are rearing themselves on the Crest of that ridge where the German lines were broken on that fateful April morning and given the key to the harmonious union of new and old world devotion to the common principles of justice, democracy and a sublime faith which the new village should typify to future generations of visitors, who will gather from all parts of the world at this shrine of a free people.

A trust of highest distinction is that of Ontario in her capacity of fairy godmother to Vimy Village. The new Vimy should be planned with affection, with studied attention to historical associations, to features of the parochial past, ante-dating the stormy days of war to the high credentials of the locus as an important milepost on the righ road of freedom and civilization. It should be planned and built with sympathetic affection as a Village Beautiful, missing nothing of its inherited and characteristic old world charm and romance and nothing of the scientific completeness of conveniences and comforts of modernity at the highest and fullest development.

THE SOLDIERS' VOTE.

(London Advertizer.)

With the returns of the soldiers' vote, taken in England, for Ontario and Alberta, the election results are complete. These soldier votes, as returned, show a most peculiar state of affairs; one which is beyond the understanding of the man who does not desire to believe that crooked work on the part of the Government or its agents existed. To those who suspect, and accept evidence strengthening their suspicion, that all means were used in getting the soldiers' vote for Sir Robert Borden's nominees, the vote is not so mystifying.

If the votes are to be accepted as reflecting the true sentiments of the men overseas, one must believe that they ignored their comrades who had worked and fought for the cause and cast their ballots for Borden's men in opposition to soldiers. Canadians were told that the men at the front would vote for those who would provide reinforcements, and would insist upon a square deal for the men in khaki; it was to be a solid patriotic vote. Does the vote mean that the soldiers did not expect these things from their comrades, or does it mean that they were deceived into voting the way the Government demanded? The answer is apparent.

In a list published of some of the votes cast in England for Ontario men ,the following are shown: In Lincoln, Chaplin (the Government candidate) 567, Capt. Lovelace (soldier) 27; in Brant, Harold (Government candidate) 249, Col. H. Cockshutt (soldier and Conservative) 4; in North Oxford, Nesbitt (Government choice) 240, Lieut.-Col. Don. Sutherland (soldier, wounded three times) 75.

These are not the only peculiar instances. There is evidenced a vast difference between the soldiers' vote as polled in Canada and that polled overseas. In Parkdale, Major McCormack got 129 soldier votes in Canada and only 11 overseas; in East York, Major Cockburn got 105 at home and not one overseas. As pointed out by the Hamilton Herald, West Hamilton gives a still more striking contrast: Col. McLaren received 448 soldiers' votes at home and his opponent, Mr. Stewart, the Government nominee, 198; but of the soldier vote in France, Stewart got 734 and McLaren 4.

It has been charged by a Toronto Conservative paper, the Telegram, that the names of soldier candidates who opposed "Union" candidates were left off the list given in the Canadian Daily Record on Tuesday, November 27, which was forwarded to the soldiers in France as the one on which they should vote. In West Hamilton, Col. McLaren's name does not appear.

This list was not confined to Government candidates; the Government was too wily for that. It contained the names of all civilian candidates, even when they had retired from the contest, but omitted the soldiers.

With these facts, can even the most bigoted Bordenite believe the overseas vote was taken fairly and legally? Is there not absolute proof that the election ought to be declared null and void?

One other circumstance in connection with the overseas voting stands out as more than strange; wherever the vote changed the Canadian result in favour of a Government nominee, the majority, with few exceptions, was just sufficient to turn the trick. In Nipissing the civilian vote gave Lapierri (Opposition) a majority of 1,339, but the soldiers' vote changed this to a majority for Harrison (Borden's man), of 44. in South Perth, Steel (Government), got 118 soldier votes to his opponent's 3, changing his minority of 2,652 to 2,710 into a majority of 2,770 to 2,713; in Brant, the Government nominee, Harold, was elected by getting 249 soldiers' votes to Cockshutt's 4, this giving him a majority of 84.

There is little doubt that history will record the federal election of December, 1917, as one of the most corrupt Canada ever saw.

HASTINGS NEWS

HASTINGS, March 5.—The Mission Band of the Presbyterian Church have finished an autograph quilt which reflects great credit on themselves. They have donated it to the local Chapter of the I. O. D. E. to be sent to some hospital. The quilt is now on display in the window of Mr. P. Howard's store, and is being much admired.

Mr. Wilfred Knight is making preparations for taking over the "Hastings Star" and expects to have the first issue ready in the course of two weeks.

The street on the east side of the river, near the railway, has been so flooded that residents in the immediate vicinity were fearful for their homes, and work in the planing mill had to be suspended. The flood was caused by ice, which obstructed the channel under the railroad, and caused it to overflow. Blasts of dynamite were used and the channel cleared. The street is again safe for traffic.

The W. M. S. of the Presbyterian Church is busy making quilts to be sent where most needed.

SOLDIER RETURNS.

A large crowd gathered in the Town Hall on Thursday evening to do honour to one of the boys who has been for some months in active service, and being seriously wounded, was invalided home. The ously wounded, was invalided home. The chair was occupied by Reeve Hess, who called upon the several speakers and musical numbers. The local clergymen were all present and delivered an address, while music was furnished by the following: Solo, Mr. J. Mulholland; piano duett, Mrs. (Rev.) Deakin and Miss Gladys Stevenson; quartette, Misses Jessie Wilcox and Ona Gosnee, and Messrs. Wilcox and Wm. Tate. A reading "Romeo and Juliet," was contributed by Mr. C. Plant and was much enjoyed. The last and most important feature was the presentation to Pte. Andy Lawson of a locket, on behalf of the citizens of Hastings. The address was read by the Reeve, and the presentation made by little Miss Jean Baker. Pte. Lawson made a suitable reply, thanking the citizens for their kindness and also the I. O. D. E. for the parcels they had sent to him while on duty. The gathering dispersed after singing "God Save the King."

The Ladies Aid in connection with the Methodist Church met on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Malcolm Baker. A large number was in attendance ,and a number of important items of business discussed. At the close of the meeting a dainty lunch was served and much enjoyed.

Mrs. J. Mitchell of Oak Hills, has been visiting at the home of her brother, Mr. R. Collins.

Miss Mae Huycke is spending a few weeks in Peterborough.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown of Roseneath, have retired from farming and are taking up residence in Hastings.

Lieut. Reg. Runnels spent the past week with Peterborough friends.

Mrs. W. Tate spent Saturday in Campbellford.

Lieut. Walter Thomson has been visiting his brother, Rev. Archie Thomson, in Moneton.

The "Win Some One" organized class of the Methodist Sunday School were entertained on Friday evening at the home of their Vice-President, Miss Jessie Wilcox. The members are preparing for a bazaar. After an hour's work on different articles, a five cent lunch was served, and much enjoyed. There were thirteen members present, who all seemed very enthusiatic over the success of hteir undertaking.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Atkinson and Master Percy were week end guests of Mrs. J. Carter, Sr.

HAD MEXICAN MONEY.

Jas. Montgomery, Apprehended in Cobourg, Was Well Loaded.

James Montgomery, the man whom the Cobourg police stumbled upon yesterday, is said to have had in his possession considerable Mexican coin (apparently valueless) and many confederate bills. He is wanted on several charges in Lindsay, Barrie and other places.

OLD BOYS OUTSCORED JUNIOR O.H.A. OUTFIT IN BENEFIT GAME

The Old Boys team succeeded in proving to the Peterborough Junior O. H.A. outfit in their benefit game in aid of the War Veterans last night that they haven't forgotten how to play Canada's national winter game. The old guard won the battle by 9 goals to 5. It was 1-1 at the end of the first period and anybody's battle, but the Old Boys cut loose at the beginning of the second session, scoring four goals in as many minutes. They led by 5 to 1 at the close of the second and held the youngsters even in the last period, each scoring four goals. The ice was rough and heavy, making it a hard task to control the rubber.

The Old Boys, considering their lack of practice, showed surprisingly good form. It was the first game of the year for Legros in the nets and he handled himself nicely. Grover Halpin tore off some nice rushes and his dash for a goal in the last period was the prettiest of the night. McMartin, Jackson and Evans proved a good forward line, with Jackson showing the lead in the matter of goal getting, while Kenneally and Lowes both worked hard.

Park was the juniors' most effective man, doing all the scoring for the "barber poles." He has shown consistent improvement in his work all season and does not throw away any opportunities to score when in close. Murray made some clever saves in the nets. At times the Old Boys gave him lots of work to do and he stopped plenty of hard drives.

"Jerry" Coughlin handled the bell satisfactorily.

The teams were as follows:

| Old Boys | | Junior. |
|---|---|---|
| Legros | Goal | Murray |
| Halpin | Defence | Girard |
| Kenneally | | Hagerman |
| Jackson | Centre | Cherrett |
| McMartin | Right Wing | Park |
| Evans | Left Wing | Bartley |
| Lowes | Substitute | Williams |

The summary:

First Period.

1 Juniors, Park.
2 Old Boys, Jackson.

Second Period.

3 Old Boys, Evans.
4 Old Boys, Jackson.
5 Old Boys, McMartin.
6 Old Boys, Jackson.

Third Period.

7 Juniors, Park.
8 Juniors, Park.
9 Old Boys, Jackson.
10 Old Boys, McMartin.
11 Juniors, Park.
12 Juniors, Park.
13 Old Boys, Halpin.
14 Old Boys, Jackson.

It will be noticed that although the rather large total of fourteen goals were scored they were all tallied by five players. Park bagged all five counters credited to the Juniors, while Jackson contributed five to the Old Boys' total, McMartin 2, Evans and Halpin getting the rest.

A fine total was realized for the Great War Veterans' club room fund as a result of the game.

PORT ARTHUR TEAM EASY PICKING FOR THE O.H.A. CHAMPIONS

Toronto, March 7.—Lacking all the qualifications that go to make a good hockey team, Port Arthur, champions of the Thunder Bay League, met Kitchener at the Arena in the first of the eastern games of the Allan Cup elimination series, and were beaten by 20 to 2. The game was scheduled as the first of a home and home series with the total goals on the round to count. Port Arthur's showing, however, was so disappointing in the initial game that the management voluntarily offered to default Saturday night's game. Needless to say, the offer was accepted and an exhibition game between Dentals, last year's O.H.A. senior champions, and Kitchener, this year's winners, will be played on Saturday night.

KITCHENER EASILY THE BEST.

Kitchener were so much superior in every department of the game that the majority of the spectators left after the second period. Port Arthur was easily out skated, out checked, and out manoeuvred throughout the three periods of play. Kitchener scored six goals in the opening period, nine in the second period and five in the final period, holding Port Arthur to one goal in the second and third periods.

PORT ARTHUR'S LAMENTABLE SHOWING.

Hiller, Parkes and Solomon of the Kitchener forward line broke away from their checks time after time, romped through the Port Arthur defence and had no trouble at all in drawing our Gerrard in goal or beating him with shots any higher than his knees. On the other hand, the Kitchener forwards checked back particularly well, hauled up the rushes of the Port Arthur team, and the defence play of Karges and Truschinski was impenetrable to the Port Arthur attacks. It is only fair to say that Kitchener did not play their best game, due to the lack of real opposition. The teams:

Kitchener (20): Goal, Hainesworth; defence, Karges and Truschinski; centre, Hiller; wings, Parkes and Solomon. Substitute, Leroux.

Port Arthur (2): Goal, Gerrard; defence, L'Heureux and Rabideau; centre, Cattani; wings, Service and Gray. Substitue, Meyers.

Referee, Lawson Whitehead.

HOCKEY

An interesting game of hockey was played at Brock street rink last night between the Fire Hall Seniors and the Arrows. The fire hall team won by a score of 6 to 1. Arrow's line-up was: Goal, Thompson; right defence, Armstrong; left defence, A. Deyell; rover, J. Pethick; right wing, F. Edgar; left wing, H. Meredith; centre, D. Fuller.

Fire Hall team's line-up follows: Goal, H. Whitlow; right defence, ton; rover, C. Turner; right wing, ton; rover, C. Turner; right wing, Lou Lebarr; left wing, C. Parrington; centre, B. Bugg; substitute, Sims.

Vice-Skips' Bonspiel Reaches The "Eights"

Last night's curling advanced the Vice-Skips' bonspiel practically to the "eights" group with the following scores:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| J. Wiley—13. | | M. C. Tooley—8 | |
| L. A Turner—13. | | W. R. Widdess—9 | |
| W. H. Bradburn—9 | | R. Dobie—8 | |
| C. S. Browne—8 | | Geo. Hill—6 | |
| R. L. Dobbin—9 | | L. Hall—3 | |

Dr. Eastwood defaulted to J. Brightman.

To-night's games are set down as follows:

Martin vs. Menzies.
Pennefather vs. Seymour.
Browne vs. R. L. Dobbin.
Wiley vs. Turner.
Brightman vs Bradburn.

The ice is hard and fairly keen, promising the best of curling.

BOWLING On Water St. Alleys

GROCERS WIN FROM HIGH ROLLERS

In the Ten Pin League at the Water Street Alleys, the Grocrs won two of the three games the High Rollers.

The High Rollers best spasm was a 916 total for the last game, while the Grocers rolled up an 883 count for their first game. The total pinnage was: High Rollers 2480, Grocers 2475. The 300 markers for the High Rollers were: Solomon 519; Kelly 515; Patterson 502. For the Grocers, Heard 522; Fitzpatrick 518; Ross 513.

The scores were as follows:

| High Rollers— | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Thomas | 149 | 160 | 160 | 469 |

COBOURG O. H. A. TEAM BEAT TURNBULL'S TIGERS

In a hockey game at Cobourg last night the Turnbull Hockey team of this city were defeated by the combined intermediate and junior O.H.A. teams of that town, 12 goals to 4. The game was not as onesided however as might appear by the score, the locals being handicapped by the absence of three of their regular players.

Dunn and Maher, two of the fastest men on the Lakeshore, starred for the home team, between them, scoring eight of the twelve goals. The line-up was as follows:

Turnbulls—Goal, Lang; defence, Perry and Lapp; wings, R. Irwin and Milan; centre, Sheehan; rover, H. Irwin.

Cobourg—Goal, Bulger; defence, Drumm, F. Walden; rover, Fox; centre, Maher; wings, Bulger and Currie. Referee—Wolden.

CAUCHT SEVEN DEFAULTERS IN POLICE COURT

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, March 7. — While the wheels of justice ground their grist in Toronto police court to-day, Dominion policemen, six in number, quietly and almost unobservedly moved in and out among the back benchers, "inviting" first one and then another likely looking chap to step outside for a moment's conversation. As a result seven young fellows who couldn't give satisfactory explanations, documentary or otherwise, were marched off to the Armouries.

May Break Up Hun Holdings In United States

Canadian Press Despatch:

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Plans to break up the vast holdings of German interests in the United States and place them in other hands, so that after the war they cannot continue to do what have been characteried as the hope of German kultur in America, were presented to Congress to-day by A. Mitchel Palmer, alien property custodian, and unanimously approved by Senate Appropriations committee. The value of German property subject to such disposition would run into hundreds of millions.

CALGARY OFFICER WAS INFORMANT OF CAPT. BAILEY

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

CALGARY, March 7.—The officer who supplied Captain Bailey with the report that 90 per cent. of Canadians were drunk at Christmas, and which led to Bailey's arrest, is a Calgary officer who commanded a battalion at the front. His name is withheld at present. He is willing to do what he can to relieve the stigma from Bailey's name, and negotiations are now on to get him to make the necessary statement.

SOLDIERS CELEBRATED THEIR OWN DEPARTURE.

A Noisy Spree Last Night Attracted Attention of Police.

In the absence of other entertainment, good wishes and appreciative farewells, two soldiers celebrated the eve of their departure for Kingston by getting hilariously drunk. The festivities, such as they were, lacked the effervescence of the old recruiting days, but they had an effervescence and effectiveness all their own. The police finally cut in on the gaiety, and the boys spent the rest of the night in the cells, which they all but wrecked. They paid their fines of $10 each, whereas they might have gone to jail, perhaps, and deferred their departure for "an eastern point."

Corp. Taylor Is Back From Front

Corp. Sam. Taylor, of Chemong, one of the five Taylor boys who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, arrived home from foreign service last night. He was formerly a member of the 93rd Police. Word was received by the authorities that Pte. F. Mallinsen, of Peterborough, was to return last night, but City Clerk Armstrong was unable to locate him at the station.

NO FRESH GRAIN WILL BE USED FOR BREWING

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner)

LONDON, March 7.—Replying to a question in the House of Commons to-day Sir Gilbert Parker, representing the Food Ministry, declared that until further orders no fresh grain may be used for brewing.

Constable Kidd Cut His Foot

P. C. Kidd, of the police force, met with a painful accident while engaged in cutting wood at the Mark Burnham farm in Otonabee, where he and P. C. Lawrence spent the day. He was carried to Mr. Burnham's home, and the wound, which amounted to a bad axe wound in his heel, was dressed.

Royal Theatre Wall Must Come Down Mayor Duncan Says

Mayor Duncan has twice notified the owner of the Royal Theatre building, that they must tear down the north wall, otherwise the city will do it at the owner's expense. This wall at the top has developed a long crevice that has widened two or three inches during the past week or two. When the frost goes out the Mayor believes that this wall will topple, and the consequent rending of the floors may push the front wall out into George street. Hence it is proposed to do this work instead of waiting until the ruined building falls apart with the development of its existing weakness.

"Railway Wizards Are Knighted For The Burden They Have Placed On The Country"

He is a standing example of the necessity of sending men to legislatures who are not the business or legal agents of private corporations. It cannot be expected that lawyers and others, whose main business is their own practice, will sacrifice any of their clients to the public good, and they rarely do. The public must learn how absolutely necessary it is to have as the public's representatives, only those whose sole object is to serve the public. The harm that has been done the public interests and well being by ignoring this principle, has been incalculably great in the past. It is often these very representatives that men like Sir Adam Beck have to fight.

It will be recalled that here in Peterborough county his own efforts as member of parliament in securing the return of Burleigh Falls to public ownership had met with fierce opposition, often of a subtle and cunning kind. When advocating the introduction of Hydro into Eastern Ontario and the expropriation of the vast Seymour power interests he had had to pay, even in our own progressive little city, for the rent, lighting and heating of our own city hall, when the meeting held there was wholly for the purpose of enabling a Minster of the Crown getting popular approval of this contemplated move on the part of the government. Those dark days have disappeared and the public now realizes the benefits to be secured by a little watchfulness and energy. Mr. Burnham outlined the inestimable value for general transportation of light, cheap railways at the front, which can be built almost anywhere without much preparation or expense.

Sir Adam Beck.

It was in 1914 that the Dominion found two out of three of its large railway companies in financial distress, said Sir Adam Beck. Financial aid was advanced on this occasion and one year ago the Canadian Northern came back to the Government for an additional loan of forty-five million dollars. The grants of land, townsites and other concessions made by municipalities and governments to the railways of this country are stupendous and represent an enormous liability. After all this has been done the railways throw up their hands and ask for more money. More money is advanced after the railway assigns forty per cent. of its common stock to the Government and permits representatives of that Government to sit on the board of directors, where they can be of no service except as figure heads.

Worthless Stock.

When a company is so badly managed as the C. N. R., the government should have demanded a majority of the stock, worthless as it is, and the government should have assumed the operation of the road.

Sir Adam Beck quoted Mr. Nickle, Federal member for Kingston, as having said on the floor of the House of Commons, that he was opposed to going into partnership with Mackenzie and Mann as he did not want to be associated with people whom he could not trust and he was of the opinion that Mackenzie and Mann would do the government in the long run.

"If these men were allowed to carry on, several of the provinces, including British Columbia, would be bankrupt," said the speaker.

W. A. Buchanan, Federal member for Lethbridge, was quoted by Sir Adam as saying that the head of the C. N.R. was one of the best promisers in the country, but he did not know of any man who so badly failed to carry out his promises as Sir William Mackenzie.

"Who Knows?"

"The government," said the speaker, "should, in taking over the railway, assume all liabilities that are just. Who knows the liabilities of the C.N. R.? Sir Thomas White didn't know them. You might as well try to find a needle in a hay stack as find out something about the affairs of anything Mackenzie and Mann are connected with. All men found to be untrustworthy should be eliminated as soon as the road is taken over. The majority report of the Ackworth Commission advises the government to take over the railway, and also makes the statement that the common stock is of no value. Then we have the spectacle of Mackenzie and Mann putting on a poor mouth and striving to convince the Judge that the sale of lands, townsites, coal mines, etc., have returned no revenue and the road has never earned a dollar. They would have us believe that in the service of their country they have given twenty years' hard work by day and sometimes by night.

Operate at a Loss.

If you got the Grand Trunk Pacific for nothing you would have to operate it at a loss of six million dollars a year. Who is responsible for that venture or adventure? Well, the Grand Trunk wanted it, and the directors wanted it. Siberia would be a healthy place for any member of the government who would relieve the Grand Trunk of its obligation in this regard. A week or so ago Carvell is reported to have stated that the government had taken over the Transcontinental railway. This report was subsequently denied by Premier Borden. The Grand Trunk has refused to equip the road according to the agreement, and as a matter of fact, it is operated by the government.

Railway Wizards.

Railway construction in this country is promoted by promotors, financial geniuses or railway wizards who are knighted for the burden they have placed on the country. As we are determined to give up the last drop of blood for the country's sake so in this case a few millions more is neither here nor there if it is the last, said Sir Adam with emphasis. We have two railway systems that are failures because they were created by politicians and over capitalized. Then came duplication. The province gives them a subsidy of land across the hinterland of Lake Superior. Then they parallel them. Some of the railway lines we have to-day are no more necessary than a fifth wheel on a waggon.

Consolidation.

You can take them over and operate them privately or you can let the C.P.R. buy them at their own figure, or you can consolidate them and make them pay, if you will properly manage them. Any three ordinary men could have made a success of the Hydro-Electric. I am not going to mention myself. I was only a business man; a cigar box maker. They sell at five or six cents apiece and I had to make a living out of them. Any carpenter could make them. When we started out to make a success of hydro we didn't do as the Manitoba government did when they purchased the Bell Telephone system of that province at an exorbitant figure and then supplied a service in the sparsely settled districts at less than cost. We purchased the present Hydro properties at a fair value and we are selling light and power at cost to the people. The whole thing carries itself.

A Combination.

It will take four hundred million dollars to fully equip the C.N.R. and Grand Trunk as separate lines. If you take the C.N.R. with its six thousand miles of feeders in the west, and the Grand Trunk with similar facilities in the east, you will have a strong combination that can be equipped at much less cost. For the first three years you will lose and the next three years you will pile up a surplus of tweny million dollars and thereby relieve the long suffering public of a burden.

Union Government.

We have in Ottawa a Union government. It is fresh in office. I don't know how many are in favour of public ownership. At present we are feeling out public opinion. Arthur Meighen is going to England to see what the Grand Trunk will take for its stock. When a man is bankrupt and has made a complete failure the bank does not run after that man to ask him what he will take for his stock. They usually have it in the vault long before that.

The Mortgages.

The public is in a position of a mortgagee, yet we are going over to buy the stock. We own the road now and are in control. We should have been in control in 1914. Consolidate the railwsys, make them pay and we will even forgive the millions we are going to buy the stock with.. The millions we have paid into the railways have been paid out in dividends. They have milked the people of the country.

Electrification.

Turning to the question of the electrification of the steam roads, Sir Adam Beck said that fifty per cent. more haulage could be secured on the double track line between Toronto and Hamilton and Niagara Falls if the road was operated by electricity. One-third of the rolling stock on the steam roads is required to haul coal for the use of the road.

"We could electrify the line between Peterborough and Port Hope and travel at sixty miles an hour instead of six," said Sir Adam. If the government wants to electrify the roads we will help them; if they want to operate them by steam we will run an electric line on each side of them and see how long they stay in business."

More Efficient.

Sir Adam Beck asserted that the electric roads were more easily operated in winter time than the steam roads. The electric motors were even more efficient in the cold weather. The speaker referred to the operation of electric roads in the United States. In one instance an electric locomotive was used to haul three dead steam engines and seventy-five loaded cars which were stalled owing to the severity of the weather. In this case the road was being electrified at the time and the temporary electrical construction permitted the use of the electric locomotive referred to.

Hydro Electric.

Turning to the Hydro-Electric power scheme, Sir Adam Beck said that seventy-three million dollars has been invested in the scheme. After paying all interest and fixed charges a substantial surplus remained. The consumption of bituminous coal in Ontario has been reduced by four and a half million tons a year as a direct result of the introduction of the Hydro-Electric power. This at the rate of seven dollars a ton, means twenty-five or thirty million dollars for the Province of Ontario that would otherwise be spent in coal outside of the province.

"Where would you be if the United States placed an embargo on steel and coal?" asked Sir Adam Beck. Where would you be if we were not able to supply two hundred and fifty thousand horse power. We have speeded up the munition plants of the country until we are informed that we supply sixty per cent. of the shells used by the British army. Electrify the railways and consolidate the power plants of the country and you will save millions of tons of coal a year.

Business Increased.

Peterborough has a power rate of seventeen dollars and fifty cents per horse power. We have increased the business here in two years from fourteen thousand horse power to twenty-nine thousand horse power, and reduced the operating costs by a very substantial amount. The surplus is turned back into the business and goes towards the reduction of rates. In that way it goes back to the people as a dividend. Port Hope pays ten dollars more per horse power than Peterborough because of the increased cost of transmission. There is a shortage of power in this district at the present time. This we are striving to overcome.

The province makes large grants towards the building of highways. Good roads are subsidized to the extent of forty per cent. Why should not the province create a similar plan for the distribution of power among the farmers, who in Western Ontario are larger users of power. I have it on the authority of the late Sir James Whitney that the government is prepared to grant such a subsidy, providing the particular township seeking Hydro power privileges pays one-third of the cost.

The electrification of the railways would save to this country sixty or seventy million dollars a year that is now spent in coal across the line.

At the close of his address Sir Adam Beck replied to Mayor Duncan's request for information concerning the extension of the Peterborough Radial railway system.

Street Railway Extensions.

"Mr. G. W. Ferguson, local manager of the Peterborough Street Railway, has been communicated with regarding the needs of this city and as soon as he makes a report we will look into the matter," said Sir Adam. "We hope that the time will not be long before the city will take over the street railway system and the gas plant and operate it on their own account. The street railway is revenue producing at the present time and the profits are being left in the system."

The meeting closed with a resolution of thanks and endorsation of Sir Adam Beck's policy regarding the nationalization of the railways and further development of the Hydro-Electric power scheme. The resolution was moved by Ald. Edgar and seconded by Mr. R. Hicks, of the Utilities Commission.

LABOUR COUNCIL OBJECT TO THEIR EXCLUSION FROM THE TECHNICAL SCHOOL COMMITTEE

Endorse Idea to Control Sales of Coal and Hope City Council Will Succeed in Putting It Into Effect—Other Topics Discussed,

A resolution protesting against its exclusion from the committee appointed by the City Council to present Peterborough's claims for the location in this city of a proposed technical school for the re-education of disabled soldiers was passed by the Trades and Labour Council at its regular meeting last night. The members did not impute intentional omission of representatives of organized labour from this joint committee, but, nonetheless, they resented the oversight, and the resolution of protest voiced the sentiment of last night's meeting, which was largely attended. Representation will be applied for.

Endorse Plan to Control This Year's Coal Supplies

Mayor Duncan's suggestion that the city, with the co-operation of the fuel dealers, establish a central office to receive and record consumers' orders for coal was approved by the Labour men who are anxious that it be put into effect as early as possible. It was stated that a practical scheme based on this idea would be a direct help to the workers of the city, guaranteeing to them equal consideration with wealthier citizens.

Disappointed Women's Council.

The Council expressed regret that, because of previous engagements, its delegates to meet the local Council of Women were prevented from attending the conference the latter arranged for last Saturday night.

This reopened the question of the employment of female labour in factories and lead to a long discussion upon the means to be employed in remedying the present conditions. As in previous debates on this subject, it was stated that there are local factories employing girls who are under sixteen, a legal age, and some appear to be no more than twelve or thirteen years of age.

It was contended that the ten-hour day is too long for young girls. During the present winter they have had to face extremely cold weather going to work at 6:30 a.m., standing at machines all day and returning home through deep snow in the evening. The Labour Council feels that a strong and verile race cannot be maintained if the girls and young women are forced by industrial circumstances to work under these exhausting conditions. It was stated that some of these female employees have worked twelve and thirteen hours a day.

Ask for Legislation.

A motion was passed requesting Premier Hearst to provide legislation establishing the eight-hour day for female employees in factories.

One member blamed the parents for permitting or sending their girls to labour under such unfavourable conditions. He cynically suggested that the Board of Education sanction the teaching in the schools of the benefits of trade unionism in order that the children might impart the information to their parents.

"You'll write a hundred letters to Hearst without getting results," was one comment on the resolution. Organization of the women workers was recommended, but one attempt in that direction was reported a failure.

"Because labour as a force in this city did not get in benind it," said one member.

A father related an experience of his daughter, how she had become independent of factory work. On several days in one "pay" the machinery was shut down for three or four hours, on each occasion, toward the end of the day. They asked permission to go home, but were refused. They were put to work cleaning up the machinery, but their pay envelopes were minus the wages for those particular hours. The father in question, was so disgusted that he made sacrifice to give his daughter a commercial education, and to-day she holds an excellent position. The point emphasized in these and similar statements was that if girls work long hours at compaartively low wages the fault rests principally in the homes.

"Follow Me" Another Big Hit For Grand

Daughter of World-Famous Anna Held Coming Here in Tuneful and Highly Amusing Entertainment—Beautiful Girls and Bewitching Gowns a Feature of Big Musical Comedy

"Follow Me," a musical comedy cocktail, with Liane Held, charming daughter of the world-famous Anna Held, the cherry, is to be drunk at The Grand next Wednesday, March 13, owing to speedy arrangements just completed by Mr. Webber Turner, in an endeavour to get the "top notchers" for Peterborough.

It is Anna Held's own attraction, a most tuneful and highly amusing entertainment of the sort that banishes dull care.

The story centres about Claire La-Tour, a celebrated actress of the varieties, who is the idol of the boulevardiers. Her most ardent admirer is the Marquis de Launay. She receives his attentions until she learns he is married to a charming American woman. She decides to cure him of his infatuation, and succeeds in bringing him and his wife together again.

The side love strains of highly amusing interest embrace the attentions to the actress of A. Knutt, a poet, who seeks to win her with his comical effusions, and the efforts of a rich and eccentric American woman to gain the love of an American millionaire, who is deeply embroiled in an affection for the actress.

The three scenes are laid in Paris—a villa, where a charity bazaar for soldiers is in progress; a theatre green room scene; and a gay night in a restaurant. The scenes, as well as all the gowns worn by a typical Anna Held chorus were designed by Miss Held and blend into a gorgeous color harmony. Bizarre creations worn by beautiful young women and appearing in an almost endless procession represent an outlay of $30,000. The many gowns worn by the winsome Liane Held win admiration and applause from women and silent prayers from men that they do not have to pay for them.

A GATES METHOD.

When He Can't Catch Dogs it's Comparatively Easy to Get Their Owners.

J. Gates chuckled this morning over a little stratgem he improvised to discover the owner of a dog that he could not catch.

"I saw this dog sitting in the middle of a north end street. I went up to him and talked to him, but he had his eye on me, and I knew that I couldn't catch him. But I was close enough to him to see the number on his collar. I made a memo. of it, and I went up to a house to make sure that I was on the right track. I said to the lady: 'Madam, you shouldn't leave your dog loose to run on the street. The dog catcher is likely to get him.' That is true,' she replied, and called the dog in. 'I guess I'll have to summons you: I am the dog catcher,' I said, and she was so pleased she shut the door in my face. But it worked."

BE READY FOR EMERGENCIES.

The best way is to always keep a bottle of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in the house, ready for emergencies. Then when croup or colds come suddenly they can be promptly cured before they have time to reach an acute and dangerous stage. To meet this requirement we have put the syrup up in family size bottles which contain nearly three times as much as the 25-cent bottle and sell at 60 cents.

In a Comprehensive Array of Materials and Colors

The arrival of our Spring Blouses reveals to us that there are no exceptions to the new rules. Since Dame Fashion has decreed the simple slender silhouette to the fore, in suits, dresses and coats, the blouses are all endeavoring to appear quite in accordance with the new lines. In featuring simplicity they have lost none of their charm and are more artistic than ever before. Perhaps the most conspicuous change appears in the collars, on many models there are none at all and most of the others follow a variety of the shawl or cowl collar. Tucks, especially pin tucks, have reappeared in full force and are arranged to form such chic and effective trimmings. The charming little vestees, side fastenings, dainty, elusive frills, round and square necks are very much in evidence. The great mojority of the blouses still show their allegiance to crepe de chine, Georgette crepe and lingerie voile. The pastel shades, bisque, sand, maple, peach, sea gull grey, pink, harvest green and some of the darker colors to match the new suits are the most fashionable hues.

MAIZE GEORGETTE CREPE has been employed in the making of one of the most attractive numbers. It is fastened on the shoulder, forming the slip-over effect, with yoked back and flat round collar. The neck is rounded in front, tucked and French embroidery trim with finish of tiny pearl buttons down front and on shoulders. Price ..... $12.00

ANOTHER PARTICULARLY CHARMING MODEL is fashioned out of flesh colored crepe de chine. There are those bewitching little pin tucks down the back and front and a tie collar in "Billie Burke" style. The sleeves are long and straight with hemstitched cuffs and small self button trim. For this distinctive and practical blouse the price is very moderate.. $10.00

FOR A SMART SUIT BLOUSE we have just the right thing in candy stripe wash crepe de chine. The collar can be worn either high or low and the sleeve is neatly finished with a buttoned cuff of white crepe de chine. Pearl buttons relieve the plainness of the blouse, thereby enhancing its beauty. The price is ..... $9.00

ANOTHER exceptionally pleasing number is made of a very beautiful pink crepe de chine, with pleated front and three rows of hemstitching to form the trimming across the front. Collar and cuffs are after the new Winter Garden style. This model is specially priced at..... $8.50

This Season's Lingerie Blouses Abound with Many Novel Arrangements

FOR AN EFFECTIVE and practical blouse we can recommend one of tucked English voile. It has the long Winter Garde collar, while pin tucks, lace and a ribbon tie make up the trimming. The sleeve is straight and finished with a long pointed cuff. The price is ..... $4.75

ANOTHER DAINTY LINGERIE STYLE comes in French voile with the ever popular tucks forming most of the trimming. It has a hemstitched yoke and a hemstitched convertible collar which can be buttoned close to the throat. The sleeves are tailored and finished with turn back cuffs. There is a special price on this blouse of ..... $2.98

ONE FASHIONABLE high necked blouse is made of dainty, white, striped voile, inserts of fillet lace down the front and hemstitched yoke. The collar and tailored sleeve are finished with a smart, neat turn over of fillet. This number is priced at..... $5.75

ANOTHER MURDER FOR HUNS

Wounded Skipper of Belgian Smack is Brutally Killed

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, March 7.—How the members of the crew of a German submarine brutally killed and wounded the master of a Belgian fishing smack who refused to leave his vessel, is described in a Press Association despatch from Penzance. The submarine attacked the smack with gun fire, and the skipper was wounded severely. He urged his men, including his son, to save themselves. The submarine commander forced a fisherman to row the German sailors to the smack in order to place bombs aboard. One of the Germans drew a revolver and shot the helpless skipper through the head in the presence of his son.

LABOUR MEN WANT SENTENCE REVOKED

The Trades and Labour Council last night passed a resolution asking the Minister of Justice to revoke the sentence of three years in penitentiary imposed on an employee of the post office in Calgary. A returned soldier named Wilson was found guilty of stealing nine dollars from three postal letters, and for this offence was sentenced to three years in penitentiary. The Calgary Labour men state that Wilson was affected by his war experience, and besides was paid only $16 a week, over $3 less than the Canada Gazette's estimate of a family's living expenses. A copy of this resolution is also being sent to the local Letter Carriers.

The property qualifications for municipal candidates, a bone of contention in the Legislature for years, is more than likely to disappear from the statutes before the present House gets through with its sessional work. There has been no assurance that the Government will endorse the wiping out of the property qualifications, but in the Legislature yesterday, Hon T. W. McGarry, in consenting to a bill by Dr. Musgrove going on to the Municipal Committee, gave the advocates of the measure considerable ground for hope.

"LIFE ON SUNSHINE ALLEY" SUBJECT OF A SPLENDID ADDRESS

With the uinversal gloom cast upon the world by the troubles of current events, the lecture on "Sunshine Alley" by Rev. Dr. Thomas, given in the green room of the Y.W.C.A., under the auspices of the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E., last night, proved a most acceptable stimulant to the large number who attended, and was a most acceptable diversion from the austere subjects so prevalent to-day.

Mr. Thomas spoke of the cheerful alley that runs through our daily life, finding its way through the dull and dolorous avenues, and where dwell the cheery people. It is no sacrilege to say that God, the Creator, is dominated by the spirit of cheerfulness and He is never far form sunshine alley.

Cheerfulness can best be defined by a reference to its manifestation. It has a three-fold expression, one of which is a happy smile and sunny countenance. God never did a better thing than when he gave man the power to laugh and man alone has been given the thrice blessed privilege.

Cheerfulness is characteriaed by a spirit of praise. It sees good in that which is apparently evil. It looks for the silver lining in the darkest cloud. It counts the blessings and the benefits rather than the sadness and the sorrows.

Cheerfulness is also distinguished by an optimistic outlook. It looks forward with hopefulness into the coming days and ever hopeful, surmounts the most hopeless difficulties, and penetrates the gloom. Cheerfulness is a medicine to the body. Talleygrand said that he found nonsense singularly refreshing. Laughter, the quickest expression of cheerfulness to nature's device for exercising the physical organs and at the same time giving pleasure. It is a psychological fact that you cannot laugh and worry at the same time. Cheerfulness helps us in our daily tasks. The people who live in Sunshine Alley are better fitted to face the troubles and responsibilities of life than those who dwell in gloom and sorrow. otNhing is more disastrous to the personal achievement, happiness and usefulness than a life of constant worrying.

Cheerfulness makes many friends. Sunshine Alley is a popular place. There is something about it which is always attractive. We avoid the company of those who grumble and go to the cheerful person who knows no "ifs" and "I told you so's."

There is always room on Sunshine Alley. There are plenty of houses to let on Sunshine Alley. The air is pure. The golden sunbeams glance and play. The birds are always warbling. The flowers are in perpetual bloom and everybody is happy. Who ever is in a vale of discontent and gloom should pack up and move to-night.

Mr. Thomas, in his address, introduced a world of "a propos" quotations from scores of the authors from Schiller, R. F. Outcault, in "Buster Brown," all of which were introduced in clever harmony with his theme.

Vote of Thanks.

A hearty vote of thanks was moved by Mrs. Harstone, seconded by Mrs. Albert Stratton.

Solo by Mrs. Nicholls.

A most acceptable item of the programme given by the Chapter is a solo by local talent each week. Miss Florence Scott, accompanied by Miss Lillian Hurley, sang at last week's lecture. Mrs. Dickson Nicholls, accompanied by Mrs. MacDonald, sang last night.

Adjutant Trickey On 12 Days' Campaign

Adjutant N. Richard Trickey, the Musical Revivialist of Montreal, is coming to the Salvation Army Temple for twelve days' campaign, beginning on Saturday evening next, at 8 p.m.

The Adjutant is a splendid, racey speaker, a good singer and plays several instruments. He has conducted campaigns in several towns and cities in Eastern Ontario, and the corps at Byersville are very fortunate to secure his services.

He will be assisted next Sunday, also during the week, by some folks from the Simcoe Street Temple.

Children's meetings will be held on Tuesday and Friday afternoons, at 4 p.m.

Special subject every night. Everybody welcome.

BISURATED MAGNESIA

For Dyspepsia, Indigestion

Heartburn, Belching, Sour Acid Stomach, Gas in Stomach, etc., take a teaspoonful of Bisurated Magnesia in a half glass of hot water after eating. Is safe, pleasant and harmless to use and gives almost instant relief. It neutralizes stomach acidity and sweetens the food contents so that digestion is easy and painless. Sold by druggists everywhere.

White batiste blouses with hand tucks are charming.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

Y.W.C.A. NOTES.

The third of the series of fortnightly recitals will be given in the Green-Room at the Y.W.C.A. on Saturday evening of this week.

A particularly interesting programme has been arranged, the chief feature being the presentation of Tennyson's "Oenone," by reading and interpretative motion. The story told in the poem of the Greek hero Paris called upon to judge to which goddess the golden apple "for the fairest" belongs, while the maiden Oenone anxiously watches his choosing, is prettily acted in a sort of pantomime play by the girls of the Advanced Gymnasium Class. The poem will be read by Miss Parker. Appropriate music has been selected by Miss Mabel Penrose, who will act as accompanist. Miss Littlefield will repeat, by request, her 'On to Victory" number, interpretating the French National poem, "La Marseilles." Mrs. Perrin will sing.

Miss M. Taggart, secretary of the National Advisory Committee for Co-operation in Girls' Work will be present at the Y.W.C.A. this evening to address a meeting of pastors, superintendents, teachers and leaders of girls. The object of this meeting is to organize for a leaders' and girls' work conference to be held in this city in the year future. It is hoped that all Protestant Sunday schools will be well represented.

Prizes Presented At Temple To-night

The Young People of the S. A. Temple, Simcoe Street, are very jubilant over the prizes to be distributed to-night at the S. A. Temple by Mr. Joseph Wearing. The programme is to be given by the Officers and Young People of the Byersville Corps. Every body entirely welcome.

May Change Basis Of Representation In Labour Council

Per capita tax of unions, instead of the existing flat rate, was proposed in a resolution at the Trades and Labour Council meeting last night. Under this suggested scheme each local would contribute to the Council a monthly tax, the amount of which would depend on the number of its members; and as a consistent measure the committee appointed to discuss and report on the proposed change will also consider the question of representation in the Council on the basis of membership. At present each "local" nominates five delegates to the Council. The Machinists and Carpenters, to mention two of the strongest, have the same representation as the smaller unions.

The proposed change is 'frankly intended to substitute for this method the "democratic idea" of representation, according to the numerical strength of the unions.

WEDDING BELLS

FIFE—GRAHAM.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the George street Methodist parsonage on Wednesday by the Rev. A. J. Thomas, when Margaret Ethel, second daughter of Mrs. John Graham and George Webber Fife, both of Otonabee, were united in marriage. The bride was becomingly attired in Belgian blue satin and Georgette crepe. The happy couple left on the 3.20 train on a honeymoon trip for Toronto and Niagara Falls, the bride travelling in a suit of navy blue serge with black fox furs. On their return they will reside in Otonabee.

STEELE—McFEE.

The beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. John McFee, Keene, Ont., was the scene of a very pretty wedding, when their daughter, Hazel Jean, became the bride of David J. Steele, Shannavon, Sask. The marriage took place on the evening of March 5th, and was witnessed by the immediate friends of the bride and groom. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. McEachern, B.D., after which a sumptuous wedding dinner was served.

Among a number of valuable gifts was a very handsome pendant, the groom's gift to the bride.

The young couple leave for their new home in the west, followed by the good wishes of a host of friends.

DON'T WORRY over the bad business of yesterday. Use newspaper advertising and make it good to-morrow.

Warsaw Items Of Interest

WARSAW, March 6 — The regular monthly meeting of Court Warsaw, C.O.F., was held on Tuesday, March 5.

Mr. Richard Tedford had a very narrow escape, which resulted in a broken leg, on Monday last, when a load of logs he was bringing to the saw mill here upset and rolled on him.

Congratulations are due to Lieut. John Dewart of the Second Canadian Machine Gun Company, who has been awarded the Military Cross for bravery on the field. Lieut. Dewart, whose home is near here, enlisted at St. Catharines while principal of the Stamford Public school, and has been overseas two years.

Instructor Sergeant Ernest Bell, of P.P.C.L.I., who was invalided home, is spending a few days with relatives here.

Nursing Sister Miller, C.A.M.C., arrived at her home here last week. Her husband, Pte. David Miller, is still in France.

Pte. Bert Cooper, 21st Canadians, who has been home on furlough, has been granted leave of absence to work his farm here. Pte. Cooper went overseas with the 93rd Battalion.

Favourable reports have been received from Pte. Verne Selkirk, 5th C.M.R., and Sapper Vernon Ellis, Engineers, who were suffering from light gas attacks. Both are apparently convalescing.

Again we come to the opening of spring business with a greatly increased stock and in a position more advantageous than ever to supply the needs of the community.

High Cost of Living.

History repeats itself in a most discouraging way when it comes to municipal matters, observes the New York Evening Post. In 1746 Governor Colden states that an "income which would have enabled a family to live with some distinction thirty or forty years since, is now not sufficient for a family of middling rank." The cost of living in the busy little city was continually on the rise. There were other monopolies besides those covering fuel. The Beef Trust of the day, which screwed beef up to seven cents a pound in the metropolis compared with four cents in the suburbs, was characterized by a contemporary muckraker as "one of the most impudent combinations that was ever suffered among a free and thinking people."

Disloyal Soldier Sentenced To 30 Years In Prison

Sergeant Nimke Was Accused of Saying "I Will Surrender to the Germans on the Other Side"

CAMP DEVENS, Ayer, Mass., Mar 8.—William Nimke, of Torrington, Conn., a sergeant of F company, 301st Engineers, received a thirty-year sentence for unpatriotic utterances. He was tried by a general court martial February 5. Nimke was taken to Fort Jay, N.Y., immediately, to begin his sentence.

Nimke was tried on three counts, on two of which he was found guilty. In one of these he was charged with saying:—"If I am put in charge of a party on the other side I will surrender to the Germans, no matter what their strength may be." On another occasion he said:—"I will fight for the United States so long as I am kept on this side of the Atlantic, but if I am sent to the other side I will act independently."

It was alleged in the third court, of which he was found not guilty, that he had said his father and brothers would take up arms against this country if he was sent to Europe.

Walter H. Shattuck, of Haverhill, a private in B company, 302d Machine Gun Battalion, received a sentence of two years at Fort Jay for desertion.

Harold C. Biehl, of Cambridge, a private in the 301st infantry, who left camp December 17 and was captured a month later in Boston, was found guilty of desertion and was sentenced to three years.

No More Soldiers Of German Descent To Go Abroad In Army

Bitter Feeling of French Toward Teutons Causes General Pershing to Make Request on Which War Department Issues Order—Men Kept From Front to Go to Insular Posts

WASHINGTON, D.C., March 8.—Out of consideration for the feelings of the French and in order to relieve General Pershing of any feeling of embarassment the War Deparment has decided not to send to the battle front officers and men in the army who are of German or other enemy nationality.

Although there is no question as to the loyalty of these soldiers, it has been decided to assign them to insular posts when their regiments are ordered to France, thus releasing men now serving at such posts who are available for service in France.

The War Department has been prompted in adopting the policy by the widespread attention attached to the recent case of David A. Henkes, formerly a captain in the Sixteenth infantry, who was sentenced by court martial to serve twenty-five years in Fort Leavenworth penitentiary and discharged from the army for violating his oath of office and seeking to evade service in the war against Germany.

COMMITTED DISLOYAL ACTS.

While Henkes received a severe sentence because it was proved that he had committed acts of disloyalty against the government, nevertheless it was brought out through letters submitted as evidence in the trial, that he had repeatedly sought to be discharged from service or transferred to some other branch, in order not to be required to wage war against his own relatives and friends.

It has come to the attention of the War Department that there are several officers and men, now in the United States forces in France, who, although loyal soldiers, are of enemy parentage, and whose presence is exceedingly distasteful to the French authorities. The presence of these men in France, it is said, has caused General Pershing a great deal of embarassment, because of the bitter feeling of the French against all Germans.

F. J. FEINLER, CHAPLAIN, RECALLED.

A recent case that was called to the attention of the War Department was that of Capt. Frans J. Feinler, chaplain of a regular regiment. He is of German birth and speaks with a pronounced German accent, although he has been in the army since 1909. There is absolutely no question as to his loyalty, but the situation regarding soldiers of enemy nationality finally became so acute that it was decided by General Pershing that the feelings of the French authorities must be considered.

He therefore made a request to the War Department that no man of enemy descent be included in his forces, although he is personally satisfied to have them. Captain Feinler recently was sent back and assigned to duty at Fort Shafter, Hawaiian Islands.

It is understood that many regular army non-comisioned officers and privates are of German or Austrian birth and have failed to take out naturalization papers. Now that the War Department has adopted a definite policy regarding such cases, whenever the units to which these men belong are ordered to France such men will be detached and transferred to regiments in the insular possessions. In announcing this policy the War Department states that this is no reflection on the transferred men.

HOW TO LIVE LONG.

Many ailments find their beginning in a torpid sluggish condition of liver, kidneys and bowels. As a matter of fact you can add years to the length of your life as well as comfort and happiness by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to keep those organs regular and active.

HE IS SURPRISED AT THE RESULTS

"I'm Beginning to Feel Like New Man," Says Forrest, After Taking Tanlac

"For three or four years," said William Forrest, 247 Bernice Crescent, Toronto, "I had suffered from painful, disordered kidneys and nervousness without being able to get anything to help me. My kidneys bothered me constantly and the pain in my back, especially when I stooped over or tried to lift anything, was terrible. My nerves were all to pieces, I had weak, shaky spells, and my hands would tremble so at times I could hardly hold anything. I also had attacks of dizziness, when everything seemed to get dim before my eyes, and by head would swim so I could hardlyy stand up. I had little or no strength and energy and always felt tired and worn-out.

"I am now on my second bottle of Tanlac and I can certainly tell a big difference in my condition. The pain has almost disappeared from my back now and my kidneys don't bother me anything like they did, and I'm beginning to feel like a new man. My nerves are more quiet and steady and I don't have those weak, dizzy feelings like I did. I am already feeling better in every way than I have in a long time, and am regaining my strength rapidly. I have really been surprised to get such wonderful results in so short a time, and I can recommend Tanlac to all suffering people because I believe it will do them good."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowlers Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Bringle & Son.

More than a billion cents have been coined in the last decade, making the number coined from 1793 in all 2,804,000,000—an average of 27 for each man, woman and child in the United States. Considering the demand for them, and the fact that every cent is worth more than its metal value, it seems as if the government might mint in a 12-month more than 152,846,218—the achievement of the record year.—Boston Globe.

GRAIN MARKET

There is but little change in general market conditions. All reports tend to show that farm reserves are heavy, and, logically, the market should be weaker. But the face remains that spot offerings are still light in the face of a demand that rapidly absorbs everything in sight, while the railways appear to be still unable to move the crops. There were slight fractional changes in the cash quotations of Manitoba oats, the lower grades being a shade firmer, while the higher grades were 1-8c. lower. Ontario oats hold firm at $1 at outside points. Buckwheat, barley and rye continue to advance.

Manitoba wheat.—No. 1 Northern, $2.23 1-2; No. 2, $2.20 1-2; No. 3, $2.17 1-2; No. 4, $2.10 1-4, including 2 1-2 cent. tax in store Fort William.

Manitoba oats—No. 2 C.W., 99 1-8c.; No. 2, 96 1-8c.; extra No. 1 feed, 95 1-8c.; store, Fort William; No. 1 feed, 92 5-8c.

American corn —No. 3 kiln dried, $2.05, track, Toronto.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, 99c. to $1, nominal; No. 3 white, 98c. to 99c.

Barley—Malting, $1.78 to $1.80.

Ontario wheat—No. 2 witner, $2.22, basis in store, Montreal.

Peas—No. 2, $3.70 to $3.80, according to freights outside.

Buckwheat—$1.80 to $1.82.

Rye—No. 2, $2.35.

Manitoba flour, war quality, $11.10, Toronto, new bags.

Ontario flour—War quality, $10.70, Toronto-Montreal, $10.70, new bags.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered, Montreal; shorts, $40; bran, $35; feed flour, not quoted; middlings, not quoted.

Hay—Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 1, $17 to $18 No. 2, $14 to $16; mixed, $13 to $16; straw, car lots, $8.50 to $9.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards—Receipts yesterday, 43 cars, with 223 cattle, 43 calves, 2,248 hogs, and 57 sheep and lambs.

Trade was quiet yesterday, with a very light run of fresh cattle and a few lots of odds and ends, the holdovers from the earlier markets. For the fresh stuff, if of good quality there was a good demand, prices holding good and steady at this week's quotations, or about 25 cents lower than the previous week. For the stale and half-fat stuff there is a very slow demand and prices a little less than steady.

Good to choice butcher cows and bulls hold firm.

Calves steady.

Sheep and lambs steady.

Hogs held steady at $19.75 fed and watered, the price which has prevailed all through the week.

Powerful Aero Engines.

In testing an airplane engine of 200 horse power a Detroit company mounted it upon a heavy motor truck, and the aerial propeller sent the truck flying along a boulevard at the rate of more than 40 miles an hour. This was a speed that the truck could not begin to develop under its own motive power, and the method furnished a better practical test of the 12-cylinder airplane engine than was possible in the testing laboratory or in any stationary trial on blocks. As an additional test the rear wheels of the two-ton truck were locked, so that they could not revolve, and in this condition it was driven across a ball park by the airplane engine and propeller through heavy drifts of snow and over ice. The motor weighs 800 pounds and develops power sufficient to drive a 12-passenger airplane at 40 miles an hour.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Palpaitation of the Heart and Nerve Troubles

WERE CURED BY

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills

When the heart begins to beat irregularly or intermittently, palpitate and throb, skip beats, beat fast for a time, then so slow as to seem almost to stop, it causes great anxiety and alarm and the least excitement or exertion seems to affect it.

Many people are kept in a state of morbid fear of death, become weak, worn and miserable through this unnatural action of the heart.

To all sufferers from heart troubles we would advise the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, which by their action in strengthening the heart and regulating the beat remove all the distressing conditions, and impart vigor and vitality to the system.

Mrs. Thomas Davidson, Mount Brydges, Ont., writes: "I have been a great sufferer in the past with nerve troubles and palpitation of the heart. I tried several remedies, but without any good results. My son came in one day and advised me to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. After using one and a half boxes, I am fully recovered, and am in a perfect state of health, thanks to your valuable medicine."

"THE CLUE IN THE AIR"

A DETECTIVE STORY—Isabel Ostrander

"He didn't," explained McCarty patiently. "He just happened to be on hand, and saw something, that Monday night that he took Delano's hat by mistake, and he gave Cunliffe—the policeman who came here after to see him—his own name and this address, as a witness. He was willing enough as you see, ma'am, and it was just a mistake our not getting in touch with him later."

"That Monday night!" Mme. Oriel repeated, "What was it that he saw?"

There was a hushed expectant note in her voice which made McCarty look closely at her.

"Why, ma'am! Did you see him when he came in? Didn't he tell you?"

"Not a word, though if he'd seen the ghost of his own father he could not have been more stunned like. I came face to face with him at the from door. I'd been waiting up till Queenie La Montaine came in for she had sneaked in and out for three days, and owed me two weeks' board——"

"What time was it?"

"A little after twelve. He fairly reeled at the door, and I thought he had been drinking—though he had never touched liquor in the two months he had been here—until I saw his face. It was that white and set, and the two eyes of him sunk in and glittering, that I asked him if he was sick. He shook his head and mumbled something, as if he hardly recognized me, and then went stumbling up stairs, catchin' at the banisters and all but fallin'.

"He had the little hall room on the third floor, just over mine, and he walked the night through, with never a stop. Once I thought that I heard him call out, but I wasn't sure. I heard him comin' down again as soon as it was light, and I went up and looked in at his door. The bed had not been slept in, nor so much as his collar changed. About seven o'clock I met him comin' in with a pile of newspapers under his arm, and he looked ten years older."

"Didn't you ask him what was the matter?"

"No, sir; I did not. I thought it was some trouble of his own, maybe, and if he wanted me to know, he'd have told me himself. I knew if he felt like he looked, he'd not be down to the dining room for a bite, so I took him up a cup of coffee. He thanked me, but when Katie went up afterwards to do up his room, she brought it back without it having been touched. He did come down to dinner, but everyone was talkin' about the Rowntree murder, and nobody noticed him much."

"You told him after the officer had been here?"

"Yes, sir, and that Katie had turned him from the door. He only said: 'Don't you worrw, Mrs. Oriel; there is nothing wrong. If he comes again I'll see him.' But nobody did come, until to-day. He didn't run away; you've got to hand that to him; he stayed right here, and every day for the past two weeks has been like that first one I told you about. He walked the floor all night, and laid round readin' the newspapers all day."

"He went out once, though, didn't he?" McCarty asked. "That Thursday, three days after the trouble?"

"He did, in the morning. He was home by lunch time; but he did not come down for any. He changed, too. Each day he seemed to be getting more puzzled like, as if there was something about it all, whatever it was, that he couldn't get through his head, and the shocked, stunned look of him turned to a kind of settled sorrow that it would have cut you to the heart to see. I couldn't stand it any longer, and finally last week—Thursday it was—I came right out, and asked him what was troublin' him."

"What did he say?" McCarty leaned forward on his chair, and Dennis caught his breath sharply.

"He shook his head, and said he couldn't talk about it. That he had made a terrible mistake, and would just have to stand it alone. I asked him couldn't it be made right, and his look would have brought tears to the eyes of a graven image. 'I wish to God it could Mrs. Oriel" he said. 'I would give half of my life, all of it, if I could undo it, but it is too late now. I'll be leaving you Saturday. I'm going back out west——"

"There!" she broke off in dismay. "I've let that slip, and I didn't mean to; but that is all he said, anyway. When he left last night he wrung my hand and wished me luck; but when I said I hoped that he would come back some day, he cried out as if I'd stabbed him: 'Never! I don't want to see this town again as long as I live, and it would have been better if I had never set eyes on it!' That's all I can tell you if I died right here this minute, sir."

"I believe you," said McCarty hastily. "You've been more than kind, and you know we mean no harm to the lad. We'll not send out west for him for you have told me almost as much as he could. And now, ma'am, if you'll just let us have a look around his room, we won't be troubling you further."

"Come right up." She rose. "It's too bad it is not in order, but with one girl and her not worth her salt, and Sunday dinner, I didn't get around to it."

The hall room at the third floor, front, was small and tumbled about but not dirty. The bed and dresser were stripped bare and a pile of torn papers lay in a corner.

McCarty and Dennis stepped inside and stood looking casually about, while the landlady leaned against the door jamb and discoursed volubly of her late boarder's excellent qualities.

A complaining feminine voice called her from below, and as she hurried away McCarty closed the door softly, and locked it, then made a dive for the mass of papers.

Dennis had his head in the closet. "There's an old pair of pyjamas here, and two old collars," he announced. "Not a sign of anything else."

McCarty did not immediately reply. He stood as if turned to stone, staring down at a scrap of brig't orange paper which he held in his hands. It was the lower half of an old circus bill, and just under his thumb a glaring black headline spread itself before his eyes:

HUSBAND SAVES WIFE

From Suffering by Getting Her Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—"For many months I was not able to do my work owing to a weakness which caused backache and headaches. A friend called my attention to one of your newspaper advertisements and immediately my husband bought three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me. After taking two bottles I felt fine and my troubles caused by that weakness are a thing of the past. All women who suffer as I did should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. JAS. ROHRBERG, 620 Knapp St., N. S., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Women who suffer from any form of weakness, as indicated by displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, backache, headaches, nervousness or "the blues," should accept Mrs. Rohrberg's suggestion and give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a thorough trial.

For over forty years it has been correcting such ailments. If you have mysterious complications write for advice to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

FOOD ECONOMY
NATIONAL SAFETY

Save food

IF you cut down your food by one-fifth how can you still obtain the same amount of nourishment as before? The problem looks impossible, but it is not so in fact, for if you get more nourishment from the food you do eat you will solve it.

Take a concrete instance. If there are 5 units of nourishment in bread when you buy it, you expect to get 5 units when you eat it. As a matter of fact you do not get that at all, because a good deal of the nourishment is not absorbed by the body. To take a rough and ready simile. If you put coal on a fire in the evening, and leave the fire overnight, you will find that a good deal of the coal is unburnt in the morning when the fire is out. This is much what happens to food in the body, and the "unburnt" food is wasted.

There is a simple way to reduce this loss, a way tested and approved by the highest scientific authorities. It is to take Bovril.

It has long been an accepted fact, proved by independent scientific investigation, that Bovril has a body building power equal to from 10 to 20 times the amount taken. This is now confirmed in a very striking way in the following report from the "Medical Times":—

"The addition of a small teaspoonful of Bovril to the diet as a peptogenic before meals leads to more thorough digestion and assimilation and thus saves food.

"The diet may be then cut down from ¼ to ⅓ and the body still be adequately nourished."

THE FLYING ACCOLINIS

WORLD RENOWNED EUROPEAN ARTISTS IN THEIR DANGEROUS, DARING, DEATH-DEFYING ACT IN MID-AIR!

He turned slowly to Dennis and held out the torn bill.

"The Flying Man!" he said.

CHAPTER XXVI.

THE FLYING MAN.

Late that night a ringing clamor of bells rent the veil of McCarty's slumbers. He opened a heavy eye and struggled to a sitting position, but the clanging died swiftly in the echoing distance, and he sank back again upon his pillow with a grin at the thought of Dennis still on the job after a full day.

He was not grinning the next morning, however, when breakfastless, he hastened around to the engine house with a newspaper crushed in his hand. His face was very grave, and there was a curious, shocked expression in his eyes.

Dennis was not in evidence, but another fireman lounged in his accustomed chair, a wide white bandage about his head.

"Hello, Mike! What has happened you? Somebody hit you with a brick?"

Mike smiled faintly in acknowledgment of the pleasantry, but the smile ended in a grimace of pain.

"Rotten job last night, Mac. Some fool dropped a cigarette in a garage down on Fifty-fourth. I got a swipe from a falling beam, but wait till you see Denny!"

"My God! Where is he?" McCarty's face went white. "Mike, he's not—not——"

"He's up in the dormitory, sick as a pup! Overcome 'wice and he wouldn't quit, the game old chump!" Mike's voice was suspiciously hoarse. "He hauled me out or I'd have croaked. You needn't look like that, Mac, you'll not be ordering flowers for him yet awhile. Go on up and have a look at him; the lieutenant'll let you——"

McCarty needed no second bidding. With his heart suddenly stilled within him he turned, and diving into the engine house choked out his request. Permission readily granted him, he was up the narrow stairway three steps at a time and peered with blurred eyes at the row of narrow cots.

"Hello, there!" a weak but cheerful voice wheezed near at hand, and two blood shot eyes goggled up at him from a drawn, haggard face. "What is the good word?"

"Denny!" McCarty whispered and sat down heavily on the side of the cot. "Denny!"

"Get off my leg!" the invalid commanded. "You missed it last night, Mac! 'Twas a grand little display of fire works while it lasted."

"Oh, Denny!" his visitor gulped. "I heard the bells, but little I thought —— If anything had happened to you——"

"Well, it didn't you thundering baby!" Two hands met and gripped tight and there was a brief pause. "I'll be out of this in a day and none the worse. But there is something up, or you would not be chasing round here so early in the morning. Has Terhune stolen a march on you, and nabbed the fellow?"

The adroit mention of his confrere's name acted as a bracer and McCarty straightened.

"Terhune! I've no doubt that he's rigging up some more little machines to pump the truth out of the Foxes. It's Quimby; he's cashed in."

"Skipped!" Dennis raised himself on a wavering elbow. "The white-livered son of a gun! He beat it with the girl's coin."

McCarty shook his head slowly.

"He took no money with him where he's gone," he said solemnly. "You mind when we were up on the roof of the Glamorgan yesterday afternoon—what a high wind there was? Quimby made a flight in his aeroplane and it turned turtle with him! He dropped like a stone and when they reached him it was all over. He couldn't have known when he hit the ground."

"Holy Saints!" Dennis sank back with a look of awe. "I didn't think that he had it in him! Coward, he was the way he would have treated his stepdaughter, but he made a nervy finish!"

(To be Continued.)

Bogus Passports.

"England of to-day is a vast military camp," said Dr. Hewett to Julius Chambers of The Brooklyn Eagle, just after his return from a four years' stay in that country. "Entrance to the country is closely guarded and, further, investigation regarding the identity of its possessor always follows. I had an experience after passing the winter months in south of France.

"Landing at Southampton, my passport was taken and I was told to wait in an adjacent room until the document was examined. I was shown into a windowless apartment, where I was detained three hours. Meanwhile, the train I had planned to take had gone. Finally, my turn for inquisition arrived, and I was taken before a board of three officers.

"'You spent the winter at Nice?' said the chief examiner.

"'Yes.'

"'At what hotel did you stay?'

"I mentioned its name.

"'What street is it on?'

"I told him.

"'Did you visit Ez?' Ez is an interesting ancient walled village, between Nice and Monaco.

"I answered that I had not visited Ez, but admitted had looked down upon it from the Cornice road. The officer then said:

"'Your passport is all right.'

"'Certain it is,' I commented, 'but please tell me the cause of my detention.'

"'We are hunting four men with forged passports bearing your name,' was the reply.

"In Paris I had been told there were 7,000 forged American passports in use in France alone."

HEALS INFLAMED ITCHING SKIN

A Home Treatment Which Relieves and Cures Eczema, Salt Rheum, and All Itching Skin Diseases, and Leaves the Skin Soft, Smooth and Natural.

Woodstock, Ont., March 7.—As a means of allaying inflammation, relieving the dreadful itching and healing and curing itching skin diseases, ulcers, and eruptions, we believe that we can prove that Dr. Chase's Ointment is the most potent preparation that it is possible to obtain.

So many extreme cases have been cured, so much intense and continued agony has been relieved, and such a host of people have volunteered their evidence in this regard that we challenge anyone to produce like endorsement for any Ointment or any preparation which is recommended for such diseases.

Dr. Chase's Ointment certainly stands alone, unapproached, and unrivalled as a healer of the skin, and positive cure for itching skin diseases. From pimples to eczema, from chilblains to ulcers, each and every form of itching skin disease have been cured by this great ointment.

Mrs. J. Chapman, 408 Dundas Street, Woodstock, Ont., writes: "About three years ago, I suffered greatly from an awful rash and irritation of the skin on my chest and back. I could not bear to touch it, and had to wear very loose clothing so nothing would rub against it. At night when I would lie down, I could get neither sleep nor rest. I tried different remedies and doctors' treatments, but never got any relief. At last my daughter advised me to try Dr. Chase's Ointment. I did so, and after the first application I was able to get the first night's good rest that I had for a long time. I continued using the Ointment until I was completely cured."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is known in almost every community. Ask your neighbours about it. There is probably a marked cure at your door which you can investigate. The cures made by this preparation will stand investigation. 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

True Blue

By R. Knorr

"What a fine sunset!" Harry Stillwell pointed to the red and orange western sky. His companion sighed, but said nothing, as with his back to the window he was carefully putting away his engraver's tools.

"Poor fellow, I forgot he's color blind," Harry muttered, then continued louder: "But, say, Ed, don't you see any of the colors out there?"

Edward Dalton shook his head.

"Life is to me one long gray day. Of course, I don't know just how you normal-eyed people see things. I distinguish what you call blue, such as the sky on a clear sunny day, and flowers like the violet and bluebell, and I also perceive what you call yellow. But all the other colors you speak of are to me only so many variations of gray, more or less luminous. What you call color, I call degrees of light and shade."

"And there you have the immense advantage over us in our profession," said Stillwell, to smooth away his thoughtless question that had pained his friend. "When in engraving we don't know whether a color should come out light or dark, you see the right tone at once. Are you going to Maud Leender's dance this evening?" He had abruptly changed the subject.

"She asked me to come, so I suppose I must," answered Dalton, with little eagerness to go.

The two young men left the studio together. For the length of a whole block Stillwell dilated on the charms of Miss Leander, hinting that he was the preferred suitor to the hand of the heiress. Dalton listened in silence; but at the first corner he turned down a by-street to escape from his loquacious companion.

Edward Dalton, the congenial color-blind, spoke truth when he said that life was to him one long gray day. Morbidly sensitive to his visual defect, he was becoming moody and unsociable. He imagined that he lost more of the joys of life than he perhaps really did. And he found scant compensation in the fact that his eyes were exquisitely alive to form, to the luminosity of the colors he did not see and hence to gradations of light and shade imperceptible to his many friends. The latter gift, characteristic of the color-blind, made him invaluable to his employer and had won him a fine position. And yet his hours away from his work were more than ever given over to gloomy thoughts. For he felt himself handicapped in striving for the prize of life. And the fairest of these was at that very moment an object of rivalry among his friends.

Maud Leander was the prettiest girl in town and an heiress besides. A handsome fortune had been left her by an eccentric maiden aunt on condition that she be engaged on her twenty-fifth birthday. Otherwise the money was to revert to some charity. An easy enough condition to fulfill, one would think, for a girl of Maud's popularity. And, indeed, suitors were not lacking. Many of them were merely fortune hunters. Annoyed by the persistence of these Maud had grown to dislike them all, and had vowed not to marry any one among them.

There was only one young man in town Maud cared to think of as her future husband. But Edward Dalton kept aloof. The sense of his infirmity hung over him. And, moreover, the thought of her money kept him back. He detested fortune-hunting. Had she been poor as he was he might have asked her to share his growing prospects. The heiress could not ask. Yet he loved Maud and was miserable because he would not tell her so.

Maud divined his feelings from the shy deference with which he approached her, in grateful contrast to the tongue worship of her suitors. She therefore made up her mind either to marry him or to let the money go and remain a bachelormaid. But he would not speak, and she dared not, for fear of seeming unmaidenly in his eyes, while the fatal birthday was fast approaching, and a score of young men hung on her decision.

Dalton went unwillingly to the dance. It tormented him to see her surrounded by that throng of flatterers, all unworthy of her, one of whom would soon carry off the prize. It never occurred to him that he stood a better chance than any of them.

As he entered the room Maud was chatting with Stillwell. But she disengaged herself immediately and beckoned to him.

"I'm so glad you've come," she said cordially. "This first dance belongs to you," and off she went with him, leaving Stillwell to gaze after her as if his rightful property had been snatched from him. His frowns promised nothing good to his friend. As he watched them swing around the room an ugly thought took shape in his mind. Seizing the first opportune moment he asked Maud for a dance.

"It's hot here," he said after he had obtained her promise, "would you not rather go into a cooler room for a while?"

"Yes, if you like, for a moment," she said.

Stillwell glanced around to where Dalton was talking with another girl. Then he quickly took Maud out into an adjoining conservatory, and seated her on a bench hidden by ferns.

"I'm glad that Dalton seems to be enjoying himself with the girls this evening," he began artfully. "Poor fellow, his infirmity does make him unsociable at times."

"His infirmity? Why, what is the matter with him?" she asked alarmed. "I have never heard of anything."

"Don't you know that he's color-blind?" he rapped out.

"Color-blind?" Maud echoed.

"Yes. He's really unfit to be among people. It's a wonder he doesn't make a guy of himself, going about in green trousers and red waistcoat, for he'd never know the difference. He knows it, too, and is getting more morose in consequence. People with such infirmities are always unpleasant to live with for any time."

"Doesn't he see any color at all?" Maud asked.

"Only blue and yellow, I believe," he answered.

Maud grew thoughtful, and Stillwell took her back into the room, curious to know what would be the effect of his words. She danced little after that, and Dalton soon disappeared.

Ten days before her birthday Maud Leander suddenly took it into her head to have her parlor re-carpeted and rehung.

"I'm tired of those red hangings," was all the explanations she vouchsafed to the aunt who lived with her. "I want other colors,—blue for the carpet, and white and gold for the wall."

"It seems foolish to do this now," said the aunt, disapprovingly. "With your birthday so near at hand, you should think how best you can fulfill the conditions of the will, and decorate your rooms afterwards. It's a trifling matter now."

"The color of my rooms is by no means a trifle just now," said Maud emphatically, and then relapsed into silence.

"What have you decided to do on your birthday?" the aunt asked again.

Maud shrugged, with a twinkle in her eye.

"You know that you must decide then or lose a life income," the aunt persisted. "It would be a pity to have all that money go out of the family."

"If I can't get the husband I want I won't take any, and I don't care who gets the money. I'm not a bargain to be given away in that fashion. These hangers-on have just disgusted me. They don't come for me, but for my money, and I won't have one of them. I want a man who will love me for my own sake. And if there is none, I'd rather lose a life income and be my own mistress."

"You girls are getting altogether too independent," sighed Aunt Mary, who belonged to an older generation.

By the end of the week the room was re-hung, a symphony in blue and gold, and Maud was receiving the duty-calls after her party. All her suitors came. And Edward Dalton came, too, one stormy evening when no one else ventured out, and Stillwell was kept away by an appointment.

Entering the parlor, that in its bright colors had hitherto seemed to him merely grey, he opened his eyes wide in surprise. What a transformation! It was radiant with color and light, and in this blue glow stood she, no longer the grey figure he had had always found her, but gowned in blue from head to foot. Never had she looked so bewitching. And never had she been so gracious. Love overbrimmed his heart, and yet his tongue found no words to utter it. When, after an hour he rose to go and her soft hand lingered a moment in his for the good-night and her eyes were fixed intent on his with a question, passionate words rose to his lips. Then suddenly he turned and left her.

Maud went back into her blue-and-gold parlor with tears in her eyes. Had it all been an illusion? He did not care for her? Long and long she thought it all over. She had done all what maiden could do to make a man speak, and all for nothing!

There still was time. Day by day she waited, but he did not come again. She lost heart for everything and even refused to join a party her best friend gave in her honor on the eve of her birthday. That evening she wanted to be alone, and gave strict orders to the maid to admit no visitors. Then, gowned in her pale blue muslin, she went down into her blue-and-gold parlor to weep over the dream of her hopes that were vanishing. And as she sat there, all the color seemed to fade out of the room.

"I must see Miss Leander, if only for one moment."

She flew to the door.

"Oh, come in Mr. Dalton. I've been waiting for you," she burst out, with so much fervor that his love, too, at last was kindled into speech.

When Aunt Mary came down, an hour later, she found them sitting hand in hand on the sofa, happy as two children.

"Well, I'm glad it's you, Edward," she said cordially, shaking his hand in both her own.

And glad everybody else in town was, except the disconcerted suitors.

ALL AT HOME SHOULD PREPARE FOR WAR

The first test a man is put through for either war or life insurance is an examination of his water. This is most essential because the kidneys play a most important part in causing premature old age and death. The more injurious the poisons passing through the kidneys the sooner comes decay—so says Dr. Pierce of Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., who further advises all people who are past thirty to preserve the vitality of the kidneys and free the blood from poisonous elements, such as uric acid—drink plenty of water—sweat some daily and take Anuric, double strength, before meals.

An-u-ric is a discovery of Dr. Pierce, and can be obtained at drug stores. For that backache, lumbago, rheumatism, "rusty" joints, swollen feet or hands, due to uric acid in the blood, Anuric quickly dissolves the uric acid as hot water does sugar. Send 10 cents to Dr. Pierce for trial pkg.

Thorold, Ont.—"I think Anuric is the best I have ever taken. My kidneys had given me trouble for some time. I would suffer from backaches and also swelling of the limbs. I took Anuric and it has entirely cured me of all my backache and has strengthened my kidneys so I feel safe in recommending it to others who suffer."—Mrs. C. A. Clarke, Box 1179.

Toronto, Ont.—"For the last eight years I have suffered with kidney trouble and rheumatism. It began with pains in my back and finally left my back and went down into the foot. It developed into a chronic case. I tried every medicine I could hear of and consulted some good doctors, but still I kept on suffering. About a year ago a friend advised me to give Anuric a trial, and am happy to say I am today a well man—never feel any traces of my ailment no matter what the weather conditions may be. Anuric is a real kidney medicine in every sense."—E. P. Garrison, 5 Matilda Street.

CANADA

The Dominion Income War Tax

Its Meaning and Application

THE Dominion Income War Tax Act, passed at the last session of Parliament is now in force and all those liable to taxation under the provisions of the Act must file the required returns for the year 1917, on or before 31st March, 1918.

The Act provides that there shall be assessed, levied, and paid upon the 1917 income of every person residing or ordinarily resident in Canada, a tax upon income exceeding $1500 in the case of unmarried persons and widows or widowers without dependent children, and upon income exceeding $3000 in the case of all other persons.

Corporations and joint stock companies carrying on business in Canada, no matter how created or organized, shall pay the normal tax upon income over $3000. The fiscal year of corporations and joint stock companies may be adopted if desired.

Your Immediate Obligation.—You are now required by law to fill out in triplicate, one or more of the five special forms enumerated below. Read the particulars about the forms provided, then note the form or forms that fit your case. Don't forget to make three copies. You keep one copy, and in the case of Forms T1 and T2, deliver two to the Inspector of Taxation for your district. In the case of Forms T3, T4 and T5, two copies must be filed with the Commissioner of Taxation at Ottawa.

Penalties.—Default in filing returns renders the person or persons liable on summary conviction to a penalty of one hundred dollars for each day during which the default continues. Any person making a false statement in any return or in any information required by the Minister of Finance shall be liable on summary conviction to a penalty not exceeding ten thousand dollars or to six months imprisonment, or to both fine and imprisonment.

FORMS TO BE FILLED IN AND FILED

Individuals.—Form T1 is for all individuals having the requisite income. Fill in pages 1, 2 and 3, make no marks on page 4.

In giving particulars of dividends received, state amount received from each company, listing Canadian and Foreign Companies separately.

Partnerships as such need not file returns, but the individuals forming the partnerships must.

Corporations and Joint Stock Companies must fill in Form T2, showing total income. Amount paid during the year to Patriotic and Canadian Red Cross Funds, and other approved war funds, should be shown under Exemptions and Deductions. A financial statement should also be attached. In giving particulars of dividends received, state amount received from each Company, listing Canadian and Foreign Companies separately.

Trustees, Executors, Administrators of Estates and Assignees use Form T3, to state particulars of the distribution of income from estates they are handling. A separate form is required for each estate and total incomes must be given as well as distribution thereof.

Employers. On Form T4 employers shall make a list of the names of employees and amounts paid to each in salaries, bonuses, commission, or other remuneration wherever the combined sum of such remuneration for the calendar year 1917 amounted to $1000 or more. This applies to all classes, regardless of number of such employees.

Corporations Listing Shareholders.—Corporations and Joint Stock Companies shall list on Form T5 Shareholders residing in Canada to whom Dividends were paid during the calendar year 1917, stating the amounts of dividends and bonuses paid to each.

Don't wait till the last minute. Get the necessary forms now, and make your information accurate and complete.

MIXED REFLECTIONS

CHAPTER X.

As we turned toward home I forgot the man who had reminded me of George. It was silly. He never would be up-town to a fashionable restaurant in the middle of the day. But I did not forget Merton Gray, nor the look of admiration I had seen in his eyes.

He was young too. Perhaps he would be more tolerant of mistakes, my mistakes, than George's older friends. He was nice-looking, too. He was tall and dark and slender. There was none of the affectations of dress of the usual artist. He looked—well, like my brothers, and the boys at home would look if they were dressed in the fashionable garments he wore. I was sure I should like him. I liked his name, too. "Merton" It was different, and some way seemed to suit him.

Then my glance fell on the books. Why had Madge Loring laughed so uproariously when I told her they were etiquette books? Didn't people, smart people, need to read them and was that the reason she laughed? Perhaps they were not what I needed after all. But it had not seemed nice to be laughed at, and not know the reason. Oh, this social business was so hard to learn. Would I ever be able to make George proud to take me out instead of ashamed?

I wondered if I better tell George I had bought them. He would know it at the end of the month when the bill came in. But should I wait until then and let him find it out that way, or tell him now? I was becoming so afraid of doing the wrong thing—of annoying him—that I hesitated over the simplest matters. I was fast losing all initiative; fast having all individuality absorbed because of my anxiety to please my husband.

I had been pleased as a child over my purchase; over the thought that compelled it. But now I was chilled and frightened. Had I again done something I should not? Surely Mrs. Loring had some reason for her merriment.

BOOKS ON ETIQUETTE PROVE AN ANNOYANCE.

Then I thought of what I had said anent Merton Gray, at which she had again laughed. I had said that he did not look at all like a famous person. I really had meant it as a compliment; but she had seemed to think it was something funny, to be laughed at. If she repeated it to him would he also feel in the same way? Or, the thought left me aghast. Would he feel insulted, that I had belittled him? Oh, dear, I sighed, would I ever learn? And was life worth living when one had to be so particular what one said and did?"

When we reached home, instead of carrying the books into the library, the natural place, I had Annie take them into the guest room. I had not decided what to do about telling George; and he wouldn't see them in there.

All the afternoon I pored over their contents. I read so many rules for behaviour, so many silly—so it seemed to me—directions how one should act, that by the time I dressed for dinner my mind was in a whirl. On the morrow I would take only one subject and try and find out all there was to learn of it before I proceeded to another. In that way I could remember what I read.

I wanted to be "good form" as George called it. Wanted to for his sake, more than for my own.

Dinner was ready when he came in. So we had no time to talk until we met at table.

A DINNER TABLE CONVERSATION.

"How's your arm?" was his first question.

Fine! and oh, George! I saw Mrs. Loring to-day. I took her to the Elite Restaurant in the car. She had an engagement there." I could not fail to notice the start he gave, but I was so interested in what I had to tell him that I went right on talking, "and she said you had accepted an engagement to dinner for a week from to-night; and she introduced me to a Mr. Grey, Merton Gray, an artist who is to be there, and"—

"Where did you see Gray?" he interrupted.

"In the street. She called to him, to find out if he had an engagement for that night. And George it isn't to be a big party, there are to be only twelve people."

"That's quite a good sized dinner party," he said, dryly.

"She told Mr. Gray we were going and he seemed quite pleased. Do you know him well?"

"Fairly He goes with a younger set usually. But he is an addition to a dinner party — at least the women seem to think so. What else did you do? You seem to have had rather an exciting day, as far as I can judge."

Should I tell him about the books? I decided not to; but I felt guilty.

"Oh, nothing. I came right home after I left her at the restaurant."

"You will need a new dress for that dinner. Go to Mercedes and order one. Better order another white one to take the place of the one spoiled the night you cut your arm."

"All right. I wish you would go with me."

"I will for the fitting. They may take advantage of your ignorance and not do good work."

To-morrow—Happy Reprieves.

Be Careful What You Wash Your Hair With

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for it is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

Building Concrete Ships.

Concrete ships will displace the wooden-walled Norwegian barque, it is reported, the first Norwegian concrete ship having been launched at the Porsgrund Cement Works, in the presence of the prime minister, M. Knudsen. The ship is built on an entirely new system, with the bottom upwards, in which extraordinary position the launching took place on a sort of underlying sledge, which glided out with the ship. When the water was reached the hull became detached from the sledge and gradually sank up to a certain point, then subsequently slowly righted itself. The ship, which is of 200 tons burden, was built in three weeks, but the next will only require about half that time as the original frame will be used for each subsequent ship of the same size. The casting of the ship, when the frame is completed will this time take only two days. It is intended to start the wholesale building of iron and concrete ships of 200, 500 and 1,000 tons. A 1,000-ton ship will be completed in six weeks.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Hair that loses its colour and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even colour, that beautiful dark shade of hair, which is so attractive, use only this old time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite to impart colour and a youthful appearance to the hair. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

A Disciplined Nation.

We have kept the meatless meat-days
And have lived to tell the tale.
We've accepted wheatless wheat-days
And have never raised a wail.
Now we plan for workless work-days.
And we see the workless works:
All we need, to get the work done,
Is to find the shirkless shirks!

Rights of Man.

The superstitious awe, the enslaving reverence, that formerly surrounded affluence, is passing away in all countries, and leaving the possessor of property to the convulsion of accidents. When wealth and splendor, instead of fascinating the multitude, excite emotions of disgust; when, instead of drawing forth admiration, it is beheld as an insult upon wretchedness; when the ostentatious appearance it makes serves to call the right of it in question, the case of property becomes critical, and it is only in a system of justice that the possessor can contemplate security

Everyone Should Drink Hot Water In the Morning

Wash away all the stomach, liver, and bowel poisons before breakfast.

To feel your best day in and day out, to feel clean inside, no sour bile to coat your tongue and sicken your breath or dull your head; no constipation, bilious attacks, sick headache, colds, rheumatism or gassy, acid stomach, you must bathe on the inside like you bathe outside. This is vastly more important, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do, says a well-known physician.

To keep these poisons and toxins well flushed from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, drink before breakfast each day, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from your pharmacist. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless. Drink phosphated hot water every morning to rid your system of these vile poisons and toxins; also to prevent their formation.

As soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and purifying, so limestone phosphate and hot water before breakfast, act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

Don't Diet Yourself TO CURE DYSPEPSIA IT ISN'T NECESSARY

The sufferer from dyspepsia and indigestion who has to pick and choose his food, is the most miserable of all mankind.

Even the little he does eat causes such torture, and is digested so imperfectly that it does him little good.

What dyspeptics need is not dieting, or artificial digestants, but something that will put their stomach right so it will manufacture its own digestive ferments.

For forty years now Burdock Blood Bitters has been making weak stomachs strong, and curing severe cases of dyspepsia and indigestion that other remedies were powerless to reach.

It restores the stomach to a normal healthy condition so, that the food no longer causes distress, but is thoroughly digested and assimilated, and goes on its way making rich, red blood.

Mrs. Henry Shaw, Campbellton, N.B., writes: "I was for five years troubled with a weak stomach, and could not eat any food that would agree with me. I tried different medicines, but could not get cured. A friend advised me to take Burdock Blood Bitters. I took four bottles, and now I am in perfect health."

Sunday School Lesson Questions

March 10. 1918.

Jesus Restoring Life and Health. (May be used with missionary applications). Mark 5:21-43.

Golden Text: Himself took our infirmities and bare our diseases. Matt. 8:17.

1. Verse 21. What were the attractions in Jesus which drew the multitude to him?

2. Verse 22. Why would you say or not that when a great man is in trouble he craves help and sympathy the same as common people?

3. Verse 23. When our little children are sick, and are likely to pass into a state of conscious and eternal bliss how ought our feelings to be affected?

4. Verse 23. Most of the rulers of the Jews were antagonistic to Jesus; is it possible that Jairus would have been, but for his trouble, and in any event, what is the general influence of a great sorrow upon a man's trust in Jesus?

5. Is such faith as Jairus had natural or supernatural, and why? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

6. Verse 24. Jesus in those days responded to very call for help; what reason have we to believe that he is now equally responsive to every call?

7. Verse 24. When we are in trouble what do we need to do to get adequate help from God?

8. Verses 25-28. What is the best thing for a man or a woman to do who is afflicted with a chronic disease?

9. Why would you say that this woman had true faith, or that her faith was mixed with superstition?

10. Verses 25-28. Many good people that trust in God are also full of superstition; what effect does this weakness have upon God's dealings with them?

11. What good reason is there to believe that sick people to-day may have the same simple faith for bodily healing as this woman had, and be healed from their maladies?

12. Verses — 4. Was it the mere touch of Jesus' garment that healed this woman or conscious effort on the part of Jesus? Give your reasons.

13. Verses 29-34. Was there, or not, and why, any more virtue in Jesus' garment in itself, than in that of any other man?

14. How did Jesus know, with so many people jostling him, of the particular touch of his woman?

15. What is the ground for the belief that God is aware of every thought, word and deed of every individual?

16. When we open our hearts to God and make him our confidential friend, what are always the results?

17. Verses 35, 36. When matters are as black as night, and our troubles seem beyond remedy, why is it still safe to be of good courage and to have faith?

18. Verse 37. Why is it that there are only certain persons we can work with effectually, while others, equally good people, are a hindrance to us?

19. Verses 38-43. What can you say for, or against, profuse weeping and elaborate mourning emblems at the funerals of Christians?

Lesson for Sunday, March 17, 1918. Jesus Sending forth the Twelve. (May be used with Missionary Applications) —Mark 6:1-31.

Many Casualties When Narva Was Shelled By Huns

Russians Tried to Make a Stand Outside of the City But Were Driven Back, Retreating to Janburg, Which They Have Fortified--Heavy Artillery Fire is Reported on the West Front.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Joseph Shaplen—Copyright 1918 by the United Press).

PETROGRAD, March 5.—The War Commissary to-day published a plan for arming the whole Russian people, offering an immediate opportunity for all desiring to learn military science to prepare for a renewal of the war in the future.

After the withdrawal from Narva, the Russians retreated to Jamburg, which they fortified, with the aid of reinforcements from Petrograd. Railwaymen from Narva reported the Germans halted operations in accordance with General Hoffman's orders.

They say the bombardment of Narva was begun on Sunday, and was renewed with intensity on Monday, causing numerous casualties.

The Russians attempted a stand outside the city, but were obliged to fall back owing to the enemy's artillery fire. The German occupation of the city was accomplished on Monday afternoon.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 8.—The Finnish Government has asked the German Emperor to appoint Prince Oscar, the fifth son of the Emperor, King of Finland, the Afton Tidningen, of Stockholm, says it learns from diplomatic circles there.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 8.—(Official).—The enemy's artillery was active last night in the neighbourhood of Ribecourt and the Scarpe Valley. Considerable artillery activity developed also on both sides in the Ypres sector, between the Menin Road and Houthoist Forest.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 8.—Ensign N. V. Krylenko, Commander-in-Chief of the Bolsheviki Army, has resigned. The resignation was brought about owing to differences of principles between Krylenko and the Council of People's Commissaries.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 8.—The House of Commons late last night agreed unanimously to the vote of credit of 3 billion dollars moved yesterday by Chancellor of the Exchequer Andrew Bonar Law. This brings the total of the votes of credit during the war to 34 billion dollars.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 8.—For the first week of March the British casualties were 3,345, the lowest for several months. The official report was:

Killed or died of wounds, 691; wounded or missing, 2652.

The lowest previous week for several months was the last week of February, in which there were 3,571 casualties.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 8.—The French lost only two small vessels by submarines last week.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 8.—A Russian Revolutionary army recaptured Jamburg, 68 miles from Petrograd, on the morning of March 5. The Russian Bolsheviki still hold Kiev, the capital of the Ukraine.

AUSTRIAN TROOPS SENT TO FRANCE

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

ROME, March 8.—Austrian troops have been sent to France, the Prussian Minister of War announced in the Reichstag, according to a despatch received from Berlin to-day. He refused to give the number.

Council Will Dispose Of The 93rd Instruments

Property Committee Pass a Resolution to This Effect

At the close of last night's meeting of the Property committee of the City Council the following resolution was passed:

"That a reply be sent to the Great War Veterans' Association's letter saying that they would only take the band instruments unconditionally, and the Association be informed that the instruments are in the custody of the Council under a document which provides that they be disposed of for the benefit of the citizens and that under these circumstances the Council does not feel that they are in a position to give the instruments unconditionally or without compensation, and that the agreement which was proposed and which, it was understood, was accepted by the Association, appears to the Council to embody fair terms to both parties and that the Veterans' Association be informed that it is the intention of the Council to dispose of the instruments, and that if the Association does not wish to have them on the terms of the agreement the Council will receive an offer for them any time on or before April 30th next."

Frank Jenne Says:

Spring suits and spring overcoats reach the very apex of style and individuality this year.

In the materials I am showing for made-to-measure suits there is an immense diversity—English tweeds, Irish Donegal tweeds, serges, vicunas, cheviots and worsteds.

The styles are more conservative, but up-to-the-minute and attractive in every detail. Get your order in before Easter. "Come to me."

DRIVE IN MACEDONIA

German Smash on Salonika Front is Expected to Be the Next Move in Order to Remove the Menace of An Allied Attack

A NEW PLUNDER QUEST

(By R. J. Bender.)
(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Germany's plunder quest through the helpless countries of the near east is now expected to swing next into Macedonia. The possibility of this drive on the Salonica front by the Teutons with the forces released from the Russian front is occupying the attention of the Allies' leader to-day.

As military men view the situation to-day the armies of democracy are passing through their darkest hour of the war.

Germany has arranged in addition to the wealthy industrial districts in Western Russia the cession of Batum in Transcaucia to Turkey. Near Batum are some of the richest manganese ore deposits in the world. Already Germany controls the vastly rich oil fields of Roumania and Galicia, and is now welding the links which will render the grain stores of Ukrainia hers in the future.

By driving through Roumania to Odessa Germany will effect the way for shipping from Transcaucia and Ukrainia the needed foodstuffs, livestick, oil and other supplies, and to assure this indefinitely for the future are to prevent a recurrence of her recent near famine Germany is expected to drive at the Salonica front and attempt to clear away the last vestige of danger from the Allied forces at the rear.

IS FILLED WITH HUNS

Wealthy Germans Send Their Families to Switzerland For the Duration of the War in Order to Get a Square Meal

HUNS ARE HUNGRY

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By William Philip Simms.)

ZURICH, Switzerland, March 8. — Hungry Germans fill this city and Switzerland generally to overflowing. They are down here to get a square meal. Rich Germans are sending their families to Switzerland from Germany for the duration of the war. Others not so rich, but with the price, are in the habit of sending their folks down here periodically for the "load." Still others, the middle class, send their children to Switzerland, boarding them out amon gthe thrifty farmers and town people.

There is no a vacant place, chalet, flat or hovel in all Switzerland so far as I am able to discover. The Germans and their hungry allies are occupying most of them.

Berne is packed with German officers and secret agents. So is the rest of Switzerland, the country which normally houses a smaller population than New York. They quickly preempted all valuable dwellings. I am told that there are 85,000 Germans here. There are many rich Turks and Bulgars and not a few Greeks. Tino, who once was King Constantine, lives here in a sort of castle on top of a hill, and about him is quite a colony of refugees. He is perfectly confident that he will return to Greece as King one of these days.

But in all these the Swiss are the chief sufferers. Of their meagre food supplies they must divide with all alike. They do it with very good grace. They feed thousands of interned prisoners and take care of the sick of all the belligarent armies.

MORE "PEP" IS WANTED

General March, United States Chief of Staff, Emphasizes the Need of Speeding Up Shipbuilding and Other War Activities

SHIPS BADLY NEEDED

(By Carl D. Groat.)
(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, March 8.—America must speed up her shipbuilding so that her armies abroad can grow and so they and the Allies can be supplied, and she must put more pep into the war work.

This is the doctrine Chief of Staff March has laid down to the other war chiefs. Seeking to inject some of his own "pep" into the preparations he has sought to visualize American needs and to impress upon such leaders as Chairman Hurley of the Shipping Board, and Van McCormack of the War Trade Board, the need for speed and the fullest energy.

Big guns are a paramount need. March is understood to believe that these are even of more value than men, and he says that more ships must be hurried up to meet the supply problem.

The Allies are politely but constantly pressing this Government for more ships, and their views are reflected by March, Col. House, and others, who have had a full inside view of the situation.

March is convinced that the Allied line in the west cannot be broken, but he is impressing upon his co-workers that the German line will last correspondingly longer if guns, planes and other supplies along with a sizeable army are delayed.

ELEVEN KILLED IN AIR RAID ON LONDON

LIQUID FIRE USED AGAINST THE AMERICANS

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, March 8. — (Bulletin).—A German attack with liquid fire on the American forces northwest of Toul (in the St. Mihiel sector) was repulsed Thursday, according to dispatches received here to-day.

Forty-six Others Injured When Enemy Make Surprise Attack —First Time a Raid Has Been Attempted When There Was No Moon.

HOUSES DEMOLISHED

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterboro Examiner.)

LONDON, March 8.—Seven or eight German airplanes made a raid over England last night.

One of them reached London and dropped bombs in the north-west and south-west districts of the city.

Another raider dropped bombs in the northern district of London, demolishing several houses.

Eleven persons were killed and 46 others were injured in last night's raid, according to latest police reports. It is feared that an additional six bodies are in the ruins of the houses wrecked.

The raid demonstrated that German aviators no longer depend upon the moonlight. It was the first time the enemy had attempted a night raid over London when there was no moon. The stars were out, however, and there was little wind.

Londoners were taken by surprise when the warning signals sounded. The theatres were just closing. The streets were soon cleared.

The warning to avoid danger from shrapnel was generally heeded, everyone taking cover.

For a time the gun fire was heavy.

LONDON, March 8.—Reports from the coast declare that a vivid aurora borealis over the North Sea illuminated the coast and made possible last night's moonless air raid.

Another feature of the raid was a strong breeze which most persons believed hindered the operations of the hostile airplanes. In northern towns, where bombs burst, a dance was in progress. It was not interrupted, although the roar of the bombs drowned out the music.

BABY ABANDONED; YEAR-OLD-BOY LEFT ON STREET

"I Am Alone in the World, Please Take Me For Your Own Little Boy" Was Message Pinned to Infant's Garments

INVESTIGATING CASE

"I am alone in the world. Please take me for your own little boy. Age one year, April 24th. Herbert Jackson."

Such was the message, half printed, half written, pinned to the little garments on a baby left in front of Gobeen and Matchett's grocery, corner of Rubidge and Dalhousie streets this morning, and addressed to Mrs. Matchett.

The child was abandoned by his parents or keepers early this morning and left comfortably tucked into a black baby carriage. Mr. Matchett and several of his customers, noted the carriage at 8 o'clock but thinking it to be left by some person who would return, neglected to look into the matter until late in the morning, when to his surprise he found the child addressed to himself. It was taken to the home of a trained nurse who lives near by and examination found it to be in apparently splendid health, although showing by its emaciated limbs lack of proper nourishment. The clothes as well as the child's body are clean, and at the foot of the carriage was a little bundle containing his clothes, spotlessly clean, and a celluloid doll.

The police were notified, and an investigation by Mr. Powell, of the Shelter, will be made at once.

Rev. P. J. Kelly Going Over As Chaplain

Has Been Chosen For Work Overseas and May Go Within a Month

Rev. P. J. Kelly of Parry Sound, has been visiting old friends in Peterboro this week. He has been accepted for overseas service as a chaplain and expects to depart for Europe before Easter. His appointment will be generally regarded as a happy one, especially by Catholic men in the service who have known him in the old days of peace. Rev. Father Kelly has enjoyed a wide popularity. He has retained that virile interest in the affairs of men that marked his young manhood, and is of the type of chaplain particularly desired for service at the front. It is understood that his brother, Egbert, is training with the Royal Flying corps.

G.T.R. Engineer Was Overcome In His Cab

Engineer Hall of the G. T. R., was forced to leave his engine at Keene yesterday to seek the services of a doctor. At Hastings about 4 p. m., he wired Peterboro that he would have to visit a doctor here because of extreme pains in his back, but on the way up he found it impossible to remain at the throttle farther than to Keene. It was stated that he had either strained his back or suffered from a severe attack of lumbago. He was taken through to Lindsay last night.

City Receives More Money For Market Tolls

Mr. Walter Fisher Will Pay $800 For the Concession

At a meeting of the Property Committee of the City Council held last evening, it was decided to recommend the extension of the fire limits to Dublin street. The limit will also be extended east and west in order to square the block up.

Market Tolls.

The ender for the market tolls was awarded to Mr. Walter Fisher at a contract price of $800. Last year the city received $725 for this concession. The only other tender was that of Mr. Henry Crane. His figure was $625.

Mr. F. J. Moore complained of a neighbour placing ashes on a private lane and thereby causing annoyance.

City Solicitor Gordon will be asked to give a legal opinion as to whether it is a matter that the Council should deal with.

A letter was read from Mr. F. W. Miller stating that the reed instruments of the 93rd band were drying up and recommending that they be taken apart and soaked in oil. The matter was laid over.

The Committee will ask for tenders for the cleaning and painting of the smokestack at the incinerator.

NEW MANAGER FOR WOOLWORTH COMPANY

Mr. L. A. Simmons Replaces Mr. Gole Who Goes To St. Catharines.

Changes in management in the Woolworth Company store have brou. t a new resident to the city in the person of Mr. L. A. Simmons, who has already taken charge and is inaugurating his coming to the city with a Special War Economy Sale which takes place March 13th, 14th, 15th and 16th.

Mr. Simmons will reside on Margaret avenue.

KEEP YOUR STANDARDS HIGH.

(Detroit Free Press).

Judicially-minded persons cannot but be impressed by the prezent forms of hysteria just now prevalent all over the world, the United States emphatically not excepted. Nor can the calm thinker fail to be concerned for the aftermath. If ever in history a time existed for sober speech and action in restraint of hysteria, that time is this present day. The world is at war. Neutral nations no louger exist in fact. Those not in the swirl of war are in one way or another involved as pawns to one side or the other, either by consent or by force of circumstances. Everywhere there is the urge, the desire, the will to win, to make an everlasting end of war in its present forms. To this end all things are being subordinated which can in any way contribute to victory.

And some things are being broken down in the vain idea that smashing them will help crush the foreign foe. Things which ought not to be sacrificed because the loss of them weakens rather than energizes the fighting spirit and arm of any people. When any moral standard, approved by the wisdom and hallowed by the spiritual experience of the ages, is lowered or broken down or suspended, the nation consenting thereto is by so much weakened. The ancient sage who said that "righeousness exalteth a nation" is justified by the written records of all humanity. He stated an axiom which should be faithfully even sternly, insisted on at this time of national trial.

The American nation is facing not merely a powerful but an unscrupulous enemy, to whom nothing whatever is sacred, to whom there are no moral standards, to whom the hereafter even in this present world is as worthless as dust. To win, higher, stronger forces must be called forth to contend against the lower, baser ones. And this cannot be done by casting aside any safeguard of the spirit or of the body. The victor must be "the strong man armed" with invincible right at all points. There must be no neglected heel for the Achiles of 1917.

These general observations are restatements of truths never denied except by theblood-maddened barbarians denied always at the cost of their own utter overthrow, as Germany will presently discover. But generalizing will not fit the need apparent to the thoughtful ovreserver. There must be application and stern practice of the principles which strengthen to invincibility. Thus the moral standards of the home must be guarded in time of war and hysteria more zealously than ever before. They must, indeed, be elevated. The religious obligations of the individual should be more fully kept. The whole people should guard against license in thought, speech, action, food and drink as never before. Every one owes to every one else at such a time as this sanity in thought, in expression, in action, in all personal indulgence, that the people may be not merely a unit but a unit of power, a unit not dissipating energy but rather storing it for the grapple with the enemy and with the peril of that hysteria which would pull down the barriers and open the doors to weakness and folly. The slogan for this day for all the people should be: "Keep your standards high; let not a pennou be lowered."

SLACKERS IN KHAKI.

Lieut. John Quinney, late of the 27th Winnipeg Battalion, is the officer whom Canada's soldiers have to thank for the investigation that is to be held in regard to the transportation of wounded Canadians invalided home from France. Lieut. Quinney, who served twice as conducting officer after he was wounded, and his charges were therefore based on what he, himself had seen, supplemented by testimony from many other stories.

The western officer is now in the limelight again with an open letter to Sir Robert Borden, on the subject of "Slackers in Khaki," part of which is given to show how Lieut. Quinney deals with that interesting subject:

Now let me call your attention to the birds, whom we call Slackers in Uniform. I must ask you to draw on your imagination for a while and take an imaginary trip with me to England. We will first visit Argyle House, Regent street, which is Canadian Headquarters in England. In this place you will find officers, N. C. O.'s and men who wear a gold stripe, and you will find a lot of others who do not, and it is of these that I will speak. You will probably ask some of them if they have been to France and they will answer "Yes Sir," And let me whisper in your ear another question, ask them "How long were you in France?" For their answer will be "ten days" or perhaps "fourteen days," for, Sir Robert, they have been over on what is called an observation trip, or what we call a "Cook's tourist" trip. These are quite all right, Sir Robert, and those who take them in enjoy themselves thoroughly, and besides they earn the medal, but we think that everyone who is fit should go to the trenches and be absorbed on the fighting strength of some unit and remain there until disabled for general service, or some other good reason, other than pull or favoritism.

In this place I can show you one who was a junior lieutenant in my old battalion, but as soon as we landed in May, 1915, he got busy and pulled the strings, got transferred to the A. S. C., never went to France and to-day he is a lieut.-colonel.

Another one, who was a private, got a soft brigade job (i suing rum,) never went near the trenches once, was in France a few months, got back to England, got a commission in the A. S. C., never went back and to-day is a staff captain in Argyle House. This man is amateur champion golfer of Manitoba, and while stationed in Folkestone, his chief duty consisted in teaching a certain officer of high rank how to play golf on the Hythe Golf Links. And this lucky man was taken to London and promoted when the said senior officer was transferred there. A more useless man as a soldier I never knew than this staff captain, and as I was the battalion sergt.-major, I was in a position to know.

Another one in the same place was left behind as pay sergeant. He is now an officer in A. S. C., has been to France ten days; yet another one, who was one of my company sergeant-majors, stayed behind on transfer to A. S. C., is now a captain and has not been to France at all.

These are four of my own battalion, but Sir Robert the woods are full of them. After taking a good look around let us go over to the pay and records office in Millbank. Just here let me tell you of a little incident that happened last summer. The O. C. called all the officers together and stated he had received instructions to ascertain how many officers were available for service in trenches, as there was a need of them at that time, owing to heavy casualties. And as he spoke to them individually they (like the parable we read of in the good Book) began with one accord to make excuses. Some did not feel well, some did not know infantry drill, in fact, about the only ones who offered to go were the ten who had been over there before but these were unfit and the result was nil.

In his place one bumps up against lots of N.C.O.'s and men who look as though a sojourn in the trenches would do them good and make real men out of them. And the work these fit officers and men are doing could be done just as efficiently by those who have been incapacitated, but who could do administrative work.

Before leaving here, Sir Robert, I would like you to send over to Argyle House and find out if a certain major, (why, by-the-way, is a son of a recently retired Western Cabinet Minister) is still holding down his job there, also a certain captain (son of a more recently retired Cabinet Minister from Ontario); both of these gentlemen have received promotion in England, but have not taken the plunge yet to France. Tell them, Sir Robert, the boats are still leaving for France.

And so it goes on, whenever you go, whether you go to Witley, Epsom, Shorncliffe, Sandling, Westinhanger, or any of the Canadian centres, you will find officers, N.C.O.'s and men who have been there since they first landed and all the bull dogs in England would not drive them over.

I have had more experience in the practical instruction than any officer or N. C. O. in your training staff in England and I know what I am talking about, when I say that returned men will prove to be the best instructors, to say nothing of the recruit having more confidence in a man who has been over there, than he would have in the other kind. I mention this particularly because you would be met everywhere with the yarn that these officers and men are indispensable as instructors. I had charge of the military training in the public schools of Ottawa for many years and training camps, and I tell you, Sir, there are senior officers in England of whom it may be said, that if they knew more about the practical end of the training of our troops and less of the clerical, it would be very much better for the efficiency of the system and would produce much better and more rapid results than at present. I have known officers to hold down jobs as physical training and musketry officers who knew no more about it than it did about them. You ask why is this and the answer is simple and consits of one word, Pull, with a big P. They are there by the hundred and we look to your Union Government to root them out. If you sent over a good, fearless officer and non-commissioned officer (returned men) and empowered them to visit these places, I feel sure they would soon show Gen. Turner, V.C., that the orders issued by him from time to time are not carried out by his subordinate staff.

DON'T WORRY.

The day after we are told by one authority that the U-boat campaign is a failure we are informed by another that we can't build ships as fast as they are sunk.

Then, one expert tells us that our armies are utterly unprepared for the enemy on th Western front, and another one pities the unfortunate Huns, who try to come through.

The main thing is to work hard but not to worry. If everybody worried, we wouldn't be able to build lunatic asylums fast enough.—Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

It ought to be easy to fill that camouflage corps out of the ranks of the politicians.

The powers that be have removed the local soldiers to Kingston on account of the scarcity of fuel. Probably figured the Armouries would be more easily heated with the draft gone.

The easiest route to the Senate seems to be by giving up a seat in the Commons.

Russians are being conscripted by the Germans for service on the Western front. The poor Slavs will wish they had left the Czar on the job.

NEW METHODS OF FIGHTING

Modern Warfare Is Carried On Under Water, Under Ground and in the Clouds.

"Digging in" has a new and important significance and the fantastic legend of Darius Green is long forgotten in the light of practical achievement by the bird-man of today. The cavalry of the earth has been supplanted by the cavalry of the air. The actual fighting of modern warfare is conducted under water, under ground and far up among the clouds.

Yes, there have been drastic changes in military tactics and military equipment since the old days when we used to drill in the armory over the grocery store in the little old home town. What we tried so hard to learn of military lore in those days would be classed as low comedy by a recruiting officer of this changeful period. But, all the same, one can't help wishing that one were somewhere in France at this minute with good old Company C, ——th regiment, of the National Guard, and we'd make a reasonable wager that, of the survivors of that organization, if given an opportunity to go, there wouldn't be a slacker in the bunch.

Won His Lost Watch.

An extraordinary watch story is told by a Welsh campaigner home on leave from African battlefields. When he was in German West Africa he lost a wristlet watch. It was not very valuable, so he did not worry a lot about it. But many months later, when on active service in German East Africa, he took a share in a raffle for a watch. He won, and to his amazement found that the prize was his own watch.

KEEP MOUTH CLEAN AND AVOID DISEASE

"Payroll" is of Great Benefit in Preventing Disease in the Mouth

"PYROLL" IS OF GREAT BENEFIT IN PREVENTING DISEASE IN THE MOUTH

More and more insistently members of the medical profession as well as dentists are affirming the relationship between unclean mouths and serious diseases.

In and around the mouth are various structures—the teeth, the tonsils, the antrums and sinuses—where disease germs may gain entrance, secure a foothold and multiply.

But from the infected areas absorption of the disease germs into the blood stream follows. Then will result symptoms of general ill health or acute diseases, according to the character of the germs absorbed.

And varied indeed are the disorders which may thus be caused.

Chronic invalidism may be caused by mouth infection.

The blood pressure may be raised or lowered by mouth infections.

Serious disturbances of the blood heart, kidneys, stomach, intestines, and joints are frequent from mouth infections.

No treatment of these conditions will be of any avail until the mouth is made clean.

Even then, if the infection has been of long standing a complete cure may not result, prevention is pre-eminently to be desired.

For prevention the best treatment is to wash out the mouth two or three times a day with Pyroll, and keep the teeth clean with a tooth brush, which has been made aseptic by dipping it first into a solution of Pyroll.

Pyroll is sold in Peterborough at LYNCH'S DRUG STORE, 168 Hunter street.

HOW THE KAISER WON THE PRIZE

A meeting was called by those who do dwell
Down in the innermost depths of hell.
The chairman was one who is known to be pious;
He goes by the name of Old Ananias.

There were murderers, thieves and Whitaker Wrights,
And the Devil was there to stop any fights.
A number of Germans arrived very late,
But quite soon enough to boast of their fate.

The meeting was called to elect the best liar,
For one whose duties of tending the fire.
A motion was put to elect Mr. Crippen,
Who would give his attention to catching the dripping.

The Kaiser then rose and re-counted the deeds
Of his cunning and treachery while fighting around Liege.
The faces of all went suddenly white,
When they heard of the fate of Louvain on that terrible night.

To exterminate the British was my great desire,
As they stand in my way to be the world's sire.

Then old, ugly Krupp got up on his feet,
And denied Ananias such stories to beat;
But the chairman replied that he had no desire,
For he thought the Kaiser should look after the fire.

The meeting then voted that all of these crimes
Committed by the Kaiser and his barbarous tribes,
Deserving recognition at the hands of Old Nick,
For the way they had worked the confidence trick.

So the Kaiser from Germany got the job on the spot,
For the lies he had told beat the whole blooming lot.
Even Old Ananias was bound to admit
He's proven his claim to the bottomless pit.

BOW WOW.

Toronto Votes $10,000 For War Veterans

"It's a City Obligation—We Must See Our Citizens Put Back Into Civilian Life" Says Mayor Church Who Wanted to Make the Grant $15,000.

TORONTO, March 7.—The Board of Control, by a vote of 3 to 2, to-day made a grant of $10,000 to Great War Veterans' Association. A deputation headed by Lieut.-Col. A. B. Hardy and Sergt. Turley waited on the board to urge their claims. Last year the grant was $6,000.

"It's a city obligation. We've got to see our citizens put back into civilian life and if the Government won't do it, the city must," said Mayor Church, who said the grant ought to be $15,000.

Applications for assistance were dealt with every day. They had assisted from three to four thousand families in the matter of coal.

Controller O'Neill: "Why not hand over all the city's work to the association?"

"Hear, hear," said several members of the deputation.

Con. McBride claimed that the city should have a representative on the executive of the association to protect the interests of the citizens whose money it was proposed to hand over.

Con. O'Neill: "I am not in favour of associating with them. If you are going to do anything you ought to give them sufficient to help them carry on their work. I don't say you should do that, but that's as far as we should go. I am not in favour of any city representative being appointed to their board."

Con. Robbins agreed with Con. O'Neill. He thought it would tie the city in the future.

Commissioner Bradshaw recommended that if the grant is made the military information bureau of the city should be abolished. He vetoed the granting of the money on account of duplication.

The Mayor moved that the application be granted.

Con. McBride moved an amendment that the amount be granted the same as last year, $6,000.

The amendment was defeated and the motion carried by 3 to 2, Controller's McBride and O'Neill voting against.

FUNERAL OF MR. W. A. HALL

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Funeral Of Mr. Jas. Fee At Millbrook

Deceased Was Widely Known in the District

MILLBROOK, March 8.—The death of James Fee, after a long illness, took place at his late residence, Union street, Millbrook, on Sunday, February 24th. Deceased was born in the city of Belfast, Ireland, on Feb. 14, 1837, and came to Canada in the year 1852 when 15 years of age, and settled at Kingston, Ont., afterwards moving to Cavan, where he was a successful farmer for many years and in 1904 he moved to Millbrook.

On March 21, 1867, he was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Mulligan, of Cavan, the late Venerable Archdeacon Allen officiating. To this happy union six children were born, five of whom survive him. They are: Mrs. Irving of North Battleford, Sask., Harvey of Alameda, Sask., Chester, of Cavan and the Misses Maud and Irene at home. One son, Charles, predeceased his father by several years.

Three brothers and one sister also survive him, viz.: Samuel of Omaha, Neb., Robt of Dakota, and William of Washington, and Mrs. Wm. Pritchard of Harrison, Ont. Ten grandchildren and three great grandchildren also survive him.

Deceased gentleman was a man of splendid intelligence, a good conversationalist, an excellent neighbour, and was most highly esteemed for his many sterling qualities of mind and heart.

Politically he was a Conservative. At the last election he was keenly anxious to cast his ballot for the Union government, but was unable to leave his bed to do so, but it rejoiced his heart when the splendid victory of the Union Government was announced.

In religion he was an Anglican and a sincere Christian.

The funeral on Wednesday, Feb. 27 to Zion cemetery, was largely attended. Services were conducted at St. Thomas' church by the rector, Rev. Canon Allen, assisted by Rev. A. G. E. Westmacott. Afterward the remains were laid in the family plot in God's acre at Zion.

The bearers were Messrs. J. W. and Samuel Hamilton, George and Wesley Brown, W. Mullen and M. Pethick, former neighbours and staunch friends of deceased.

Several beautiful floral tributes were placed upon the casket.

To the sorrowing widow and family we join in extending sincere sympathy in their great loss.

Girls' Conference Is To Be Held Here This Spring

Plans Were Made at a Meeting Last Night in the Y.W.C.A.

At a meeting held at the Y.W.C.A. last evening the plans were made for a Leaders' and Girls' Work Conference to be held in Peterborough this spring. Representatives from the Sunday Schools of the various denominations were present, and were addressed by Miss M. Taggart, from Toronto, Secretary of the National Advisory Committee for Co-operation in Girls' Work, and Superintendent of Secondary Division of Sunday School in Ontario.

Miss Taggart outlined the programme of the Conference, and details were discussed with the result that the following was decided upon:

That there be held a Leaders' and Girls' Work Conference in Peterborough, April 19, 20 and 21; that Leaders' and Girls' Work throughout the County of Peterborough and the adjoining towns be invited to attend, the girl delegates being limited to the City of Peterborough, and between the ages of fifteen and twenty-four.

An executive committee for carrying out the preparations for the Conference was appointed, consisting of a chairman, secretary and conveners of various working committees.

Chairman—Miss Parker.

Secretary—Mrs. Roper.

The meeting was opened by Rev. Mr. Royand and clased by Rev. Mr. Whattam.

The third of the series of Fortnightly Recitals at the Y.W.C.A. will take place to-morrow night, in the Green Room. The programme will consist of a pantomime play, based on the story of Tennyson's "Oenone," presented by the Advanced Gymnasium Class.

Shoe Gossip

MR. L. ERSTER, proprietor of the PETERBOROUGH SHOE STORE, has just returned from a visit to a number of the leading shoe factories in the province, and he has brought with him some vivid impressions of the conditions of the market for the summer season. Many of the lines that are going to be in strong demand this season are very scarce, especially the grey kid that is to be the leading style for summer wear. This applys in a less degree to all grades of fine boots, and prices are bound to advance as the stocks grow less.

Mr. Erster being on the spot managed to secure a nice stock of fine summer footwear at the lowest price they can be bought at this season, and gives his customers this hint, that those who make the early choice are going to be considerably ahead of later buyers, as each succeeding order as the season advances will be higher priced. He has had no time since his return to make up a list of bargains, for the Saturday buyers, but will make everything his customers select a bargain purchase for to-morrow. An early selection for Easter will pay shoppers at the

DEFAULTERS DEFY POLICE

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, March 8. —Armed with search warrants, six city policemen in charge of Inspector John Poge, of Pape avenue police station, and seven Dominion military policemen, raided three houses in Carlaw avenue, north of Danforth avenue, at 7.30 this morning, in search of three brothers, alleged to be defaulters under the Military Service Act. But the "birds" had flown, and when the police entered the houses they were met in a hostile manner by the mother, sister and brother of the three men. The trio had openly boasted in the neighbourhood that the police dare not interfere, that they would never fight in the army, and if the police did come there would be some gun play. It is known that they had been carrying weapons.

This is the second time that the police have visited the houses. The last visit was made three weeks ago. When the police entered the house the women folks were hostile to the officers and stated that they would never get the three men, and if the police did meet them they would be met with bullets and that the army would never see the trio.

"The Yukon" Described In Fine Lecture

Miss Louise Armstrong's Address Delighted Large Audience

Under the auspices of the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E., Mrs. Louise Armstrong, Vice-Regent of the White Horse Chapter, I.O.D.E., gave a most thrilling and interesting talk on the Yukon, in the basement of Trinity Methodist church last night. In her address, which she illustrated by splendid lantern views, Mrs. Armstrong told of the magnetic north of which there is less known than any other land. To the majority of the world Alaska and the Yukon has been a land, bleak, silent and ice-bound, but to-day her history reads like a fairy tale. Her lure to the traveller is indefinable. Whether it lies in the impressive solitude or the mystery of the undiscovered is unknown. To-day the country is becoming known for its glorious sunshine, wild flowers, glaciers, big game and mineral deposits, a land not forgotten by God, but a land upon which He lavished His richest gifts. To appreciate the "land of the midnight sun," a trip into the interior must be taken and its wonderful history be studied. Bought from Russia for $7,200,000, at what was then supposed to be a tremendous price, it yielded as much a year from its gold output alone. The Yukon holds inexhaustible gold, silver and coal fields, boundless possibilities in fish, seal, caribou and magnificent possibilities for wheat and vegetable growing. Her climate is not that of the ice-bound north so generally supposed, but a good percentage of the area has a winter similar to that of New York and Montreal, and a spring which, because of the dry air, opens up in April.

The Trial of '98.

Mrs. Armstrong painted a vivid word picture of the trail of '98 and had some splendid views of the gold rush, when 'no man cared and no man looked behind.' She told of the days when the rush was at its most feverish pitch, when the survival of the fittest was the rule and when men dropped in the trail and died unnoticed in the mad fever to become rich. To-day conditions are vastly changed and individual mining is practically unknown and is replaced by hydraulic.

White Horse Chapter.

The White Horse Chapter, I.O.D.E., although belonging to a small town, has sent over $30,000 to the boys overseas, and will this year send $10,000 more. The boys from the Yukon answered the call to the colours and made unbelievable trips, under terrible conditions, to sign up and go overseas.

Vote of Thanks.

A vote of thanks for her splendid lecture and pictures was moved by Miss Lancaster, seconded by Rev. J. P. Wilson. A pleasing item on the programme was a solo by Mrs. Arthur Amys, accompanied by Miss Laura Logan on the violin and Mrs. Evans the piano.

The Ushers.

The Misses Helen Stapleton, Marjorie Gladman, Celia Dunsford, Olga Johnson and O. Cuffe acted as ushers for the occasion.

DOG AT LARGE COSTS OWNER $4.60 IN COURT

John McGlynn Refused to Permit Destruction of His Dog.

John McGlynn, Rutherford avenue, was fined $4.60 in police court this morning for permitting his dog to run at large.

"The Council has been after us to see that the by-law is carried out," Chief Thompson told Mr. McGlynn. "Nothing remains for us but to enforce it."

Magistrate Dumble remarked that the present dog question was serious. "I was interested in a pet dog. It disappeared suddenly later, but I learned later that it was found dead at Bridgenorth, and examination showed that it had died of rabies."

"Mine is a nice, quiet dog," Mr. McGlynn volunteered.

"The trouble is you don't know whether he is or not," remarked the Chief.

LOCAL REPRESENTATIVES CHOSEN ON EXECUTIVE

Mr. Robert Harstone and Dr. F. C. Neal Chosen to Act on Committee of the Ontario Asssociation For the Care of the Feeble-minded—Government to Deal With Problem

The annual meeting of the Ontario Association for the Care of Feeble-minded was held Feb. 26th in the General Hospital, when the following resolution was passed:

"It is hereby resolved that a deputation be appointed to wait upon the Premier and members of the Provincial Cabinet to present the following views:

"To express appreciation of the steps already taken in connection with the better care of the backward, defective and feeble-minded.

"To urge upon the Government the great extent of this problem in cities and centres; and in rural districts, and the need of immediate action; to express the views that this problem should be dealt with by the Provincial Government and not left to uncertain and scattered action by the municipalities.

"That the Government should provide such custodial institutions as are necessary; that a proper share of the cost of building these institutions should be collected by direct taxation from the municipalities.

"That the municipalities be required to pay for the maintenance of all students and inmates up to 18 or 21 years of age; that the Government should assume the maintenance of such adult cases as require continued custodial care.

"That there should be such supervision of the issuing of marriage licenses as would prevent the marriage of certain disordered and feeble-minded persons."

"We consider the problem of the feeble-minded the greatest single issue we have to deal with," said Mr. Clifford W. Beers, Secretary of the United States National Committee for Mental Hygiene, speaking of the work accomplished by his organization."

Mr. Beers made a strong plea that the work of the Ontario Association be broadened to take in the care and study of the insane, the inebriates, and epileptics of Canada.

The admission of mentally defective aliens was severely scored by Mr. Beers.

Many From Juvenile Court.

"Out of 3,578 cases with which the Toronto Clinic has dealt, 1,249 came from the Juvenile Court," stated Dr. C. K. Clarke. "These figures are rather startling when you coonsider that the criminals of the future will be recruited from these juveniles. We found that amongst them a large number were already insane."

The following officers were elected for the coming year: Honorary president, Rev. Peter H. Bryce, Toronto; president, Dr. C. K. Clarke; first vice-president, Mrs. A. M. Huestis; 2nd vice-president, Dr. H. Carney, Windsor; 3rd vice-president, Miss Rose Patton, Ottawa; 4th vice-president, J. R. McNeelie, Lindsay; secretary-treasurer, Dr. C. M. Hincks, (re-elected).

And a large executive, on which Mrs. Robert Harstone and Dr. F. C. Neal are the Peterborough representatives.

URGE CARE OF FEEBLE-MINDED.

Sir William Hearst Tells Deputation That Action Will be Taken.

The Government intends dealing with the problem of caring for the (feeble)minded in a comprehensive way as soon as the report of Mr Justice Hodgins with regard to the matter is received. This was the statement of Sir William Hearst, Prime Minister, to a deputation from the Ontario Association for the Care of the Feeble-minded, which waited on the Government yesterday morning. The deputation included interested parties from all parts of Ontario, and certain resolutions reached by the visitors at a meeting held earlier in the morning were presented to the Government. Appreciation was expressed of the efforts the Government has already put forth, and an earnest appeal was made for a more advanced policy.

The first speaker, Rev. Canon Plumptre, stated that the object of the deputation was more to give the Prime Minister and his colleagues assuarnce that any steps the Government might take would have the warm support of the people of the Province It was not the object to suggest a policy for the Government.

The need for clearing out the plague spots at home before the soldiers return from the front was urged by Mrs. P. D. Crerar of Hamilton, who commended the Government for launching an offensive on the venereal disease problem, but gave it as her opinion that if the feeble-minded problem was first attacked, the authorities would be striking a blow at the other problem. She expressed the opinion that venereal disease was traceable to the large increase in the number of feeble-minded persons in the province.

A Whirlwind Start.

Clifford W. Beers, of New York, addressed a meeting in the home of Mrs. D. A. Dunlap, Highland avenue, Toronto, yesterday afternoon on the work of the National Committee of Hygiene in the United States. It was decided to form a similar organization in Canada, Col. Colin Russell, of Montreal, and Dr. Bryce, Director of Immigration, Ottawa, moving and seconding the resolution, and in a few minutes $20,000 was subscribed towards guaranteeing expenses of the first three years' work. Branches will be planned throughout the Dominion. The organization will be the first organized outside of the United States.

LIANE HELD HAS ALL HER MOTHER'S TRICKS

Is Coming to the Grand on Wednesday Night With Anna's Own Musical Comedy "Follow Me"—A Typical Broadway Show With An Exceptionally Clever Cast.

As "naughty" and "shocking" as her mother, just as the Canadian public has known and liked Anna Held in her numerous successes—her big brown eyes that "won't just behave," just like her mother's, sparkling with mischievous mirth, Liane Held is coming to the Grand next Wednesday, March 13th with special matinee at 3 p.m., in Anna Held's own musical comedy, "Follow Me."

This fiery French divette rolls her eyes, writhes and twitches, and does all the Anna Held love tricks, which have connected her name with stage wickedness, but which an admiring public always finds artistically so, if at all naughty.

"Follow Me" is a typical Broadway show, in that it is of rapid tempo, exceedingly funny, has numerous song hits, and is presented by an exceptionally clever cast, which includes Harry Bulger, Jr., Venita Fitzhugh, Marie Fanchonetti, Ida Fitzhugh, Harry and Lew Seymour, Leon Francel and Tilyou and Ward.

Bible Students Heavily Fined

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, March 8.— For having and distributing copies of a book, "The Finished Mystery," containing doctrines and derogatory to Great Britain and her caue in the present war, three Bible students, W. C. Douglas, Wm. McKinnon and Rev. Ernest Spaulding, were to-day fined $500 and costs or sixty days each by Magistrate Denison, and four others, W. D. Joycey, W. J. Coleman, A. A. Secord and Geo. Feighan, deemed less guilty of intent, were fined $50 and costs or 30 days each. All seven were given one week to pay.

After the promulgation of the order-in-council under which the charge was laid, more than three hundred copies of the book were seized by Detective Guthrie, in the premises of Douglas, Spaulding and McKinnon at 74 Lombard street. Other copies seized elsewhere in the city brought the total up to 4,000.

Frank Denton and A. R. Cluts, counsel for the defence, endeavoured to show that nobody ever read the Canada Gazette in which the order was published and that the accused had absolutely no intention of violating the law.

Farewell For Mr. And Mrs. Webster

A pleasant surprise party was held on Tuesday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. Webster, 286 Dalhousie street, who are leaving Peterboro on Saturday afternoon for Victoria, B. C. ## WELL NOW!

And is it yourself, Mrs. Goodwife; and where have you been so early?

Dear me, fancy meeting Mrs. Saver. Why I've been to my grocer to get some things.

Oh, Lor! isn't it awful the prices these times?

Oh I don't know, I don't find it so bad, because my grocer is so very reasonable. You see he sells for cash, and so he is able to sell much cheaper than the credit dealers. And then, as I carry most of my things, I save a bit on that, although when I give a $5.00 order they are delivered at carry prices.

Do you really think it pays to deal for cash?

Pay! I should think it does. Look at these prices: Tomatoes 2lc. can, peas 20c. can, matches 3 boxes for 20c., corn starch 2 lbs. for 24c., dried apricots 17c. lb., seeded raisins 2 lbs. 25c., apples 39c. peck, onions 6 lbs. 20c., carrots 19c. peck, potatoes 38c. peck, egg substitute, large size, 23c., 3 bottle extracts 24c.

My gracious! Mrs. Goodwife, those are low prices. I must go there right away. Where is the place?

Oh you know the store. It's A. W. Paskins, on the corner of Hunter and Aylmer, and, by the way, he's selling extra fine potatoes at $2.00 per bag to-day, and if you want some fish he's cheaper than anybody else in the city. I got some lovely salmon 2 lbs. for 30c.

Thanks very much for telling me, Mrs. Goodwife.

That's all right, Mrs. Saver, don't forget the address; it's A. W. Paskins, corner Hunter and Aylmer. 'Phone 317.

The HOME CIRCLE

MOTHERS.

Mid life's commotions—dismal fears—
Mid cares and woes and flood of tears,
How sweetly breaks upon the ear
Some word of comfort or of cheer;
Yet of our friends is not another
Who speaks as gentle as our mother.

Here disappointments crowd each day,
Our brightest hopes soon fade away,
And friends long trusted oft deceive;
We scarcely know whom to believe,
Yet, tho we fear to trust each other,
We're not afraid to trust our mother.

Yet here where there's so much deceit,
Some friends we have we love to meet,
There's love we know that will endure,
Not sordid, selfish, but all pure;
But tho beloved by sister, brother,
There's none that love us like our mother.

Among the names to mortals given,
There's none like mother, home and heaven;
For home's no home without her care;
And heaven, we know she will be there,
Then let us while we love each other,
Remember and be kind to mother.

* * *

AN ELOQUENT DEFENCE OF WOMEN.

"Dey may rail against women as de like" said a darkey lately. "Dey can't set me against dem. I has always in my life found dem fust in peace, fust in quarrel, fust in de dance, fust in de ice cream parlour, and fust, best and last in de sick room. What would we be without dem? Let us be born as young, as ugly, as helpless as you please, and a woman's arm am ready to receive us. She it am dat guv us our fust dose ob castor oil, and puts clothes on our helpless, naked limbs, and cubbers up our foots and noses in long flannel petticoats, and it am she, as we grow up, dat fills our dinner basket wid doughnuts and apples as we start to school and licks us when we tare our trousers."

* * *

BEAUTY OF OLD PEOPLE.

Men and women make their own beauty or their own ugliness. Lord Lytton speaks of a man "who was uglier than he had any business to be," and if he could but read it every human being carries his life in his face, and is good looking or the reverse as his life has been good or evil. On our features the fine chisels of life and emotion are eternally at work. Beauty is not the monopoly of blooming young men and pink and white maids. There is a slow growing beauty which only comes to perfection in old age. Grace belongs to no period of life and improves the longer it exists.

* * *

A GOOD DAUGHTER.

There are other ministers of love more conspicuous than she, but none in which a gentler, lovelier spirit dwells, and none to which the heart's war requitals more joyfully respond. She is the steady light of her father's house. Her ideal is indissolubly connected with that of his fireside. She is his morning sunlight and evening star. The grace, vivacity and tenderness of her sex have their place in the mighty sway which she holds over his spirit. She is the pride and ornament of his hospitality and the gentle nurse in his sickness.

* * *

PITHY AND TRUE.

About the most ungracious thing a newspaper publisher ever has to do is to advertise for pay, and as a matter of business, the fact that some man's wife has left his bed and board without due cause or provocation. We never see such a customer darken our door without wanting to kick him into the street. We don't believe in the doctrine. We don't believe that any woman ever quit home without cause or provocation. But we do believe that thousands of women adhere to a bad home, where half the cause of provocation would dirve an average man to perdition. And the man, who, under any circumstances, can advertise this wife as he would a horse and dog, to say at least, doesn't deserve a wife, and the fact itself is proof conducive that she ought to run away.

* * *

PRAIRIE CLOTH.

I think God loves to try his hand
At being a modeste;
He makes the earth's new gowns
Of prairie cloth,
In autumn her dress is a shimmer of cloth of gold,
With dull red lights shot through;
Then at the beautiful Christmas tide
He drapes her in a soft, white robe
As fitting the solemn hallowed occasion.
For the dark and blustery days to come
She has a dark brown dress,
Relieved at the throat and wrists
With snow drift laces.
But when spring, glorious spring,
Sends a riot of changing moods
To her woman's soul,
Her gown is changed to softest greens,
And as the festival advances
He catches festons of flowers
Over her shimmering bodice and skirt,
As love's offering to his beloved.

—Flora Shufelt Rivvola.

There are two kinds of girls in this and every other community. One is the kind that appears best abroad, the girls that are good for parties, rides, visits, balls and cards, and whose chief delight is in such things. The other is the kind that appears best at home, the girls that are useful and cheerful in the dining room, a sick room, and all the precincts of home. They differ widely in character. One is often a torment at home, the other a blessing. One is a moth, consuming everything about her; the other is a sunbeam, inspiring light and gladness around her pathway. The right education will modify both a little, and thus into the good qualities of both in one.

NOVA SCOTIA APPLE SHIPPERS FACE A LOSS IN FAILURE OF THEIR CORNER OF 1917 CROP

Ontario Consumers Had Been Promised Cheap Apples By the Late Food Controller, But The Shippers Stepped In With a Real Control and Prices Soared.

Nova Scotia shippers have over 100,000 barrels of apples in storage which they must either sell at a loss or allow to rot. This statement by a prominent fruit dealer indicates the principle reason why the choice fruit of the Annapolis valley failed to reach Ontario consumers in the abundance promised by the late Food Controller, Hon. Mr. Hanna. The little group of eastern exporters who cornered the Nova Scotia market last fall have simply over-reached themselves. They overplayed their game, and according to authentic reports are now faced with a big loss instead of the huge profits they had estimated before the splendid crop was harvested. It matters little now to local consumers who may recall the glowing promises of cheap apples that Mr. Hanna made through the press and in the columns of his official bulletin. The public appetite was whetted in expectation of the luscious fruit which was anticipated in official recipes as welcome food substitute. But Mr. Hanna reckoned not with the profiteering instinct of the Nova Scotian shippers who could at least plead extenuation of their little corner in apples with the excuse that their pool was a mere diversion compared to the highly profitable coups that were making new millionaires in the central provinces.

At any rate their plan worked almost perfectly in its first stages. The fall market was almost bare of Annapolis apples, and the complete failure of the Ontario crop accentuated the artificial scarcity and dealers turned to the Hesperides gardens of the Okanagan valley and California. The predicted plenty and cheapness provided a vivid background for the actual scarcity and high prices. Five cents an apple became the prevailing price for the carefully packed fruit from British Columbia, and householders sought substitutes, oranges and perhaps prunes, for the food which had been announced as a substitute for wheat and other commodities needed overseas.

Action, Early and Effective.

Wholesalers state that the Nova Scotia market opened at $2.25 a barrel, but before the crop was packed the quotation had reached $5.00.

"In one case two cars of No. 1 quality apples were ordered at $4.00 the barrel. The order was confirmed at that price, but in ten days we were informed by the shippers that owing to the great demand the price was raised to $4.50 and the quality lowered to half No. 1 and half No. 2."

This order was withdrawn. But the shippers' prices soared on to $6.00 and $6.50. Three or four of the eastern magnates had secured control of the greater part of the Nova Scotia crop, and the market was at their mercy.

An Ontario "drier" not far from Peterborough, had a big order accepted for third grade apples at 65 cents a barrel. In October the price was advanced to $2.50 a barrel, and the shippers offered him one dollar a barrel to cancel his contract.

He agreed, and received from the shippers a cheque for $20,000. It is stated that when the demand was brisk, even at the high prices, the "ring" in their rapacious desire for profits flooded the market with No. 3's, and now they can't dispose of their first and second grades except at a price so low that a loss is inevitable. The severity of the winter shut off shipments to the west, and the wails of the defeated profiteers are re-echoing even into Ontario.

Storage Statistics.

The following official returns from the fruit branch of the Department of Agriculture reveal the quantities of apples in visible supply. In Nova Scotia there are about 100,000 barrels in store, as compared with 55,000 barrels at the same time last year. In Montreal here are 22,140 barrels and 13,764 boxes, as compared with 7,500 barrels and 5,500 boxes last year, and in Toronto, 22,745 barrels and 11,700 boxes, as compared with 1,500 barrels and 3,000 boxes last year.

If Montreal and Toronto wholesalers have been holding their supplies for higher prices they may share in the loss of the Nova Scotians, who are apparently due for a hoist by their own petard.

Prices May Break.

Locally, it is expected that apple prices will drop when the big surplus is turned into Ontario's channels of consumption. There is no hope for the shippers of export overseas, and they must come east at a time when new southern fruits and vegetables are reaching the Canadian market. If apples are desirable for spring diet, there are 100,000 barrels of tonic on the way.

OWLS ARE GIVING FARMERS TROUBLE

LINDSAY, March 7.—Owls of the great horned species are giving farmers considerable trouble this winter by killing poultry. It is thought that owing to the great depth of snow the owls are having difficulty in securing food, and are turning to the farmers' barns for fodder. A large great horned owl was shot recently by John Davis of New Dublin, Ont., after it had killed three chickens and a turkey.

About two weeks ago an owl about the size of a goose was killed on the farm of Mr. P. J. Murphy, Ops.

Alcohol For Bath Used As Drink Instead

Canadian Press Despatch:

TORONTO, March 8.—Whether, under the Ontario Temperance Act, it is illegal for doctors to prescribe alcohol for patients is a question which Justice Middleton decided to "look into with care." The matter came before him in the case of appeal by Dr. A. B. Welford of Woodstock, against a fine of fifty dollars and costs imposed on him for giving a man a prescription for a pint of alcohol "to bath his mother in." The alcohol was consumed before the man arrived home.

"Mitzi" Coming To The Grand

Local theatre-goers will be delighted to hear that Mr. Webber Turner has been successful in arranging for the appearance at the Grand Opera House in the near future of the famous musical comedy star, Mitzi Hajos, in her most successful offering, "Pom Pom." This is a Henry W. Savage production, carrying a company of seventy, and will be the biggest theatrical offering of the season. To-morrow's papers will announce the date.

Wool hop-sack is to be used for motor wraps.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

KINGSTON AFTER THE SCALP OF BABE DYE

The Kingston Standard says: Well, it's all over, and there'll be no fancy mugs to stick up in the windows this year. The Kingston Juniors tried hard, but they went down to defeat at the hands of De la Salle. It might have been defeat but it certainly was not disgrace, but a little of the latter stuff might be marked down alongside that wonderful wing man of the winners, "Babe" Dye.

It may be mentioned that "Babe" Dye has something coming to him. Without doubt he is the most unmannerly player in the O.H.A. In plainer words, he is a disgrace to the O.H.A., and if he was playing with any team but Toronto, he'd be thrown out of the league. Last year while with Aura Lee, he roughed matters up and put Wallie Elmer out of hockey. This year in Toronto he brought further disgrace on himself by attacking young Williams of Peterborough without provocation. Then to make matters worse, on Tuesday night he again showed his fine (?) spirit by hitting Elmer, and was escorted off the ice by policemen. And still he's allowed to play with gentlemen and be called a star of the game.

WINNIPEG IN THE ALLAN CUP FINALS

WINNIPEG, Man., March 7.—Proving beyond all doubt that they are the class of Western amateur hockey, the Winnipeg Ypres again took the measure of the Saskatoon Quakers here to-night by 7 to 0 in the final game to decide which team would represent the West in the Allan Cup series against Kitchener at Toronto next week. Having won Tuesday's game by 7 to 3 the local had a margin of 11 goals on the round and should prove worthy challengers.

They're Fast and Tricky.

Playing under their own rules, the Manitoba champions put up a finished exhibition of the great winter pastime. They were too fast, too tricky and carried too much combination for the visitors. The half-time score was 4 to 0 and the Ypres were full value for their three goals in the second session.

Semi-Finals Of Vice-Skips' 'Spiel Played To-night

The vice-skips will complete the semi-finals of their bonspiel to-night, leaving the finals for Saturday night, if the game is ordered to be played to-morrow. In this 'spiel there is only one round. The consolation series were dispensed with because of last week's strenuous competition among the skips.

Last night's scores were as follows:

Blind Belief.

Swedish Consul Gustavus Swan said, in discussing the war:

"The exposures from Buenos Aires show that Germany believes all's fair in love and war. Germany duped my own government no less than the Argentine government.

"Germany, it is clear, believes all's fair in love and war as blindly as scientists believe in facts. Hence she goes horribly wrong, like the eminent New England scientist wrote to Tennyson one day:

"'Dear Sir: I find in a recent poem of yours, entitled "The Vision of Sin," the following unwarranted statement: "Every moment dies a man and every moment one is born." I need hardly point out that this calculation, if correct, would tend to keep the sum total of the world's population in a state of perpetual equipoise, whereas it is an established fact that the said population is constantly on the increase. I would, therefore, suggest that in the next edition of this poem the erroneous calculation to which I refer should be corrected as follows: "Every moment dies a man and one and a sixteenth is born." I may add that the exact figures are 1.167, but something must, of course, be conceded to the laws of rhythm.'"

NEARING FINALS IN O.B.A. JUNIOR RACE.

Central "Y," Peterborough, Kingston, London, Hamilton, St. Kitts and Galt Remain.

TORONTO, March 8.—Word was received at Central Y.M.C.A. that Peterborough Collegiate C.B.A. junior basketball team could not come here until Saturday on account of their studies, so that the game that was scheduled for last night will be played on Saturday evening.

The Central juniors deserve credit for their consistent play thus far, having won nine straight games. A fast preliminary game has been arranged, as the Somers' School girls meet the Y.W.C. Guild. Providing Central juniors win on Saturday, Kingston will come here in the semi-final, Central returning to meet them on their floor on the 23rd.

The winners of these games will then play off with the Western Ontario winners, viz., Hamilton, St. Catharines, Galt or London.

ANNIVERSARY WEDDING.

Golden Wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Robertson, of the Scotch Line.

LINDSAY, March 8. — A notable epoch in the life of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Robertson, of the Scotch Line, Verulam, was chronicled on Monday, March 4th, when they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary, the unique gathering being attended by members of the family and friends and relatives from far and near.

SHIPPED $9,000 WORTH OF HOGS

LINDSAY, March 7—"The farmers are highly pleased with prices realized on stocks which we have bought recently," said Mr. John McNevin of Reaboro Farmers' Club on Saturday. "We have just shipped three cars containing 247 hogs, valued at $9,000. Shipments of cattle have also been made.

TAX ON CATS IS NEXT MOVE

LINDSAY, March 8.—When the dog tax question came up for consideration at the council meeting Alderman Brimmell brought up the question of cats, which he claimed, were just as destructive as dogs. Reference was made to the havoc created among young chickens by prowling felines, and it was felt that these animals should be taxed as fell as dogs.

A by-law will likely be introduced at an early date.

GERMANS STILL SMASHING MACHINERY IN BELGIUM

Havre, March 8. — The Germans continue to dynamite the engines, machines and foundations in factories around Mons, according to Belgians who have recently escaped from Belgium. They are also carrying off the rails from the street and local railway tracks. The rails on one line have disappeared entirely. It is said that the rails are being shipped to Germany.

Deportations of Belgians continue, and have extended to children thirteen years of age.

New Zealand Anxious About Samoa

Canadian Press Despatch:

—A despatch from Wellington says that Premier Massey said he was going to the Imperial war credit conference from a sense of duty. Referring to Samoa, the Premier said that New Zealand was anxious because Samoa was the key to the south Pacific and if restored would become the headquarters of the German fleet and the centre of operations in the Pacific. The British flag was carried away from Samoa in 1890, and New Zealand boys carried it back in 1914. The Premier was of the opinion that it had gone back to stay.

Easy to Make This Pine Cough Remedy

Thousands of families swear by its prompt results. Inexpensive, and saves about $5.

You know that pine is used in nearly all preparations and remedies for coughs. The reason is that pine contains certain medicinal elements that have a remarkable effect in soothing and healing the membranes of the throat and chest. Pine is famous for this purpose.

Pine cough syrups are combinations of pine and syrup. The "syrup" part is usually plain granulated sugar syrup. Nothing better, but why buy it. You can easily make it yourself in five minutes.

To make the best pine cough remedy that money can buy, put 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) in a 16-oz. bottle, and fill up with plain home-made sugar syrup. This gives you 16 ounces—more than you can buy ready-made for $2.50. It is pure, good and very pleasant. Children take it eagerly.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. Usually the cough may be dry, hoarse and tight, or may be persistently loose, with phlegm or mucus. The cause is the inflamed membranes—and this Pinex and syrup combination will stop the cough in 24 hours or less. Splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, hoarseness or any ordinary throat ailment.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine pine extract, famous the world over for its prompt results. Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for 2½ ounces of Pinex with directions and don't accept anything else guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

TROUBLED WITH CONSTIPATION

From 16 to 20

Constipation is one of the commonest ills of mankind, and one too often allowed to go unlooked after until some serious complication sets in.

If the bowels are properly looked after there will be no constipation, jaundice, sick or bilious headache, heartburn, coated tongue, sour stomach, floating specks before the eyes, etc.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills will keep your bowels regulated and if used in no time the constipation will disappear entirely.

Miss Emma B. Melanson, Halifax, N.S., writes: "I am now 20 years of age, and since I was 16 I have been greatly troubled with constipation, so much so that at times I would be in bed 3 or 4 days a month. I tried all the old-fashioned remedies, castor oil, cascara, etc., with only temporary relief, until my aftertch-law gave me some of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. From the first they seemed beneficial, and I gave them a fair trial. This was two years ago, and with an occasional dose I have kept entirely free from constipation for the period mentioned."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

"THE CLUE IN THE AIR"

A DETECTIVE STORY—Isabel Ostrander

"He did that," agreed McCarty. "Even the experts don't pretend that it was anything else, but they put it that it was acted over the girl's dead unsettled his mind. Its a grim kind of a joke on him at the last that he should be thought crazy, after him planning to saddle his stepdaughter with the same thing."

"And he died, in a manner of speaking, the same kind of a death as the other one; Ivy Collins," Dennis mused.

"It's like a judgment on him even though he picked it himself, and had nothing to do with the murder. You know in a way that means business. The cough may be dry, hoarse and tight, or may be persistently loose, favor the formation of phlegm. The cause is the inflamed membranes—and this Pinex and syrup combination will stop the cough in 24 hours or less. Splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, hoarseness or any ordinary throat ailment.

"Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine pine extract, famous the world over for its prompt results. Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for 2½ ounces of Pinex with directions and don't accept anything else guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

"They say that he went up all right and was going good in spite of the wind, when all of a sudden the thing lurched dead and appeared to hang there in the air for a minute without a movement. Then it swooped down head first, turned over, and plunged straight for the ground.

"When they were got over what was left of Heafer his body had been taken away, they found that he must have shut the engine off in mid-air. He flew high, did Stephen Quimby. The pity of it is, that he couldn't do it straight and had to end in a fall."

"Twas the quickest way out for him, it held go in his dying," Dennis remarked. "I suppose there'll be nothing left now of the girl's money, and maybe he's been making a clean job of it, and monkeying with the funds of the Tradesman and Artisan's Bank, while he was about it."

"There's no telling yet. It's too bad about Marion Bowmer, though—Mrs. Leonard, that is. They're a fine couple; she's got the right spirit in her, and he's the right stuff, and they'll win out by themselves. I was thinking, if they're up against it just now, there's a nice bit of a cottage out at Homevale, with a garage—"

"Heaven defend them!" Dennis raised his hands. "Is no one safe from your schemes, you land-shrimp?"

"Is only that I haven't the price of a commission ticket that'll keep you from roping me in in my old age! Say Mac!" His face grew serious and sorbed in a forecast of the coming World Series, that he did not hear the pounding of heavy feet upon the pavement, and glanced up only when McCarty halted again, panting, before him.

"Denny, for the love of God, can you walk as far as the corner? Lean on me, and we'll take it slow. I've something to show you!"

"And what is it now?" asked Dennis. "Well, I know that corner's grocery, two ashcans and a vacant lot! I've interest in none of them."

"You will have!" McCarty affirmed. "And you'll come if I have to carry you!"

Dennis rose, shook himself experimentally, and spurned the solicitous arm offered.

"I'm all right. I was weak on my pins, first off, but the fresh air pulled me around fine. Must I forever be going it blind, or will you tell me for once what's doing?"

But McCarty only chuckled, and although he did his best to curb his excitement and accommodate his pace to the slower gait of his companion, it received all his control to keep from breaking into a run. Reaching the corner at last, he paused, and pointed dramatically across the street.

"Will you take a look at that sign on the fence over there in front of the vacant lot?" he commanded.

Dennis obeyed wonderingly.

"Very good looking," he commended. "But not what you might call showy or enticing. The Nushagak Company—"

"Not that, you lick-brained!" There, next the tobacco advertisement, set it!"

Dennis obeyed, and read aloud: "The Pantheon Theatre, Week of July 30th." "Hog wash! Vaudeville and Hare, the Four Bartons, Zinzafalsky's Seals, Tabloid Comedy, the Flying Accolinis—"

"What do you know about that?" McCarty executed a sailorish shuffle. "What do you think of that for a hunch? I'm going straight down to headquarters and get a warrant, and to-night I'll be at the Pantheon for my man!"

"And I'll be with you!" declared Dennis. "I'd not miss it for the world!"

"You're not to," protested his friend. "That fellow will not be fool enough to throw up his hands without a struggle, and well I know you could not keep out of a scrap if there was one handy, to save your life. I'll tell you all about it afterward."

"You'll tell me nothing! I'll be in at the finish myself!" Dennis glared at him. "Do you think that after trailing along through the whole case I'll be left out in the cold now? There's enough fight in me still to help put him to sleep, as you will see if he starts anything. But what if he ain't the right fellow at all? Just because that circus bill was in the clown's room—"

"I'll take a chance on it, and if you feel able to come along I'm glad of it. I'll be around for you at half past, seven."

The Pantheon was a huge and sumptuous theatre with a fashionable clientele, and McCarty and Dennis arriving early stood for a few minutes in the lobby watching the steady stream of motor cars discharging their occupants at the curb.

"We'll watch the act from the front and try to pick out our fellow, then go around and get him," McCarty announced in a lowered tone.

"Why not watch from the wing?" suggested Dennis.

"The house fireman here is Brennan, an old friend of mine, and he will pass us in. You can study them close then, and get your man as he leaves the stage."

"First come, first served. By the programme, they're the third act on."

They paused for a moment beside the entrance to the frame, containing photographs of the principal actors on display bill. The centre one, on the top row depicted two men in flashings and spangled trunks, poised airily on a trapeze. One was short and thick set, with a dull neck and bulging muscles, the other taller and obviously younger, with a superb physique and a lowering handsome face, like a splendid, sullen beast.

"That's our man!" McCarty pointed to the second figure. "He looks like the kind that would stand no trifling with, don't he? The girl that went back on him would take her life in her hands, all right!"

"And he'll put up a grand, little scrap, too, or I'm mistaken." Dennis forgot his weakness, and tingled with pleasurable anticipation. "Come on, the orchestra's tuning up."

Brennan, the house fireman, was glad to renew his friendship with Dennis, and readily found a place for them at the left of the stage, just back of the proscenium. McCarty highly interested in his unaccustomed surroundings and after the curtain had risen it was necessary to draw him back repeatedly to prevent him from obtruding his presence on the gaze of the audience.

Hogan and Hare, dancers, opened the bill, and he watched the dainty loliesome of the team with an awe and respect which was scarcely diminished when in a temporary prelude she volleyed a broadside of curses at the electrician for the eccentricities of the arc light.

Four husky young men in strangely conceived dress suits—the Barton Bartlett—next appeared behind McCarty's chair, awaiting their turn, and he addressed the nearest one in a tentative undertone.

A Pair for a Pair

Each Pair of Shoes should be Fitted with its Own Pair of Rubbers

YOUR shoeman will tell you that a shoe wears better and is more comfortable if fitted with Rubbers made to suit its particular style and shape.

There is no economy or comfort in trying to make one pair of Rubbers do service on several pairs of shoes.

And there's no need of your doing so, because the enormous demand for Rubbers makes it possible for us to offer a most complete line of shapes and styles to fit any and every shoe.

There's a style and shape for every shoe—for men, women and children—in these six brands of staunch, well-fitting Rubbers, carried by the leading shoemen.

The Ford Saves the Hay and Oats the Horses Eat

IT HAS been estimated that five acres of land are required to maintain one horse for a year, and that the same five acres would produce nearly enough food for two people. If 50,000 Canadian farmers each replaced one horse with a Ford, 250,000 acres would be added to the Nation's source of food supply, and enough extra food made available to feed 100,000 people.

Just think what a great service this means to the country at the present time and the benefit to the farmers from the sale of food produced on this acreage.

A Ford car also saves the farmer a week or more of valuable time each year, which can be used for further productive work. The Ford travels three times as fast as a horse and 15c—costs less to run and keep, and is far easier to take care of. With labor so scarce and high priced, time means money, so do not delay in getting your Ford.

Wireless Says 40,000 Japs Now In Siberia

Honolulu Reported Flash, But U. S. Government Has Not Received Confirmation—America is Awaiting a Reply From Japan Through Diplomatic Circles.

ACTION WAS DELAYED

WASHINGTON, March 9. — Japan's reply to American views against intervention in Siberia will probably be forthcoming quickly. It is said to be an informal communication sent through American Ambassador Morris of Tokio.

With the Germans continuing on in Russia, Japan may urge that the dangers to her own interests in the east are constantly increasing despite the American position that intervention is unnecessary for the present.

The absence of word showing a movement into Siberia tends to confirm reports here that the American position had delayed action.

On the other hand, the Government is pleased at a wireless message picked up by the American wireless at Honolulu several days ago stating that forty thousand Japanese troops already had landed in Siberia.

Honolulu merely reported having caught the flash and the Government has received no confirmation.

From all sides to-day came reports of the lethargy among the Russian peoples in the face of the crisis facing their country.

HEBRON.

Romans Destroyed City Lately Taken by British.

With the exception of Jerusalem, Bethlehem and Damascus, there is not a city in the Holy Land which holds greater interest for the Bible student than the ancient town of Hebron, recently captured by British forces under Gen. Sir E. H. E. Allenby.

Hebron is a ribbon of a town stretching along the eastern slope of a narrow valley above which are terraced vineyards and fruit orchards of great fertility. It is no more than twenty miles southwest of Jerusalem, and in peace times tourists are accustomed to make the journey by carriage in four or a half hours.

Until captured and pillaged by the Calebites (as recorded in the Book of Joshua), Hebron was known as Kirjath-Arba. It is one of the most ancient cities in the world, having been founded, according to the Book of Numbers, "seven years beforezoan in Egypt."

Hebron, means "The Friend of God," in other words, the city of Abraham. A tree standing in the Russian hospice garden, half a mile from the city, is known as the Oak Abraham. It will be remembered that it was under the oaks of Mamre that the patriarch pitched his tents and he is supposed to have built an altar here in 1920 B.C.

When Moses sent his spies into the land of Canaan, Hebron was one of the cities visited. It was here that David was anointed king over Judah, and that six of his sons were born, including Absalom, who at a later date made this the headquarters of his rebellion against his father. It was also here that Absor, captain of Saul's hosts and guardian of Saul's son, Ishbosheth, was killed by Joab. Hebron was for ...ded by Baldwin I. when it was re-peopled after the return of the children of Israel from captivity.

Following Biblical days Hebron was destroyed by the Romans. It became a place of importance under Moslem rule, not only on account of its commerce, but also because of its connection with Abraham, who is venerated by the followers of Mohammed. During the Crusades it was occupied by the Christians for a short time and became the seat of a Latin bishop in 1167, but it was recaptured by the Moslems under Saladin twenty years later.

The most conspicuous building in Hebron is the Haram, with its ramparts dating from the Herodian period. Within the enclosure are monuments to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Sarah, Rebecca, and Leah. These are above the double caverns of Machpelah, which was purchased by Abraham from Ephron the Hittite as a family burial-place when Sarah died. The tombs of the patriarchs are covered with richly embroidered green cloths, while those of their wives are covered with crimson draperies.

The population of Hebron is variously estimated at from 18,000 to 30,000, and the number of Jews at from 50 to 2,000. The town was a thriving trading centre before the war, the finding being here an active demand for their native products, leather water bottles, and lamps.

According to mediaeval tradition, Adam, the father of mankind, died in Hebron.

GRAIN MARKET

Ideal weather and prospects for immediate improvement in transport conditions tended to weaken the local grain markets yesterday. The options closed slightly lower, and cash quotations were also a shade easier at Port William. Ontario oats are quoted 2c lower, bringing them down to 79c, outside. Farm reserves figures published yesterday from Washington are of a bullish character. Wheat is given at 111,273,000 bushels, or 17.1 per cent. of the 1917 crop; corn, 1,295,905,000, or 40.9 of 1917 crop; oats, 2,595,036,000, or 37.5 of 1917 crop.

CATTLE MARKET

Instant Postum

While thousands, for years, have used this delicious cereal beverage as 'their regular meal-time drink, others, without trying, have 'wondered why.'

A can of Instant Postum from the grocer will quickly demonstrate such qualities of excellent flavor, convenience, health, economy and time-saving as to win you for its friend.

"There's a Reason"

With fairly good runs of cattle arriving during the week, prices declined on an average of about 25c lower than the previous week, making a total decline of $1 a dollar for the past two weeks. The quality of this week's offering has shown a good average, and included quite a few small lots of extra choice steers, for which there was a good demand at prices ranging from $12 to $12.50. These high prices, however, were the exceptions to the general rule, for $12 cattle were few and far between. The demand for choice butcher cattle has continued steady at the average decline of 25c, as registered in Monday's market after a very slow opening. Tuesday's market continued very slow and dreary, though the receipts of fresh cattle were small. There were quite a few stale and half-decayed cattle among the held-overs from Monday, and these were a decided drag. Wednesday's market saw trade a little more lively, cattle being taken more freely, particularly the fresh and empty stock. Prices, however, were really no higher than on Monday's market, freshness and empty condition considered. Small bunches of extra choice quality continued to fetch prices considerably above the average. Thursday's market brought the usual cleaning up; the stale leftovers being difficult to cash in, and then only at slight concessions. Fair to good quality butcher continued steady.

Butcher cows and bulls held good and steady to firm all week.

Stocker trade was slightly more active than in the previous week.

Calves, choice veal were generally firm to slightly higher. A lot of "bob" calves, however, were a drag on the market.

Choice milch cows are in good demand.

Sheep and lambs were steady to firm, with light runs.

Hogs maintained a strong position in Union Stock Yards—Total receipts for the week, 30,000 cattle, 1,000 calves, 12,500 hogs, 500 sheep and lambs, and 700 horses.

City Cattle Market—99 cars, with 465 cattle, 110 sheep, 407 hogs, 21 calves, and 18 horses.

Cincinnati man tells how to lift off any corn without hurting one bit

You reckless men and women who are pestered with corns and who have at least once a week invited an awful death from lockjaw or blood poison are now told by a Cincinnati authority to use a drug called freezone, which the moment a few drops are applied to any corn, the corn is loosened and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts out with the fingers.

It is a sticky substance which dries the moment it is applied and is said to simply shrivel the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. It is claimed that a quarter of an ounce of freezone will cost very little at any of the drug stores, but it is sufficient to cure a foot of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You are further warned that cutting at a corn is a suicidal habit.

Try soaking bacon in cold water for three or four minutes before frying; it will prevent the grease from running.

When boiling new potatoes place them in boiling water to which a little salt and milk have been added. This prevents them from turning black.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Miss Todd's Mistake

By Clement E. Rushton

"Snub-nosed!"

"Freckled!"

"And homely as sin!"

"But we must pamper and coddle this dear ancient lady of ours on account of the shekels."

Miss Tabitha Todd gasped. Her hand fell away. She made a dash for the heartless tell-tale phonograph and shut it off.

"Outrageous!" she almost shrieked.

"Abominable!" she added and went to the mirror and surveyed herself. Yes, she was snub-nosed, and yes, she was freckled. As to her homeliness there was no question. Her faded old eyes filled with tears and her lips puckered.

"It isn't that I am that," she breathed brokenly. "It's the heartlessness of it, 'after my shekels!' Willis, whom I loved as an own son! Clara, who was to be a joint heiress! A shallow, faithless, undeserving pair of wretched schemers. Well, I am warned in time, thank goodness!"

It had all come about through her nephew, Willis Rand, and his wife, Clara, whose guest she was, leaving her alone in the house that morning. They had treated Aunt Tabitha like an own mother. So far her week's visit had attached her more than ever to this happy-spirited young couple, who, in the absence of any very material wealth, seemed to live and thrive on love and kisses.

Miss Todd bustled from the room, to reappear ten minutes later ready for the street, suitcase in hand. She proceeded to remove the wretched record from the instrument. She replaced it where she had accidently discovered it, way upon the plate rail. She loved the phonograph, but had tired of those so often played records in the cabinet and had resolved to try this old one to while the time away.

"There!" she voiced tartly. "They shall never know how their perfidy came to be exposed."

Then Miss Tabitha Todd scrawled a few lines on a sheet of paper, left it on the table and flounced from that treacherous roof, on fire with indignation and resentment.

It was four hours later when Willis and Clara returned. Willis was first to discover the note. "What in the name of wonder does this mean?" he ejaculated, and both, petrified, read:

"Do not ever speak to me, write to me, or even think of me again."

"Why!" gasped Clara.

"What," cried Willis. "Oh, Aunt Tabitha has gone crazy!" He rushed upstairs, to find her belongings gone. Then he hurried to the nearest telegraph office and indited a wire to the home of their missing relative.

"Anxious. Clara worried to death. What has happened?" the telegram ran, but there came no reply.

Clara wrote the next day, but the letter, unopened and enclosed in another envelope, came back. Willis called up Aunt Tabitha on the long-distance telephone, but as soon as his voice was recognized the irate old maid hung up the receiver.

"It's no use," Willis told Clara finally. "She has taken some perverse kink and won't be conciliated."

Miss Todd passed a desolate year in her lonely village home. Many a time a longing thought to see her discarded relatives intruded on her mind, but she banished it resolutely. She took in several cats as pets, superseded them with canine favorites, then in turn with canary birds and began to develop fads and eccentricities that aged and soured her.

One day Miss Todd was compelled to go to the city on business. She sighed drearily as she recalled the warm greetings a certain home had once held for her. She transacted her business and had to put in the afternoon as best she could, for there was no home train until late afternoon.

Finally she paused to read a billboard in front of a little bijou of a theater. It announced that "the English players" were to give a matinee that afternoon, program, "the sterling old standard drama, 'She Stoops to Conquer,' preceded by the equally ancient, but famous skit, 'The Biter Bit.'" Miss Todd entered the theater.

The curtain rose. She was only indifferently interested, she fancied, but her mind aroused mightily as the curtain rolled up and a stage dressing room was the scene. A faded, bedizened queen of tragedy, powdered, roughed and furbelowed, was going on in her part and her obsequious maid and her husband were hypocritically flattering her as to her beauty and ability. But as she left them; behind her back they derided her through gestures and grimaces. Then, the instant the door closed after the actress, the following colloquy ensued:

"Snub-nosed!"

"And freckled!"

"Homely as sin!"

"But we must pamper and coddle this dear ancient lady of ours on account of the shekels."

Miss Todd came upright with a shock. Why! those were the very words of the phonograph. Then—then— She breathed and thought fast. Enlightenment began to stream into her mind. She arose from her seat and went out into the lobby. She walked up to the main usher.

"Will you tell me, sir," she began—"the drama they are playing. Is it very old?"

"Very old, Miss," bowed the profuse usher.

"As—as old as I am?"

"Over twenty, you mean," propounded the politic usher. "Yes, indeed, Miss, it was written over two hundred years ago. It is a great favorite with amateurs, school exhibitions, church entertainments, amateur clubs and all that, but never acted as it is in this country until—"

But Miss Todd had vanished. With speed, an excited, distracted creature, she reached the street. She hailed the first cab she met. It was old and shaky, but she did not mind that. If it had been an express wagon, in her present frame of mind Miss Todd would have engaged it had it then been going her way.

Miss Todd's way was the way to the home of the Rands. She was lashing herself and pitying them all the way. Her eyes had been opened. She had now recalled that Willie and Clara had belonged to an amateur dramatic club. The colloquy she had caught over the phonograph was, of course, a record of their parts in the play they were to give.

Dear, persecuted children! How she had unjustly misjudged them! Could she ever forgive herself?

When she reached the little home once so dear to her, now so longed for by her repentent spirit, she found a moving van in front of it and two men carrying out a piece of furniture.

"What's this?" she snapped out.

"Seized for debt," vouchsafed one of the movers.

"Seized—debt!" almost shrieked Miss Todd. "What—how do you mean?"

"Just what I say. Mr. Rand went surety for a friend, who left him in the lurch. Lawyer brought suit, judgment. Rand and his wife are at his office now, giving notes for deficiency, for furniture doesn't cover full amount."

"Where's this hideous persecutor of my dear darlings?" quavered Miss Todd and after informing the man that the money would be paid at once to move nothing from the house, the energetic lady started for the office of the lawyer.

Money covered the sordid features of the occasion, tears, confession, reconciliation, smiles, kisses the pathetic element of the case.

Back in the old home Miss Todd continued to dwell upon the circumstances.

"And I am snubnosed," she insisted.

"Grecian-classic," declared Willis.

"And freckled."

"So is Clara, since she had to do her own washing. True sign of a fair complexion.

"And homely as sin."

"What! you, the belle of the village when you were a girl! Tell that to the marines and some of the twenty odd young fellows whose hearts you broke by refusing to marry them."

And all this put Miss Tabitha Todd in fine humor.

"Well, there's the shekels, now," she pursued finally. "I'm going to divide them between you loyal two, provided you give me a home here for the rest of my days."

MEN AND WOMEN TO EARN MORE MONEY

The most powerful single influence in greater production, and consequently in greater earning power, is the energy of the worker.

To work his or her best, the worker must be in possession of perfect health. So many who start the day's work with full vigor, tire as the day's work goes on and are forced to make frequent stops to relieve an aching back.

This backache is not due to the work, but to defective kidney action, and will disappear if treatment with Gin Pills is resorted to.

We have a number of testimonials on file from men who have had to give up work on account of backache, rheumatism, and the various ills that follow poor Kidney action. Gin Pills enabled these people to resume steady work again, with the vigor of youth and all the happiness of unfettered activity.

We will gladly send a free trial of Gin Pills to all who feel the need of this tested remedy, or we urge you to buy from your dealer on the strict understanding that your money will be returned by us if Gin Pills fail to benefit your particular case, accepting your word on this matter. AFTER the publication of his Receipt Book Dr. Chase found himself overwhelmed with the demand for his services and his medicines. Not only did patients come from many miles to throng his office, but the mails were filled with letters ordering medicines.

Rather than disappoint his patients and admirers, and always anxious to relieve suffering, the doctor decided to give to the people the great prescriptions which had been so thoroughly tested and so remarkably successful in his private practice.

And so it came that Dr. Chase's Medicines were placed on public sale at nominal prices. To-day you can scarcely find a drug store that is not stocked with a full line of these medicines, and that home is the exception where there is not one or more of them in use.

Like most articles of exceptional merit and large sales Dr. Chase's Medicines are widely imitated, and substitutes are frequently offered in their place. On this account it is very important that you should see the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author, on the box you buy. They are printed on every box for your protection, and imitators do not dare to use them.

POISONOUS BITE OF FISHES

Attacks of the Octopus and Other Rovers of the Sea Are Explained by Pieron.

It used to be supposed that cuttlefishes suffocated crabs with their suckers and then tore them open with their beaks. But the method is more subtle, says Knowledge. In 1895 Krause showed that the secretion of the posterior salivary glands of the octopus was very toxic, and it was supposed that the octopus gave a poisonous bite. But Pieron has recently shown that the octopus at least does not bite the crab until after death. The paralyzing secretion is probably wafted into the crab with the respiratory current.

Similarly, in regard to bivalves it was thought that the cuttlefish forced the valves asunder by fixing suckers to each valve and then pulling in opposite directions. But Pieron has shown with cockles, mussels, scallops, and the like that the toxic juice first paralyzes the adductor muscles. In the case of the cockle the octopus breaks some of the teeth on the posterior margin of the shell, so that the salivary juice may get in more readily. After paralysis has set in force is employed, but it does not require much. The secretion from the stomach of the starfish has apparently the same paralyzing action on bivalves.

Art Never Grows Old.

A great work of art is never old-fashioned; because it expresses in final form some truth about human nature, and human nature never changes—in comparison with its primal elements, the mountains are ephemeral. A drama dealing with the impalpable human soul is more likely to stay true than a treatise on geology, writes William Lyon Phelps in the Bookman. This is the notable advantage that works of art have over the works of science, the advantage of being and remaining true. No matter how important the contribution of scientific books, they are alloyed with inevitable error, and after the death of their authors must be constantly revised by lesser men, improved by smaller minds; whereas the masterpieces of poetry, drama and fiction cannot be revised, because they are always true. The latest edition of a work of science is the most valuable; and in literature, the earliest.

The Results of 1917

The Thirty-first Annual Report of The Manufacturers Life Insurance Company shows a record of growth unsurpassed by previous achievements.

The new assurances amounted to the large sum of $16,485,403, and the Insurance in Force, $98,128,631.

The gain in insurance, $9,010,272, was the largest in the history of the Company.

The increase in Assets was $1,891,348. The Assets now total $24,585,783.

The Income exceeded $5,100,000 and also established a new record.

The mortality was again very favorable, despite the extra claims imposed by the war, being more than 25% below that provided for.

Notwithstanding the fact that the Company made large purchases of War Bonds during the year, the average rate of interest earned was 6.52%.

The Surplus, exclusive of Special Reserve, now amounts to $2,530,054.54. This Surplus, compiled under the Canadian Government Standard, would amount to $3,670,589.54, showing a gain over the previous year of $226,805.69.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Miss Todd's Mistake

By Clement E. Rushton

"Snub-nosed!"

"Freckled!"

"And homely as sin!"

"But we must pamper and coddle this dear ancient lady of ours on account of the shekels."

Miss Tabitha Todd gasped. Her hand fell away. She made a dash for the heartless tell-tale phonograph and shut it off.

"Outrageous!" she almost shrieked.

"Abominable!" she added and went to the mirror and surveyed herself. Yes, she was snub-nosed, and yes, she was freckled. As to her homeliness there was no question. Her faded old eyes filled with tears and her lips puckered.

"It isn't that I am that," she breathed brokenly. "It's the heartlessness of it, after my shekels!" Willis, whom I loved as an own son! Clara, who was to be a joint heiress! A shallow, faithless, undeserving pair of wretched schemers. Well, I am warned in time, thank goodness!"

It had all come about through her nephew, Willis Rand, and his wife, Clara, whose guest she was, leaving her alone in the house that morning. They had treated Aunt Tabitha like an own mother. So far her week's visit had attached her more than ever to this happy-spirited young couple, who, in the absence of any very material wealth, seemed to live and thrive on love and kisses.

Miss Todd bustled from the room, to reappear ten minutes later ready for the street, suitcase in hand. She proceeded to remove the wretched record from the instrument. She replaced it where she had accidently discovered it, way upon the plate rail. She loved the phonograph, but had tired of those so often played records in the cabinet and had resolved to try this old one to while the time away.

"There!" she voiced tartly. "They shall never know how their perfidy came to be exposed."

Then Miss Tabitha Todd scrawled a few lines on a sheet of paper, left it on the table and flounced from that treacherous roof, on fire with indignation and resentment.

It was four hours later when Willis and Clara returned. Willis was first to discover the note. "What in the name of wonder does this mean?" he ejaculated, and both, petrified, read:

"Do not ever speak to me, write to me, or even think of me again."

"Why!" gasped Clara.

"What," cried Willis. "Oh, Aunt Tabitha has gone crazy!" He rushed upstairs, to find her belongings gone. Then he hurried to the nearest telegraph office and indited a wire to the home of their missing relative.

"Anxious. Clara worried to death. What has happened?" the telegram ran, but there came no reply.

Clara wrote the next day, but the letter, unopened and enclosed in another envelope, came back. Willis called up Aunt Tabitha on the long-distance telephone, but as soon as his voice was recognized the irate old maid hung up the receiver.

"It's no use," Willis told Clara finally. "She has taken some perverse kink and won't be conciliated."

Miss Todd passed a desolate year in her lonely village home. Many a time a longing thought to see her discarded relatives intruded on her mind, but she banished it resolutely. She took in several cats as pets, superseded them with canine favorites, then in turn with canary birds and began to develop fads and eccentricities that aged and soured her.

One day Miss Todd was compelled to go to the city on business. She sighed drearily as she recalled the warm greetings a certain home had once held for her. She transacted her business and had to put in the afternoon as best she could, for there was no home train until late afternoon.

Finally she paused to read a billboard in front of a little bijou of a theater. It announced the "the English players" were to give a matinee that afternoon, program, "the sterling old standard drama, 'She Stoops to Conquer,' preceded by the equally ancient, but famous skit, 'The Biter Bit.'" Miss Todd entered the theater.

The curtain rose. She was only indifferently interested, she fancied, but her mind aroused mightily as the curtain rolled up and a stage dressing room was the scene. A faded, bedizened queen of tragedy, powdered, roughed and furbelowed, was going on in her part and her obsequious maid and her husband were hypocritically flattering her as to her beauty and ability. But as she left them; behind her back they derided her through gestures and grimaces. Then, the instant the door closed after the actress, the following colloquy ensued:

"Snub-nosed!"

"And freckled!"

"Homely as sin!"

"But we must pamper and coddle this dear ancient lady of ours on account of the shekels."

Miss Todd came upright with a shock. Why! those were the very words of the phonograph. Then—then— She breathed and thought fast. Enlightenment began to stream into her mind. She arose from her seat and went out into the lobby. She walked up to the main usher.

"Will you tell me, sir," she began—"the drama they are playing. Is it very old?"

"Very old, Miss," bowed the profuse usher.

"As—as old as I am?"

"Over twenty, you mean," propounded the politic usher. "Yes, indeed, Miss, it was written over two hundred years ago. It is a great favorite with amateurs, school exhibitions, church entertainments, amateur clubs and all that, but never acted as it is in this country until—"

But Miss Todd had vanished. With speed, an excited, distracted creature, she reached the street. She hailed the first cab she met. It was old and shaky, but she did not mind that. If it had been an express wagon, in her present frame of mind Miss Todd would have engaged it had it then been going her way.

Miss Todd's way was the way to the home of the Rands. She was lashing herself and pitying them all the way. Her eyes had been opened. She had now recalled that Willie and Clara had belonged to an amateur dramatic club. The colloquy she had caught over the phonograph was, of course, a record of their parts in the play they were to give.

Dear, persecuted children! How she had unjustly misjudged them! Could she ever forgive herself?

When she reached the little home once so dear to her, now so longed for by her repentent spirit, she found a moving van in front of it and two men carrying out a piece of furniture.

"What's this?" she snapped out.

"Seized for debt," vouchsafed one of the movers.

"Seized—debt!" almost shrieked Miss Todd. "What—how do you mean?"

"Just what I say. Mr. Rand went surety for a friend, who left him in the lurch. Lawyer brought suit, judgment. Rand and his wife are at his office now, giving notes for deficiency, for furniture doesn't cover full amount."

"Where's this hideous persecutor of my dear darlings?" quavered Miss Todd and after informing the man that the money would be paid at once to move nothing from the house, the energetic lady started for the office of the lawyer.

Money covered the sordid features of the occasion, tears, confession, reconciliation, smiles, kisses the pathetic element of the case.

Back in the old home Miss Todd continued to dwell upon the circumstances.

"And I am snubnosed," she insisted.

"Grecian-classic," declared Willis.

"And freckled."

"So is Clara, since she had to do her own washing. True sign of a fair complexion.

"And homely as sin."

"What! you, the belle of the village when you were a girl! Tell that to the marines and some of the twenty odd young fellows whose hearts you broke by refusing to marry them."

And all this put Miss Tabitha Todd in fine humor.

"Well, there's the shekels, now," she pursued finally. "I'm going to divide them between you loyal two, provided you give me a home here for the rest of my days."

The most powerful single influence in greater production, and consequently in greater earning power, is the energy of the worker.

To work his or her best, the worker must be in possession of ect health. So many who start the da work with full vigor, tire as the day's work goes on and are forced to make frequent stops to relieve an aching back.

This backache is not due to the work, but to defective kidney action, and will disappear if treatment with Gin Pills is resorted to.

We have a number of testimonials on file from men who have had to give up work on account of backache, rheumatism, and the various ills that follow poor Kidney action. Gin Pills enabled these people to resume steady work again, with the vigor of youth and all the happiness of unfettered activity.

We will gladly send a free trial of Gin Pills to all who feel the need of this tested remedy, or we urge you to buy from your dealer on the strict understanding that your money will be returned by us if Gin Pills fail to benefit your particular case, accepting your word on this matter. # VIMY

It Fires the Imagination!

TO most of us at home Vimy and Vimy Ridge were little more than names in the newspaper, in our soldiers' letters, on war maps. To-day the name Vimy is vivid with life and opportunity, for our sister France has accepted our offer, and Canada is to rebuild Vimy. It is a proud and glad privilege. Think of Vimy as it lies to-day—ashes, ruin, and desolation—and then dream of Vimy as it will be through our individual efforts. Every dollar contributed will help to recreate a home, make a start, erect a church, or any one of the thousands of operations that will be financed as Canada's Enduring Memorial to her soldiers who fought at Vimy Ridge.

Those whom the war has exiled from the homes of Vimy are for the most part destitute. Children, widows, old men were helpless—till NOW! Canada's offer is the first ray of light or hope they will know. Give liberally. Give now. Organize for the raising of funds. Every dollar means so much to the homeless sufferer! You will ever be proud of the part YOU played in rebuilding Vimy.

HAPPY REPRIEVES

CHAPTER XI.

If anyone had asked me at this time if I loved my husband I should have unhesitatingly answered "yes." I, of course, expected we would have our little ups and downs, just like other people. We might sometimes disagree but that we should really seriously quarrel I never imagined.

George had found fault with me, my appearance, my conversation. So I tried in every way to improve myself. To make of myself the well poised woman he was always talking about. The poised woman of his world.

Occasionally George would tell me he loved me. Such happy periods now were only reprieves. I thought long afterwards, when the climax came. But at the time they made me very happy. I was inordinately proud of my handsome aristocratic husband. And there was just a bit of awe mixed with the pride. Whenever I looked at the stern, clean-cut features I used to tremble at the thought of ever making him angry at me. Then in opposition I would at me. Then in opposition I would at each temple and ache to sit on his lap and run my fingers through it, mussing it so that I might smooth it again.

But it had been one of the things I had done which annoyed him while we were on our wedding trip.

A REBUKE.

I had perched myself on his knee, and was carelessly running my fingers through his hair as I talked.

"Please stop that, Helen. I can't endure to be mauled," he had said, and I never had dared offend again.

Then once more when I asked him if he didn't care about me, he had said:

"I've never pretended I didn't care for you. When you act to please me, I am very fond of you."

"Fond!" Why a man is fond of his dog, his horse, any number of things.

"But I want you to love me," I had said childishly.

"How much I care for you depends entirely upon yourself," he had said in a tone that closed the discussion.

I stood silent. My lips parted, but no words came. Finally, I gasped: "You are not in the least interested in my love for you. You must have wanted me to love you or you wouldn't have married me. Is it only that you do not want me to say so? I must give and give, and say nothing. Give until I have poured out all my love, all my life. And"—

"That will do," he interrupted. "Please do not get so excited over nothing!"

"Excuse me. I won't offend you again," I had said stiffly.

"See that you don't!"

THE NEW GOWN.

The next day I ordered the car and drove to Mercede' establishment. I selected a model and ordered the new gown.

"My husband will come with me for the fitting," I told them. "I must have the dress a week from to-day."

"Very well, Mrs. Howard, it shall be ready."

After leaving the dressmakers I did not feel like going directly home, so told John, the new chauffeur, to drive through a large park on the outskirts of the town.

Suddenly I sat up very straight. Coming towards me was Merton Gray. He was riding the most beautiful black horse and had seen me. He drew up to the side of the car, and raised his hat, then passed on. But not before I had noticed the same look of admiration in his eyes that I had observed the day I met him with Madge Loring. It was nice to know that I had at last met a young person. Perhaps he knew some nice girls, or very young married women, like myself, and would introduce me to them.

When George came home I told him of the encounter. He didn't make any comment, but asked if I had ordered the gown.

"Yes, and I told them you would come with me for the fitting."

"Then it will probably be ready for you. Did you order white?"

"Of course, you told me to."

It had never occurred to me to express a preference. He had said to order white.

"I bought you another cloak to-day. It will be up in the morning," he told me.

"Oh, thank you! Is it blue, like the other?"

"It is blue, but not at all like the other. Rather handsomer, I think."

"Oh, you are so good to me!" I exclaimed, and I threw my arm about his neck.

"That will do! You will muss my collar, and I have to go out!"

"You're not going out again tonight are you?" I asked. He had been out very late the night before, and I had lain awake until he came in.

"Yes, I am going out again, as you put it. I want to find you in bed when I come in." Once or twice I had sat up for him—that is once or twice after he had forbidden me to, and he had been angry.

Difficult Writing.

The story of a compositor's worries with Thomas Carlyle's MS. recalls the somewhat kindred experience that befell a typesetter in the office of a Dundee newspaper to whose columns George Gilfillan frequently contributed. Being a member of Gilfillan's congregation, this compositor was "favored" with a large amount of his minister's wretchedly written copy. One day when the MS. was even more undecipherable than usual the man banged it down on his frame with the remark: "As a Christian I honor and admire Mr. Gilfillan, but as a compositor I'll never be happy till his body gets three claps of the spade!"

Always Unusual.

"How do you account for the remarkable weather."

"Haven't tried. To be perfectly frank, I don't believe I recall more than a few months in the past ten or fifteen years when the weather wasn't being described as remarkable."

New British Sea Lord Has Been Great Worker And Successful Organizer

THOUGH it seems to be generally supposed that the loss of three British destroyers off the Dutch coast was responsible for the retirement of Sir John Jellicoe as First Sea Lord, the Mail and Empire suggested that the comparatively trifling cause was hardly commensurate with the extremely important effect. No navy can expect to escape losses, and to retire Jellicoe because three destroyers were sunk would be much like retiring Haig because of a successful German raid on the British trenches.

The future historian will not say that Jellicoe was a failure as head of the British navy; he is more likely to point out that in his patriotic and characteristic determination to become familiar with all the minutae of the British sea forces he simply broke down his health. It does not seem probable that Sir Rosslyn Wemyss will inaugurate a new policy with regard to handling the British navy. The difference will be that since he is a man of different temperament from Jellicoe, he will be able to remain First Sea Lord and still stand under the strain. It is said that Wemyss is a born organizer. The officer above quoted says: "He is the shrewdest judge of a man's capabilities I know." He picks his assistants with the greatest care, but once having chosen them he lets them handle their own departments with little or no interference, a policy which has proved successful in business, and also in war. Instead of worrying as to whether his subordinates are doing their work properly he does his worrying before he chooses them. Thereafter they are permitted to do the worrying.

Sir Rosslyn Wemyss was born in Wemyss Castle, Fife, Scotland, April 12, 1864, his father being Sir Rosslyn Erskine Wemyss, and his mother the only daughter of the late Sir Robert Morier, G.C.B., a well-known English diplomat who matched his wits more than once with Bismarck. It is said, indeed, that he was the first British diplomat to perceive the peril to the rest of Europe of the empire that Bismarck was building up. The First Sea Lord was afloat almost from the cradle, fishing and sailing being his favorite sports. He entered the navy in 1877 as an ensign, became a lieutenant ten years later, a commander in 1898 and a captain in 1901. He was appointed rear admiral in 1911, and was made vice admiral at the time he went to the East Indian appointment a year ago. He was sent to the Mediterranean shortly after war broke out, but was recalled to the grand fleet because his specialty was the handling of big ships. As commander of one of the naval units he took part in the Battle of Jutland, and was mentioned in despatches for his fine work.

Sir Rosslyn Wemyss is known as a "big ship" man. That is to say, he is an exponent of the theory that the strength of the navy depends upon the number of dreadnaughts and super-dreadnoughts that can be put in the line of battle. Shortly before the war he commanded the Orion, one of the largest of them, and a unit in the second squadron, which was composed of Britain's newest and biggest ships. He was second in command of this squadron, for whose fine discipline and appearance he was given much credit. He was an enthusiast upon discipline and also on gunnery, but his fine open nature and jolly manners made working with him or under him a pleasure. "A man more truly imbued with a love and interest in his profession never lived," says the British officer.

Hutuktu, or Living Buddha.

The secret of Mongolia's weakness lies in the fact that the warlike ardor of its people has been dampened by Buddhism, a religion more pacific in its doctrines than any other in the world. Under the soporific influence of this religion the Mongols are content to live in nomadic life, wandering from place to place with their herds of sheep, cattle, horses and camels. They live in tents exactly like those described by the earliest travellers who visited them in the Middle Ages. They have no political unity and no real national government. Their only bond of unity is the Buddhist religion. The high priest of this religion is the Hutuktu who resides at Urga, the religious and secular capital. The Mongols believe that the Hutuktu is the reincarnation of Buddha. They worship him as god and call him the Living Buddha. They sacrifice to him incense and keep tiny lamps burning before his image, which is found in every Mongol tent. Because of his desire to become the Emperor as well as the god of the Mongols the Hutuktu allowed himself to be drawn into the meshes of Russian intrigue, thus making his country a second Manchuria wherein Russian and Japanese interests have become paramount in utter disregard of China's sovereign rights.

MARKEN ISLAND OLD STYLE

Ancient Manners Are Still Observed and Historic Costumes Are Worn by the Inhabitants.

Marken Island is a bit of the old Holland, an inlet lying in the Zuyder Zee not far from Edam, of cheese fame. Holland is rapidly becoming modernized nowadays; the blue bloomer of the canal boatmen has gone the way of the wooden shoe, well toward oblivion, although the latter, it is said, is becoming increasingly popular with the price of leather soaring, writes Niksah. The Dutch are rapidly abandoning the old ways that endeared them to the artists of bygone generations, so that any spot where the traditional customs are still preserved is worthy of note as a living museum of history.

Such a spot is Marken Island, where old manners are still followed and the old costumes still worn. Separated by only a narrow channel from the progressive mainland, it is none the less fifty years behind the times. It seems to be characteristic of small islands that they progress much more slowly than mainland whence their people came. Thus in the Arran islands off the coast of Ireland the old Irish tongue is still spoken; in the Hebrides men still live as they lived in the days of Scott, and on Marken Island the men still go down to the fishing boats in bloomers and wooden shoes.

The dark blue bloomer is the mark of the married man, while the single men wear white—a somewhat illogical arrangement in view of the facilities for laundry work that married men ought to have. The women wear the old-time costumes and carry their knitting about with them on the streets. Every one of the houses is exceedingly small and almost unbelievably clean. There are not more than 300 people all told in this little colony of fishermen.

Marken is quaint and old-fashioned, but it lacks the touch of self-unconsciousness to make it perfect. In all the little shops you can purchase picture postal cards depicting scenes that are "quaint" and "typical." And when a region begins to realize that it is picturesque it has taken the first step on the road to the commonplace.

A Waiting Attitude.

"Have you learned any of the new dances yet?"

"No," replied the man who takes himself seriously. "I've been thinking of trying the Chinese toddle, but I'm waiting to hear how the political situation in China crystallizes. I don't believe in encouraging a country as long as it shows monarchistic tendencies."

WHEN THE STOMACH IS WRONG LIFE SEEMS TO BE A BURDEN

Indigestion Comes With a Debilitated and Run-down Condition of the System and Can Be Cured Through Enriching the Blood

There are many symptoms of indigestion, such as acute pain after eating, belching of wind, nausea and vomiting, bloating and pains in the region of the heart, a dread of food for the misery it causes. Dieting and the use of pre-digested foods may give ease, but can't cure—they only further weaken the stomach. The work of digestion depends upon the blood and the only way to cure indigestion is to tone up the stomach through the blood to do the work nature intended it should do. The very best way to cure indigestion is through a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which renew the blood, strengthen the nerves and enable the stomach to do its work with ease and comfort. Neglected indigestion means prolonged misery, and a more difficult cure. If you have any of the symptoms of this trouble try the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at once, and you will be gratified with the results.

APPETITE FAILED.

Mrs. Daniel Dexter, Liverpool, N.S. says: "For years I was a great sufferer from indigestion. I was troubled with gas on the stomach which caused disagreeable sensations. I was also frequently troubled with nausea and vomiting, which were very distressing. As a result of my trouble, my appetite almost completely failed and what I did eat caused me constant pain. I was constantly doctoring but did not get any benefit and had about made up my mind that I would suffer for life. One day a friend asked me why I did not try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and while I had not much hope of a cure I decided to do so. I had only taken a few boxes however when I found that they were helping me. Very gladly then I continued the use of the pills and in less than three months I was as well as ever I had been, able to eat a hearty meal, and to feel that life was again worth living. I had also been troubled from time to time with attacks of rheumatism, and the use of the pills cured this as well as the indigestion. It is now over a year since I took the pills and in that time I have had no return of the trouble."

FOOD TURNED SOUR.

Mrs. J. Harris, Gerrard street, Toronto, says: "About three years ago I was seized with a severe attack of indigestion and vomiting. My food seemed to turn sour as soon as I ate it, and I would turn so deathly sick that sometimes I would fall on the floor after vomiting. I tried home remedies but they did not help me. Then I went to a doctor who gave me some powders, but they seemed to make me worse. This went on for nearly two months, and by that time my stomach was in such a state that I could not keep down a drink of water and I was wasted to a skeleton and felt that life was not worth living. I was not married at this time and one Sunday evening on the way to church with my intended husband I was taken with a bad spell on the street. He took me to a drug store where the clerk fixed me up something to take and my intended got me a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. By the end of the first week I could feel some improvement from the pills and I gladly continued taking them until every symptom of the trouble was gone and I was again enjoying the best of health. These pills are now my standby and I tell all my friends what they did for me."

SUFFERED GREAT DISTRESS.

Mrs. Albert Hall, Sonya, Ont., says: "I have used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with wonderful results. For two years I was a great sufferer from indigestion which almost made me a physical wreck. At times my sufferings were so great that I was unable to attend to my household duties. I had smothering spells at times and was afraid to lie down to rest. After every meal, no matter how sparingly I ate. I suffered great distress. I tried several doctors but their medicine did not seem to help me in the least. I saw Dr. Williams' Pink Pills advertised to cure this trouble, and decided to try them. I had not been taking them long when I felt somewhat improved. This improvement continued and after taking ten boxes I could eat and digest all kinds of food and felt better than I had for years. You may be sure I am very grateful for the wonderful relief these pills have given me. I know they are also a cure for anaemic sufferers, as an intimate friend of mine was badly affected with this trouble, and after taking several boxes she was entirely cured.

If you are suffering from any form of stomach trouble, or any of the many ailments due to weak, watery blood, do not waste time and money experimenting with other remedies, but begin Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at once. These Pills have proved a cure in thousands of cases, and should do so in yours. Sold by all dealers in medicines or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

ENEMY ATTACK ON YPRES FRONT PROVES TOTAL FAILURE

Was Repulsed at All Points Except For 200 Yards Near Poelderhoek Where a Counter Attack Resulted in the Re-capture of the Position by the British After Severe Fighting During the Night British Official Statement Announces To-day.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 9.—A British official statement says: A party of the enemy which approached our line yesterday evening east of Neuve Chapelle was driven off by our fire. At dawn this morning Portuguese troops successfully raided the German trenches in this neighbourhood and captured several prisoners. Another successful raid, in which a large number of prisoners were captured by us, was made this morning by West Kent troops south of Fleurbaix.

Despite the intensity of his artillery fire and the determination of his attack, the enemy was repulsed at all points, except in neighbourhood of Poelderhoek, where his troops succeeded in entering some of our advanced posts on a front of about 200 yards. In this locality severe fighting during the night resulted in the recapture by us of the whole of our positions.

The Germans were repulsed except near Poelderhoek and positions on a front of 200 yards, which were lost there were restored during the night.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 9.—After a bombardment lasting all day, the Germans yesterday evening made an unsuccessful attack on a front of nearly a mile in Belgium from a point south of Menin Road to a point north of Poelderhoek, the War Office announces.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 9.—German aviators raided Paris last night. Early reports show that bombs were dropped with some loss of life and property. Signals that all was clear were given at 12.30 a.m.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, March 9.—A German account of the alleged landing of Japanese troops in Vladivostok in January carried the report that American and British troops also were landed from warships of these nations. The report was contained in a despatch from Petrograd, printed in the Berlin Tageblatt of January 30.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

TOKIO, March 9.—The Japanese press is increasingly alarmed at the Russian collapse. It fears the German invasion may spread through the whole Far East.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 9.—Two Russian transports were attacked and sunk by German destroyers after a fight south of the Aland Island on Thursday.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Joseph Shaplen).

PETROGRAD, March 9.—The mobilization of the Red Army is being carried out. Thousands of officers and privates affected by the demobilization of the regular army are joining.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, March 8.—Replying to a Russian inquiry as to the reason for the continuance of hostilities by the Germans after the conclusion of peace, General Hoffman, German commander, in a telegram to Ensign Krylenko, the Russian Commander, says that such military operations as have taken place since the armistice was declared have been due to sporadic movements of disorganized Russian detachments. The General declares that all regions occupied since the conclusion of peace will be evacuated immediately.

SAYS JAPANESE TROOPS LANDED IN VLADIVOSTOK

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 8.—Details of the alleged landing of Japanese troops at Vladivostok in January are given in the Petrograd newspaper Novaia Zhizin of January 19, which has just been received here. Four thousand soldiers were landed, and numbers of officers continued to arrive in Vladivostok daily, according to the newspaper. The Japanese Admiralty assured the Local Workmen's and Soldiers' Council that the arrival of ships and troops should not be considered as the beginning of military operations, but they were there to protect Japanese subjects.

Recount Demanded

(Special to the Toronto Star and Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, March 9. — A recount has been demanded in the constituency of West Middlesex by Mr. George Elliott, the Unionist win-the-war candidate, who was defeated by D. C. Ross, of Strathroy. Ross' majority over the soldiers' vote when counted was 99, and his opponent has made the necessary cash deposit and demanded a recount.

Enlisted As A Private, Is Now A Major

His many friends will be interested in learning that Capt. Harold Wallis, formerly of Peterborough, has been again promoted. He has now been gazetted as major and is attached to the Canadian Headquarters Staff in France. Major Wallis enlisted in the First Contingent as a private, and was wounded in the spring of 1915. Afterwards he won his commission in France and has since been twice promoted. He is a graduate of the Peterborough Collegiate.

MANY PROMINENT MEN AT MASS FOR JOHN REDMOND

Westminster Cathedral is Crowded —Messages of Sympathy Are Sent by Queen Mary and Queen Alexandra

FUNERAL AT WEXFORD

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 9.—The body of John Redmond was taken to Ireland last night, Interment probably will be made Sunday in the family vault at Wexford.

Messages of sympathy from Queen Mary and Queen Alexandra were among those received by Mrs. Redmond yesterday. Queen Alexandra, in referring to the death of Mr. Redmond, said it was "an irreparable loss which we all share."

Some two thousand persons representing all political parties, societies and organizations attended solemn requiem mass in Westminster Cathedral Friday morning for Mr. Redmond. Premier Lloyd George, Andrew Bonar Law, Sir Edward Carson, Viscount Bryce, Attorney-General Smith, Sir George Cave, Home Secretary, and many political colleagues of the Nationalist leader, attended in person, while the King and Queens sent their representatives and the general public filled the great Cathedral.

Mrs. Redmond, her son and daughter, were chief mourners. Cardinal Bourne, assisted by high church dignitaries, celebrated the mass, after which the Cardinal delivered a short address.

The casket, covered with the Irish flag, was placed on a bier surrounded by floral tributes. At the entrance to the Cathedral the Union Jack and the Papal Flag flew at half mast.

The Car Selling Season Is On In Earnest

Messrs. A. Brown & Co., the local McLaughlin representative reports the sale of over $11,000.00 worth of cars for this season's use.

The McLaughlin car is certainly becoming very popular with the Peterborough people, backed up with the splendid service given by the local dealer, one cannot wonder at this.

Mr. Brown is now installing an up-to-date charging outfit purchased from the Can. General Electric Co., capable of charging eleven batteries at once. This means good battery service.

This firm has also secured the agency for four counties, of the Truxton. This is a truck unit that can be attached to any car, new or second hand, making a splendid 1 1-4 ton or two ton truck.

This truck has internal gear axle with shaft drive. Those interested in a truck proposition should see this truck unit. 1d.

Belgians Beat Huns

Two Strongly Pressed Attacks at Different Points By Picked Troops Are Completely Repulsed By King Albert's Men

FOE LOST HEAVILY

WASHINGTON, March 8. — Announcement was made by the Belgian Legation to-night that the German forces operating against the Belgian line in Flanders had met with a serious defeat in two attacks upon different parts of the line last night. The announcement was based on a cablegram received from the Belgian Government Headquarters at Havre, and which read as folows:

"The Germans have met with serious defeat on the Belgian front. Last night several attempts were directed at two places in the Belgian line. The first attack, which took place in a section more than a mile wide against the positions on the Beverdyk, was completely repulsed by a barrage of artillery and machine-gun fire. Numerous corpses were left by the enemy on the battlefield.

Foe Tried Desperately.

"It is obvious that the Germans had attached great importance to the second attack, which was made south of Stuyvakenskerke, against our positions at Reigersvliet, which were held by unmounted cavalrymen. They had prepared this attack by violent artillery action, in which three different regiments took part of our posts, but after a strong from twenty to twenty-five years of ago succeeded in setting foot in a part of our opsts, bn after a strong artillery preparation a strong counter-attack was made by our cavalrymen, which succeeded completely.

"The Germans were driven out with very heavy losses from the positions which they had been ordered to keep at any cost. In spite of their energetic resistance, they were unable, however, to check the advance of our men, who captured more than 100 unwounded prisoners, including four officers and seven machine guns. A great number of dead and wounded were found on the field after the action. Several German detachments may be considered as being completely wiped out."

SWITZERLAND IS FULL OF GERMAN SPIES

Zurich is Spy Centre of the World in Spite of Efforts of Swiss

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By William Philip Simms.)

ZURICH, Switzerland, March 9. — This is the spy centre of the world—the hub from which radiates the German network of espionage. Nothing the Swiss may do can prevent same.

No neutral country has more consistently tried to keep down spying inside her territories than this country. She has one of the strongest counter espionage organizations of any country in Europe.

Tirelessly she labours night and day to prevent or punish spying, but of course it is a hopeless job. Only the little fellows get caught. The Swiss prisons and detention camps are full of them. The German spy, however, is no better than the secret agents of France, England or America, as the work of the United States' secret service to go no further, amply proves. Perhaps he is not so good even. But he is legion, and what he lacks in quality he makes up in quantity.

Germans Planning An Industrial Revolution In Allied Countries

With Aid of Lenine and Bolsheviki Government Huns Are Attempting to Cause an Upheaval—Propose to Send Ships to United States, Japan and British Colonies.

BOLD PLAN ADOPTED

(By R. J. Bender.)
(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Germany, with the aid of Nikolai Lenine, the Bolsheviki Prime Minister, is planning to bring about an industrial revolution in the United States, Japan, France, Italy and England.

The outstanding feature of reports being received here is the utter frankness with which the Germans are now dealing with the Council of People's Commissaries in their work of weakening the Allies.

The immediate use Germany is making of Lenine and the Russian Bolsheviki government now under its direction, is shown in the following cable received here to-day:

"The Petrograd representative of the German navy has received instructions to propose to the Council of People's Commissaries the following scheme—That several steamships be placed at the disposal of three German agents at Vladivostok to be loaded as merchant vessels and sent to the United States, Japan, and the British colonies in Eastern Asia.

"If unable to get Russian ships the instructions were to charter vessels under any bag.

"The action of the Russian Government in the matter has not been ascertained.

That Germany will do her utmost to finance all the projects tending to industrial upheaval in the Allied countries is certain. A deal has been made with Lenine to push the propaganda by the Bolsheviki, and 500,000 rubles has been appropriated for the purpose. Lenine's agent is Mlle. Coloneta, a member of the Bolsheviki government. From a purely socialist angle it is learned the work was to be done. How far the Lenine-German propaganda may already have gone has not yet been determined.

HELPING RETURNED MEN TO BECOME FARMERS

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

TORONTO, March 9.—Plans for helping returned soldiers to become farmers were discussed at a conference to-day of Major E. F. Ashton, L.S.O., the soldier representatives on the Soldiers' Land Settlement Board, and the Military District Officers. According to Major Ashton, returned men are to be given the privilege of taking up 160 acres of Dominion land in addition to the ordinary civilians' right in homesteads of 160 acres.

"The Board has provided that on first mortgage security a soldier can be advanced up to $2,000, provided the value of the land warrants the amount, then he will be able to make a living off the land."

TWO FORMER 93RD NON-COMS. NOW LIEUTENANTS

Cable Announces That Sergts. Walter Miller and W. V. Spring, M.M. Have Received Commissions After Good Work in France

PTE. EDWWARDS WOUNDED

A cable from England announces the fact that two former non-coms of the 93rd Peterborough Battalion have been awarded commissions. The promotion of one of these, Sergt. Walter "Jiddy" Miller, was already known here, but the cable was the first intimation that Sergt. W. V. Spring, M.M., also formerly of the 93rd Battalion, had also been promoted. Sergt. Spring won the Military Medal some time ago for bravery in action, and the award of his commission as lieutenant will be appreciated by his friends.

Pte. Edwards Wounded.

To-day's official casualty list announces that Pte. F. E. Edwards, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, has been wounded. Pte. Edwards enlisted with the Peterborough County battalion in the spring of 1916.

Laundry Mark On Baby's Clothes May Locate Its Mother

The child that was abandoned early yesterday morning in front of Goheen & Matchett's store, Rubidge St. has been removed to Children's Shelter, where it will remain until the parties responsible for its abandonment have been located. The police have several very definite clues to work on, including the laundry mark on the linen, and no difficulty is anticipated in bringing the guilty parties to justice.

Mrs. Matchett is anxious to keep the child but has been advised to allow it to remain at the Children's Shelter until it has been definitely ascertained whether the child is in a healthy condition. It is believed that the child was drugged before it was abandoned yesterday as it never cried until three o'clock in the afternoon.

Big Market This Morning

There was a larger market than usual this morning, with prices unvaried from last week:

Eggs sold at from 50 to 55c doz.
Butter went for 42c to 50c lb.
Chickens, 30c lb.
Potatoes, at $1.90 to $2 bag.

TROTSKY IS NO LONGER MINISTER OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS

Bolsheviki Leader Announces That He Has Resigned His Position, the Second of the Big Three to Adopt That Course

LENINE ALONE REMAINS

Canadian Press Despatch:

PETROGRAD, March 9.—Leon Trotsky, in an address at a meeting of the Maximalist party to-day, announced that he had resigned as commissary for foreign affairs.

Leon Trotsky, who brought about an armistice on the eastern front, which resulted in the present enforced peace on Russia, has thrown up his position as Bolsheviki foreign minister. To him, probably more than to any other Bolsheviki leaders, is due the present situation in Great Russia. He was said to have cast the deciding vote on the question whether to send delegates to Brest-Litovsk a fortnight ago. Germany by her ruthless demands, shattered his programme of self determination and non-resistance.

The last two days have seen the withdrawal from the Bolsheviki government of two of the three men who have attempted to rule Russia since the downfall of Kerensky, four months ago Friday.

The resignation of Ensign Krylenko the Bolsheviki commander-in-chief, was announced Friday.

Survivors Of Tuscania Have Arrived

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

AN ATLANTIC PORT, March 9.—Seven survivors of the torpedoed ship Tuscania arrived here to-day aboard a British liner. They came as steerage passengers.

New "Sugar Bowl" Ice Cream Parlour

Mr. E. Middleton, of the new "Sugar Bowl" home-candy store on George street, intends opening a new ice cream parlour in the premises next to his store. He visited Toronto this week, and while there purchased a new soda-water fountain and ice cream equipment which he will instal as soon as it arrives. Mr. Middleton is an experienced ice-cream maker, and his reputation for toothsome candy and ice cream has already brought him many customers.

FINE SKATING AT BROCK ST. RINK

The Cold Weather Has Made Fine Ice For To-night

The cold dip of last night made it possible for a good sheet of ice at Brock Street Rink to-night, and a big crowd of skaters is looked for as it is just possible this may be the last Saturday night's skating at the rink. Under the best of conditions next Saturday would be the last in any event, unless very exceptional cold weather prevailed.

To-night there will be a fine band in attendance, an excellent musical programme will be run off and lots of it, with skating until 10:30 o'clock.

Be one of the crowd to-night and thoroughly enjoy yourself.

OIL! OIL! OIL!

Positive indications of oil discovered by Dr. M. Y. Williams, Dominion Government Geologist, in the Rockwood Anticline, 40 miles from Toronto. For further particulars apply to R. Robertson & Company, Financial Agents for the Rockwood Oil and Gas Co., Ltd., 905 C.P.R. Bldg., Toronto. One of their representatives, Mr. Wm. Harper, will be in Peterboro for a few days at the Empress Hotel. Call to see him.

GREATER PRODUCTION.

The meeting announced elsewhere in to-day's issue in the interest of greater production should be carefully noted by the citizens generally, and the Grand Opera House should be crowded Friday evening next. The meeting is called by the Peterborough Board of Trade for the purpose of encouraging greater production this year in both city and county. The food situation is recognized as desperate. Stocks are dangerously depleted acording to Chairman Thompson of the Canadian Food Board, and upon our food service depends the very lives of thousands of women and children in the Allied countries. Peterborough must do her share.

WHAT THE PEOPLE VOTED FOR.

There is hope for the Union Government in respect of implementing the promises upon which it received so overwhelming popular endorsement. It was elected without regard to partizanship considerations, with only the good of the cause and the country as its motive of policy. The Government has made a belated beginning in the matter of disregarding partizanship as a motive of policy in appointment to office. It is announced that a Liberal has been appointed a Senator in New Brunswick. Although he is described as "nominally a Liberal," his appointment is a beginning. It is, however, a tardy and partial act of reparation, and it will take a good many such appointments to balance the account run up by Sir Robert Borden in the closing days of his regime, when he filled Senate vacancies by the wholesale appointment of partizans to the Senate.

These appointments practically regarded the Senate as a partizan asylum, a pasture, with good "picking," where decayed politicians could be turned out to grass. Sir Robert's big batch of Senate appointments consisted entirely of Conservative members of Parliament who dared not face the electors, and had to be provided for in compensation—as a recognition of the claim that partizanship had quasi hereditary right to the spoil of public emolument.

Though the New Brunswick appointment seems to be a belated recognition of Senate honours by merit, it is the very thin end of a very small wedge. Even with the high ideals of the Union Government partizanship is recognized as having rights to reward at the public expense. A Montreal gentleman was given a permanent pension of $25,000 a year for resigning his candidature in favour of Hon. Mr. Ballantyne, and we have it reported that, recently created Senate vacancies in Ontario are to be filled by the appointment of politicians who retired to give seats to ministers.

All this not only contrary to the spirit upon which the Union Government was returned—the elimination of partizanship—but a recognition of the claim of party politicians to be rewarded for sacrifice of personal ambitions. The vote in the general elections showed that the people valued patriotism so highly that, for the sake of getting unity of sentiment and action—they put party by and voted, as they thought, for a non-partizan, patriotic government. This popular disregard of party lines was so strong that strong candidates, under normal conditions, were "snowed under" and lost their deposits.

The people united in sacrifice of party to secure a Union Government that would represent no party but the united determined patriotic people. Under these circumstances, the people expect the Government to measure up to the standard of its election and give an administration, with the success of the cause and the good of the country the only motive spirit. The people sacrificed their political opinions; they sacrificed their party associations, they sacrificed their political friends, for the sake of a no-partizan, national government that would lead a united people in a united effort to win the war. It involves no captious spirit, to suggest that the pepole's aims and expectations are not being met with any rash precipitancy of action by the Union Government.

PROHIBITION AND CONSCRIPTION

It is natural that the liquor interests should strenuously resist the capture of the citadel—the last stronghold. They are asking the Government to postpone the prohibition of the importation of liquor into prohibition provinces. It is not probable that the Government will change its avowed policy of prohibiting importation on April 1st. The Government cannot consistently do so. It should have prohibited importation two years ago if it had desired to meet the evident wishes of the people of Ontario to have a "dry" province. The spirit of the Ontario Temperance Act is the abolition of the liquor traffic, and the Dominion Government has contributed to a disregard of this spirit by permitting the most insidious and dangerous underground traffic. The Government cannot consistently delay a course of action long overdue. Nor can the Government consistently regard the claim of the liquor traffic for compensation. The restriction of the traffic is, apart from any other consideration, justified as a war measure; and, in the interests of the war the people, as a whole, and many igitimate interests, have been compelled to submit to great sacrifice, without any thought of demanding compensation. The logic of the government's demand upon the people for greatly increased food production would be weakened by permissive continuation of use and waste of cereal grains in the manufacture of strong drink. Compensation for loss of profie might be better considered if with it were bracketted a scheme of compensation for the ruinous results of th traffic upon our people and our homes.

After-The-War Problems Discussed By "Senex"

To the Editor of The Examiner.

WHAT NEXT?

People realize that the war cannot last forever, but the great question is, when will it end? From all appearances it must end within twelve months—for the belligerents are showing signs of exhaustion—especially the Germans and Austrians. Germany started out to starve England by sinking all ships making for the English ports, but in this she fails. She is starving her own people, and they are dying by thousands from starvation, disease and war. We naturally ask, what next? Will the Canadian soldiers come back and, if they come, will they settle down in their old homes?

The answer is: Yes, they will come back to their old homes. Some whole, some maimed, many looking for soft places where, with their pensions and expected favours from the people, they will have soft times. For a time they will have soldiers' clubs and much fraternity, but they will presently come to the conclusion that "God helps them who help themselves," and so, they will begin to look to the Government for help. That help will be given, but it will probably be in the shape of free grants in New Ontario or some of the Western Provinces. No doubt many of the capable men will galdly accept such lands; some of them will make good, but many will fail and will come to the towns and cities and fall back on their old trades, while very many will look for easy places where they, with their pensions, can live without much toil. No doubt they will be favoured, but in the end they will find that even old soldiers must earn their living if they would retain the respect of the people.

Peterborough will be like all other places. There will be a kind feeling towards the returned men, but they will b expected to earn their livings. Meetings in soldiers' clubs and telling over again the stories of the war won't pay rent, or fuel or taxes, nor will be expected to earn their livings on the bushes. What have we to give them? First, I would reply—work. The Quaker Oats factories will absorb one thousand or perhaps one thousand five hundred people of both sexes. The other great factories will absorb more, but where are the houses for them to live in? Even now small houses are not to be had. Rooms in great buildings are not here. Labour and building materials are dear—extremely dear—and capitalists won't build houses to meet the wants of the people—there is no money in them.

There are in the city hundreds of houses that can be purchased to-day at prices based on original cost of land and building perhaps, twenty years ago; and they are in the market without buyers. The people appear not to understand the fact that such houses if built to-day would cost not less than double the original cost. This will be soon apparent and when they wake up to the fact there will be sudden jump, and properties will reach prices probably as much too high as they are now too low.

In Toronto hundreds of poor people bought small lots and put up shacks in which they managed to live until they were bought out at high prices, or success enabled the owners to erect better buildings for themselves.

Watch what is coming and be ready to help the returning ones or new citizens that we may facilitate settlement in our town of people whom we much need.

SENEX.

WHY DELAY DAYLIGHT SAVING

Urging Congress to pass the Daylight Savings Bill, the New York Times says: "Everybody who has given the subject any thought is either eager or willing that America should join the long procession of nations that have exchanged an hour of darkness for an hour of daylight throughout the summer months." The change would not cost a single man, woman or child in the whole country a single penny. "It would disarrange no present arrangements in any business or amusement. It wouldn't even involve re-printing of the railway timetables!"

As a matter of fact, within a day or two after the clocks were readjusted, there would be nothing to remind anybody of what had been done except a subconscious feeling that daylight lasted longer than formerly.

This is probably the only "reform" ever proposed that did not involve expenditures by somebody for somebody. But it is also the only one that didn't involve the making of money by somebody out of somebody, and that, just possibly, is why the proposal has so few vigorous advocates. The actual economy in coal alone that is to be effected by carrying out this plan of well-demonstrated excellence is figured by the statisicians at millions and millions of tons. That in itself would make it worth while, but coal saving is only the beginning of the long list of benefits to be derived from following the good example we are so mysteriously slow to heed."

Building By-law Was Discussed

New By-law is Nearing Completion

The building by-law was given another once over last evening. The new by-law when completed and adopted will include a number of changes that will directly effect building conditions in this city. A number of local contractors are being consulted, also the fire insurance interests. The committee responsible for the preparation of the new ordnance has secured a number of by-laws in use in other cities and is endeavouring to incorporate some of the best ideas in the new by-law.

SENSATIONAL REVELATIONS REGARDING LIFE IN GERMAN CAPITAL TO-DAY

By An English Society Woman Who Has Just Returned

I have just returned from Berlin. In the German capital—in fact, all over Germany—shame is shame no longer. Deeds for which before the war the punishment would have been social ruin, are now applauded—and by some of the most prominent women in Germany.

To-day German society is rotten to the core. The state of affairs behind the veil in the Kaiser's capital is nothing short of terrible.

German society women, from whose midst I have recently arrived in this country, are shallow, self-centred, little-minded creatures.

Morals are conspicuous by their absence. Ninety per cent. of the women of the "upper ten" have their "love affairs." Some of them are carried on so openly that they have degenerated into those blatant intrigues one looks for among the lowest criminal classes of great cities.

Many "Malcolm" Cases.

A butcher is the present lover of a baroness with whom I used to come into contact almost daily in Berlin society; a woman who called herself my dearest friend was openly flaunting her corpulent chauffeur when I escaped from Germany. Tragedies such as that enacted in the recent Malcolm case are of almost weekly occurrence.

A wronged German husband does not now trouble to take his grievance to the law courts. He simply shoots, or in some other way murders, his wife's lover, and goes about his business after the criminal tribunal has held a burlesque trial and acquitted him. As often as not the husband may laugh at the offence and treat it as a joke.

The reason for this attitude is startling.

The Kaiser, who, curiously enough in view of his ancestry, has managed to escape the breath of scandal where women are concerned, tacitly, if not actively, countenances any sort of liaison by which the population of Germany is increased.

The monarch who poses so grotesquely as the Chosen of His Maker, encourages his people to violate the holy sanctity of the marriage vows on which the Church sets the seal of her blessing, and thus stamps himself indelibly as a heathen.

He gives monetary rewards to women who, with husbands figting at the front, take unto themselves lovers excused combatant service.

Crime, too, shows an alarming increase. Scores of society women are becoming drunkards. Scores more are resorting to drugs of which the Hun chemical factories, famed for their insiduous, deadly, secret concoctions the world over, are turning out large quantities to meet the ever-increasing demand.

There are numerous cases of suicide among well-known women. The gambling craze holds hundreds in its clutches. Huge sums are being made by blackmail. Rich women buy babies from poor ones in order to stand well with the Kaiser and impress him with the fact that they have added to the numerical strength of the nation.

I have witnessed during the last few months some extraordinary scenes in the secret gambling dens to which Berlin society women resort. The German woman is a bad loser. Her passion when luck is against her is terrible to behold.

The Price of Silence.

One of my recent acquaintances was a handsome young woman, whose husband can by his remarkable eloquence hold the members of the Reichstag fast to their seats. He is one of the few German politicians who are sincere in denouncing the social evils which are at present corrupting the capital. He is particularly severe on the idle rich who fritter away their wealth in amusements; and the Fatherland contains no more bitter opponent of gambling.

Representing that she and a number of friends were deeply interested in a certain charity, his wife secured his permission to use exclusively for this charity a suite of rooms in his palatial offices.

The supposed charity was never mentioned. The place was simply run as a gambling hell. Tremendous sums were won and lost every afternoon. The husband arrived unexpectedly one day and, opening the door of the "committee" room, witnessed an extraordinary and revolting scene.

With her hair down her back, her costly clothing torn to shreds, the beautiful wife he trusted implicitly was fighting like a tigress with the wife of another distinguished politician. There had been an accusation of cheating, and a free fight ensued. The discovery of this scandal led to others. To his unspeakable grief the politician discovered that his wife was held fast in the clutches of a blackmailer, a former captain in the Death's Head Hussars, who, on threats of exposing her gambling secrets to her husband, had bled her to the extent of thousands of marks.

Women Criminals.

The sins of Berlin's "upper ten" are spreading to the masses in an alarming degree.

Most of the working-class women in Berlin are now following essentially masculine occupations. And this has had a strange effect upon their morals. Tiring of honest work, although the wages are high, they have embraced crime as a calling, and sensational robberies, burglaries, and crimes of violence perpetrated by these women are now of everyday occurrence.

As for the police of Berlin, a state of "graft", or corruption, such as New York never reached in its wildest days, exists. In many cases they have been proved to be hand in glove with the criminals.

Traugott von Jagow, the chief of the most brutal and feared police force in the world, uses his official position to blackmail all classes, and wields his autocratic power for his own enrichment.—From "Tit Bits."

Comfort Soap Premiums are all right but — the way they are now advancing in price—and going down in quality—has simply caused us to stop buying new supplies—until after the war, at least.

But, of course, we wouldn't think of giving you less value—so you'll now get a bigger, much bigger, bar of Comfort Soap at the same price but the new wrappers are not good for premiums.

Wouldn't you rather have the bigger bar?

You certainly would—if you saw the kind of premiums now being offered us by the makers.

You certainly would—if like thousands of others, you used Comfort Soap because of its splendid merit without saving the wrappers.

You certainly would—for in these War times you can do without premiums but you must have soap—the Comfort kind—and as much as you can get for your money.

Now at Grocer's. Same price.

All old Comfort wrappers still out will be redeemed as before.

All But Seven Of Fifty Dogs Killed

Of fifty dogs caught by Mr. Gates since he became the official catcher on February 21st, all but seven were destroyed. The fortunate mongrels that have retained their lease of life were returned to their owners on the payment of the prescribed sum of one dollar. There have been five summonses issued, and most of these have been disposed off by the owners paying fines into the court. A summons may be issued against any person who permits his dog to run at large on the street, and the customary contribution for this privilege is $4.60. This fact is mentioned as a warning to some citizens who are deliberately ignoring the city's regulations to the annoyance of persons who if they wanted a dog to roam their premises, and roor around the lawn and garden, would get one of their own. A word to the wise should be sufficient, but wisdom is scarcely a characteristic of many dog owners.

The council's action in appointing an official dog catcher has proved entirely satisfactory, and by the end of the month the dog nuisance should be checked for the present.

P.C. Wigg Spots A Suspected Evader

George Phillips, just back from the shanties, was strolling about the streets yesterday afternoon, enjoying the crisp, bright Spring weather, and probably wondering where he would go from here. If he were trying to reach a decision on that point, P. C. Wigg relieved him of the problem by escorting him to the police station to discover whether he had complied with the military service act or not. Phillips admitted being an A2 man, but his excuse for being in civilian clothes did not satisfy Chief Thompson, who was suspicious of a type-written statement that Phillips produced. He was sent to Kingston, where his record will be fully investigated. Sergt. Lauder of the military police, had two other men that he was taking to headquarters, and Phillips completed the trio that went out under escort this morning.

Mr. Swaisland.

Dear Sir,—I take great pleasure in praising your 4 S. Special Skin Specific. About 8 months ago I had an operation performed which resulted in blood-poisoning and my whole body from head to foot was covered with a terrible rash. I consulted several doctors and used all kinds of salves being advertised without any relief. I could not walk nor sleep, for the burning and itching almost drove me out of my mind, so one day I sent my daughter to the Drug Store and Mr. Swaisland asked her to try a bottle of 4 S., which she brought home. When I had taken a half bottle I began to feel a great change! My appetite came back, the bitterness of my mouth left me; I felt myself on the way to recovery, so I decided to keep on taking until I would see the last of this terrible torturing disease of Eczema leave my body. I have now taken six bottles and am still taking it, as my case was so bad, not only with the Eczema, but also over one hundred boils covered my body. My friends were afraid to come near me as I was a terrible sight; on my head I had the Weeping Eczema and it was running all matter; for weeks I could not comb my hair; my ears running matter, and face and neck all full of the rash. I never thought of once getting well again, but thanks to the 4 S. I am now able to do all my work, and the rash has left my body with the exception of two spots which I think will soon be healed up.

I can strongly recommend S.S.S. as the only best remedy for skin diseases and boils.

Anybody doubting this statement can get my address from Mr. Swaisland and write or ask me personally.

Kitchener, May 7, 1917.

This is one of the many testimonials that I receive. May add that this case when seen by one of Kitcheners Leading Physicians, he remarked that she would die. Also in explanation re bitterness of the mouth was covered with the disease May add that one bottle more made complete cure.

New Salvation Army Sunday School To Open

St. Luke's Club Rooms Have Been Taken Over

The Salvation Army are opening another Sunday school in Ashburnham in the rooms occupied by the St. Luke's Club on Hunter street, just east of the track. Some 85 to 100 Salvationists and adherents live in this part and the distance is so long to the Temple, Adjt. McElhiney and Sergt.-Maj. R. C. Braund determined to make some provision for East City.

Then with the new bridge being built and prospects of the street railway going over in a few years, very likely there will be more work for the Salvation Army in that end of the city.

The Sunday school will commence to-morrow at 2.15 and both adults and children from that side will no doubt take advantage of this opening.

The rooms were secured by the kind permission of the Rector and Board of St. Luke's church for which the Army folks are very grateful indeed.

THE WEATHER

"Will we have an early spring?" This question is frequently asked, perhaps more frequently this year than others, owing to the scarcity of fuel. The weather in March and April, however, is so fickle in our Canadian climate that no reliable forecast can be made. The first half of March is particularly uncertain. Our heaviest snowstorms of the winter sometimes occur during that period, as well as disastrous sleet storms. However, in the average year, the spring thaw occurs during the last week of March, and about that time the robins make their first appearance in numbers. Individual pioneers are frequently seen previous to that date. Song sparrows and blackbirds are due about a week later. By the middle of April some favored land will be in condition for working, but general operations on the land can not be looked for until considerably later. The maple trees begin to bud about May 10th, and should be in full leaf a few days before the "24th." The grass on our city lawns is usually green about the last week in April, and the click of the lawn mower is heard during the first week in May. Falls of snow are frequent in April and May. Last year on April 6th, 5 inches fell, and a few flurries were in evidence even on May 24th. However, if there is anything in the law of compensation, we should have an early spring, to balance the particularly severe winter we have had.—W. P.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat less meat if you feel Backachy or have Bladder trouble

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless, and makes a delightful effervescent lithiawater drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.

VETERAN WAITRESS DISCOVERED DEAD.

And Her Savings of $5,393 Were Found Wrapped Up in Her Trunk.

BROCKVILLE, March 9.— A rare and probably unparalleled record of continuous service as hotel waitress in one place came to a sudden end with the discovery at the Hotel Norman, Ogdensburg, that Miss Margaret MacDonnell had passed away in her room some time after 1-o'clock. Death was due to heart disease, from which the veteran waitress had been suffering during the past few months, though she had partaken of her supper and seemed somewhat improved during the previous evening.

Another surprising discovery was that of $5,393 in bills, quarters and dimes, wrapped away in the bottom of Miss McDonnell's trunk. The money, $4,800 of which was in Canadian bank bills, $405 in quarters, in $133 in dimes, was deposited in the Ogdensburg Bank, by J. H. Norman proprietor of the hotel.

Miss McDonnell had been employed continuously at the Normen, formerly the old National Hotel, for 55 years, and the money represented her savings. It was not supposed that she had any, as she invariably asked to have her wages changed into Canadian bills to send to relatives who reside near Alexandria, Ont., of which place she was a native.

Paris Cafe Sets New Standard In Local Restaurants

The Paris Cafe opened its doors and its larder to the hungry public to-day and in its appointments sets a new standard among local restaurants. The old Tiz-It Theatre has been completely obliterated, and its gloomy interior has been replaced by a degree of brightness and colour that first strikes the attention of visitors to the new cafe. The walls are done in a light brown, with a green burlap base, with a separating panel in mahogany. There are twelve tables in the open space at the front, and the rear has been divided into six stalls built of quarter cut oak in a light finish that harmonizes with the predominating tone of the decorator's scheme. The curtains of the stalls are of chintz, in an appropriate dark shade and subdued pattern. The chairs are of oak with leather upholstering, and the linen, cutlery, glass and other furnishings are manifestly new. Mr. Hum W. Hey has added little touches of paper flowers that lend a bright and appealing note to the interior, and this effect is heightened by a tasteful use of mirrors that avoids garishness.

The furnishings include a Victrola and full length mirror in an oak cloak rack. The menu booklets are a nice compilation of "eats" the Germans dream about, and the proprietor promises good service and particularly good cooking. The public service includes a telephone.

West Has Had Cold Winter

Following is an extract from a letter written by J. J. Allen of Edmonton:

"We have had a pretty severe winter here since December 1, 1917, only a couple of light thaws for a few days. It has been as low as 46 deg. below zero, but yet it is not felt here if it is calm weather. I hear a lot about the snow drifts about Peterboro, and it all came to me last week when I was out about 8 miles in the country for a load of hay. The roads here are just like a paved street although we have about two feet of snow here this winter."

CHANDOS FARMER GUILTY OF UTTERING SEDITIOUS LANGUAGE

Was Tried at Belleville Yesterday and Defended by Mr. G. N. Gordon — Jury Recommended Leniency—Said Britain Was as Bad as Germany.

BELLEVILLE, March 8.—Charles Hawkes, aged 47 years, whose home is in Chandos Township, near Coe Hill, adjoining Hastings County, was on trial here to-day at the high court, presided over by Justice Rose, on a charge of uttering seditious statements. The jury after being out two hours returned a verdict of guilty with a recommendation of leniency. Sentence was deferred until the close of the criminal cases.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, of Peterborough, pleaded for the prisoner.

Pte. William H. Crosby, a member of the 247th Battalion, laid the information, and in his evidence stated that on Feb. 27, 1917, he was at Coe Hill, Hastings County, and was endeavouring to persuade a young man to enlist. During the conversation Hawkes appeared upon the scene and asked why Crosby was trying to coax the young man to enlist. Crosby replied that any young man who was physically fit should go and fight for his country, that Germany had done so much dirty work that all should enlist and fight against her.

Hawkes asked what dirty work Germany had done, and witness replied that she had cut hands off of children and had nailed a Canadian soldier to a barn door. Hawkes said it was a lie, and that Great Britain was doing more dirty work on the battlefield to-day than Germany but covered it up.

Witness asked Hawkes where he got his information, and he said not from newspapers but direct from Germany. Hawkes also said it was no harm for Germany to sink the ships of the United States, as she was a neutral country, and that if the United States went to war with Germany she would only be a handful for Germany, the same as the other allies. The evidence given by Crosby was corroborated by others who heard the remarks of Hawkes.

Mr. Gordon did not have Hawkes go on the stand but introduced only character evidence. Reeve Fred Bullied of Chandos Township said Hawkes was treasurer of the municipality. His reputation was good. If Hawkes had ever been in trouble before witness would have heard it. Hawkes is engaged in farming, custom milling and lumbering. Hawkes has been a contributor to patriotic and Red Cross funds.

His parents are good citizens and English. Mr. Bullied lives four miles from Hawkes.

John Long, living six miles from Coe Hill, is the assessor. "I have known Charles Hawkes for at least twenty years." Hawkes' reputation in that time for loyalty and god citizenship had been good."

John Mahoney lived near Hawkes and gave Hawkes a good reputation for loyalty.

"This is the first time that a sedition trial has been held in the City of Belleville," said Mr. Gordon, addressing the jury. In one hundred years there are only four reported cases in England, although in that time Britain has passed through wars. Latterly there have been charges laid, owing to divergence of opinion. It is a case that can only be tried before a supreme court judge and jury, so important is it to the State and the individual."

Gazely's Orchestra Will Make Debut At Concert On The 15th

Peterboro has long been recognized as a centre of musical talent, having produced many musicians, vocal and instrumental, but for its size is rather lacking at the present time in instrumental bands. An aggregation of local talent, known as Gazley's Orchestra, is therefore a welcome acquisition, and will no doubt enhance the city's musical reputation. Mr. Gazley, the efficient conductor, who organized the orchestra, is a musician of great versatility, being an accomplished performer on no less than 30 different instruments, and has had considerable experience in orchestral work, having been conductor of a large band in London, England. The orchestra as at present composed, consists of fifteen violins, two clarionets, two cornets, euphonium, French horn, violincello, bass viol, tenor horn, trombone, and drums.

The need of an orchestra of this description has long been felt and should meet with the support of the citizens generally and the music patrons in particular. The public will be given an opportunity to judge its merits on Friday evening, Mar. 15th, when the orchestra will make its debut in a concert to be given in the Victoria Hall.

With Wallpapers and Draperies that are the Last Word of the Designers Art

REPAPER! A NEW HOME WITHIN OLD WALLS

Spring house cleaning usually reveals that one or two rooms are very much in the need of new paper, so do not delay longer in making your choice as the season is advancing rapidly. You will be delighted with the shades and designs of our new wall papers, whether for drawing-room, living-room, dining-room or bedroom. They all show a tendency to the plain fabric effects, burlap, ooz leather, grass cloth, and pressed fibre being among the most attractive.

ARTISTIC DRAPERIES FOR THE HOME

You will be surprised to note how a few new draperies can transform your home, they will obliterate that dingy appearance and make it bright, cheerful and cozy. Also they can be made the dominating feature of the most carefully planned interior. That is why so many homes have that charming, distinctive air, it comes from such decorative fabrics of refinement as we have now in our stocks.

CHILDREN MUST BE PROTECTED

The children must be safeguarded, for, if they do survive the frequent coughs and colds, it is often with the lungs so weakened that they become chronic sufferers from bronchitis or consumption. Being composed of simple ingredients of undoubted value, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is admirably suited as a treatment for children. It is pleasant to taste. So much so that children delight to take it on this account, as well as because of the quick relief it affords them.

Price Paid By Wm. Whittington for Hunter Property.

Mr. T. M. Hunter, of North Monaghan, sold his farm to Mr. Wm. Whittington, of South Monaghan, for $16,000, and will go during the week after next on an extended trip in the Southern States, particularly in Florida. Mr. Whittington has already taken possession of the farm.

KITCHENER LEAGUE THANKED

Miss H. A. Turner, of the Canadian Kitchener League, has received the following letter:

France, Feb. 14, 1918.

Dear Madam,—I take great pleasure in advising you that I have received the parcel of socks which was sent to me by you dated Dec. 28th, which I just received last night, the 13th, and which I have distributed among the men of this company to the very best of my ability. I am glad to say the boys were all pleased to get them, and they all asked me to drop you a line to convey their deepest gratefulness to you for your kindness and trouble. I am sure it is a great pleasure for me to do so. They all join with me in sending our very best wishes to you for all prosperity to the great work in which you are engaged. I hereto attach the list of names of men who have greatly benefited by your kindness. Thanking you kindly for your kind thought to us, I am,

Yours very sincerely,
PTE. F. WHARRAM,
No. 648952,
1st Canadian Forestry Company.

Potatoes Due For Slump, $1.90 To-day

Potatoes were down to $1.90 a bag on the market this morning, and it is becoming more evident every week that a general slump is due with the coming of warm weather. It is stated by men who are in touch with supplies that there is a great quantity of potatoes still in the hands of producers. This applies to Ontario and especially to New Brunswick. Two brothers near Garden Hill are known to have one thousand bags stored on their premises. Last fall they refused $1.60 a bag, and the best that has been offered them recently is $1.25. These are indications that encourage the consumer's hope that the expected break in prices may not be long delayed.

SALE BY WINE MEASURE ILLEGAL

The Department of Inland Revenue, Ottawa, has just received a circular in reference to wine measure. For many years complains have been made as to the sale in Canada by wine measure and bottled and tinned goods, the same being put up by American houses on the United Wine Measure Unit. The United States gallon is about twenty per cent. smaller than the Dominion gallon, so that United States houses quoting on a basis of pints, quarts, etc., have an improper advantage over Canadian houses. Inspectors, dealers, manufacturers, and all others, are, therefore, advised that the sale of anything in Canada by wine measure is henceforth illegal; that the offering for sale of any goods of which contents are marked in some unit of United States Measure is illegal. Packages and contents goods may be put up and sold without any reference to the measure of the contents, or the contents may be indicated in weight in pounds or in ounces, but if any reference whatsoever is made to the contents by measure it must be in Dominion measure.

Cured My Cough In One Night

Relieved Me of a Throat Weakness That Resisted Every Treatment.

"SUFFERERS, FOLLOW MY PLAN"

"After being loaded down with a chronic hacking cough for months, you can imagine my joy at finding even a relief from it," writes Mrs. O. A. Tooker, of Monson, Mass., U.S.A. "I was troubled with an irritable throat weakness and asthma that simply defied every medicine I ever used. I was discouraged until a friend recommended Catarrhozone so strongly that I bought a dollar outfit from my dugout. I breathed in the healing fumes of Catarrhozone very deeply—used the inhaler five minutes every hour. After the first day I was better, and next morning my cough was gone. My asthma is cured, my throat weakness is gone, and I am well. For two years indeed, with the aid of Catarrhozone, I have kept perfectly well. I have also used Dr. Hamilton's pills for constipation with grand results, and consider your remedies have done wonders for me."

Thousands of wonderful cures are reported every year. Catarrhozone does all that is claimed for it, and is certainly most efficient for colds, bronchitis, throat trouble, asthma and catarrh. The two months' treatment (large size), price $1.00, is guaranteed, smaller size 50c, sample size 25c, at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Feet Dry and Trim--- No Rubbers

In wet weather, with leather-soled shoes, you have always to wear unsightly rubbers or have damp feet. But there's no such trouble when you wear shoes with Neolin Soles.

These modern soles are waterproof. They keep out the wet—unless you walk in puddles or deep snow—guarding your health, yet not hiding the trim lines of your shoes.

They're comfortable, too, from the very start—easy as an old shoe, and they wear evenly and very slowly. With all these good qualities—Neolin Soles cost no more than leather.

Get them for the whole family, on new shoes or as re-soles.

Mr. Gillespie Refers To Labour Bureau To Assist Farmers

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., stated this morning that the plans for a greater production campaign are rapidly approaching completion. The Legislature is otherwise engaged with routine business and has just finished a week of activities. He stated that he had noticed in the Examiner the proposal breached at a meeting of the Great War Veterans' Association that the work of linking up the farmers of this county with all available labor be turned over to Mr. G. N. Gordon.

"I certainly have no objection to the transference of this responsibility to Mr. Gordon or any other person," Mr. Gillespie said. "I assumed this work last year because a large number of farmers come to my store and I am otherwise brought into close contact with them. With the help of the press and others I succeeded in placing a large number of farm labourers with farmers in this district. Whatever was accomplished was done voluntarily. I gave my services to the cause of greater production, and it is only with a view to expanding the work this year and of doing whatever I can to assist in another successful year in greater production that I have offered my services and the use of my office again. My office is central and convenient, and I believe generally suitable. Already this year I have placed a number of applicants for farm work, but if there is a general feeling that Mr. Gordon or any one else can render a better service in this regard I will be pleased to hand the work over to them.

BRITISH TRADITION

He sat in a pool of water, with his hands before his face. He was almost the colour of the mud; hands, face, clothes, all stained and caked with it. His shrapnel helmet had a large dint in the side and under the rim of it a bandage tinged with red, protruded. Now and then, at some concussion greater than usual, he shuddered. The air was alive with death all round him and from time to time, a fresh deposit of mud and sandbags would hurtle into the trench.

By all the rules of the game he was a casuality, but you could not have made him realize that. He was badly shaken, and had been almost unconscious when his 'Pals' delved him from a collapsed dug-out. But he was glad no officer had been present to order him to the aid-post. He knew that the Germans would counter-attack presently, and he waited. That is the British tradition.

He was right in his surmise. The bombardment died down and the counter-attack began. He rose unsteadily to his feet to take his place on the fire-step. His lips were dry and swollen, and he moisted them with his tongue, while he pressed home a clip of cartridges in his rifle. For half-an-hour those obstinate men in grey tried to force their way into the trench, but the British stood firm, and the man who was the colour of mud stayed at his post, firing steadily into the grey mass.

When the German attack was finally broken up, and an exhausted remnant of field-greys surrendered, the little band of British lit their cigarettes, and sat down again the water nursing their rifles. It was unpleasant sitting in water, but they were too tired, far too tired to stand. Many of them were casualties, but they still waited. That is the British tradition.

The man who was the colour of mud dug his teeth into his lips for fear the others should see his pain.

The Platoon Commander did not see many casualties when he came down the trench. They turned wounded arms and legs away from him, they pulled their helmets further down on their heads to hide bandages; men who were too hurt to sit up lay against the wall of the trench and sang, and made a show of cleaning their rifles, trying to control the trembling of their hands. They thought another effort might be wanted from them, and they knew how much their officer cared for their wounds, and how he would have sent them back instantly as casualties. So they hid their pain, and waited, according to the British tradition.

When they were relieved, the man who was the colour of mud laughed. It was a dry, rather shaky laugh, but there was a smile with it.

"Rest," he said . . bit done up . . . good fight, though . . bloomin' good fight . . thank Gawd they dug me out in time for it."

They passed down the communication trench laughing and every man who could speak sang; the others smiled, and left cigarettes for those who had to be taken on stretchers; and the man who was the colour of mud carried his exhausted chum's rifle. That is the British tradition.

RECITAL THIS EVENING.

The third of the series of fortnightly recitals in the green room at the Y.W.C.A. will take place this evening at 8.15. The programme will consist of a pantomime play, based on Tennyson's "Oenone" by the girls of the advanced gymnasium class. Miss Littlefield will repeat by request her famous "On to Victory" number, interpreting the French national poem "La Marseilles" in rhythmic motion. Mrs. Perrin will sing, and Miss Mabel Penrose will act as accompanist for all numbers.

Members and friends of the Association are all cordially invited to come and enjoy these Saturday evening programmes.

Spanking Doesn't Cure

Don't think children can be cured of bed-wetting by spanking them. The trouble is constitutional, the children cannot help it. I will send FREE to any mother my successful home treatment, with full instructions. If your children trouble you in this way, send no money, but write me to-day. My treatment is highly recommended to adults troubled with urine difficulties by day or night. Address

Jack Adams Called Out In The Draft

TORONTO, March 9.—There is a possibility that Jack Adams, the popular Peterborough player, who recently joined the Toronto pros., may be called into the army before the play-off series with Canadiens for the N.H.L. championship is decided. Adams received word from the military authorities at London yesterday to report there on Thursday, March 14. Inasmuch as the Blue Shirts are counting on using him in Montreal on Wednesday night in the return game, it would not be possible for him to travel from Montreal after the game in time to report the next day at Military District No. 1. Adams wired for an extension of time yesterday, and it is expected that it will be granted.

AUTOMOBILE BANDITS MAKE ANOTHER HAUL

Detroit, March 9. —Geo. Bradbeer, secretary and treasurer of the Safety Furance Pipe Company, was held up and robbed of $700 at Grand River and Lincoln Avenues shortly after noon yesterday by two auto bandits. Bradbeer had drawn money which was in a tin box, from a downtown bank, and went home on a street car. As he got off the car, bandits, who evidently had followed him in an automobile, knocked him down, took the money and fled.

The money was three weeks' wages. When Bradbeer got on a Grand River car to go to the plant, he noticed a small automobile, with curtains drawn follow the street car. He did not think anything of that, but when he got off the car the small automobile was standing at the curb with the engine running.

One of the bandits ran up to him and knocked Bradbeer down with his fist. The other grabbed the tin box containing the money. Both leaped into the car and drove rapidly out Grand River Avenue.

Bradbeer was able to give a description of the two bandits and the police have sent out a general alarm.

Would You Like to Earn $1 or $2 Daily The Year Round At Home?

The hosiery trade is booming, and the Demand far exceeds the Supply. We gladly take all the goods you can send us.

We must have more workers at once to help us keep pace with the demand. The Auto Knitter is sent on favorable terms to reliable persons, and we furnish full instructions how to knit sox, etc., also all yarn needed. The work is simple and easily learned; the Auto Knitter is a high-speed machine, and works by turning a handle. Our fixed rates of pay guarantee you a steady income the year round, no matter where you live, but our workers often largely increase this by working for private customers.

Working either whole or spare time, this pleasant employment has brought prosperity to many workers in their own homes, and should do the same for you.

Write to-day, enclosing 3c in stamps, for full particulars, rates of pay, etc., and see what you and your family can now earn at home.

QUICK HELP FOR STRAINS AND SPRAINS WONDERFUL RELIEF IN ONE HOUR

Rare Herb and Root Extracts in This Liniment Give It Marvelous Power.

RUB ON NERVILINE

You'll be astonished at the rapid pain relieving action of "Nerviline." Its effectiveness is due to its remarkable penetrating power—it strikes deeply, sinks to the very core of the trouble.

Nerviline is stronger, many times stronger, than ordinary liniments, and it's not greasy, ill-smelling or disagreeable. Every drop rubs in, bringing comfort and healing where applied.

You would scarcely believe how it will relieve a sprain, how it takes out lameness, how it soothes and eases a bruise. Thousands say no liniment is half so useful in the home. This must be so, because Nerviline is a safe remedy—you can rub it on even a child with fine results.

Just you keep Nerviline on hand—it's a panacea for the aches, pains and slight ills of the whole family. One bottle will keep the doctor's bill small, and can be depended on to cure rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, sciatica, toothache, pleurisy, strains or swelling. Wherever there is a pain rub on Nerviline; it will always cure.

The large 25c family size bottle is very economical. Sold everywhere by dealers, or direct from the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

Young Men Rule the Air

WITHOUT our valorous young aviators our gunners and our troops would work in the dark.

High above the lines these daring aerial warriors are in constant communication with the commanders on the ground, guarding our troops and exposing the secrets of the Hun.

Greater scope for individual bravery and initiative could hardly be imagined.

There are opportunities for young men to achieve greatness very rapidly in the Air Service. A clear brain, a sound physique, a keenness for achievement, a fair education—are the essential qualifications.

Young men accepted as cadets receive $1.10 per day during their period of training for commissions as flying officers.

Men who come within the provisions of the M.S.A. are eligible only after having joined their Depot Battalion, when they may, with the consent of their Commanding Officer, be discharged for re-enlistment in the R.F.C.

L. A. Turner And Herb. Martin In Vice-Skips' Final

The best game of the vice skips' bonspiel was played in the semi-finals last night when Herb Martin defeated C. S. Browne by one shot in an extra end. It was one of the closest games of the season and demonstrated the ability of these younger players who have been comparatively hidden under wraps all season.

In the last game of the eight's round Martin eliminated Charlie Seymour by piling up six shots in the last few ends. Seymour had run up nine shots in the first six frames but Martin kept him away from the chalk for the rest of the game.

The score was as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| E. L. Bowes | W. M.Lang |
| Ed. Taylor | C. J. Snider |
| F. Brownscombe | C. E. Smith |
| H. R. Martin | C. J. Seymour |
| Skip .....12 | Skip ..... 9 |

SKIPPER DIES WAR PRISONER

Late Captain O. H. Henderson Was Taken Aboard Hun Sub to Karlsruhe.

HALIFAX, N.S., March 9. — The death took place at Karlsruhe, Germany, on Jan. 31st last, of Captain Oscar H. Henderson, aged 60 years, a prisoner of war at the time. The captain's ship, the Berwick Law, was torpedoed in the Mediterranean on December 3, and the captain was taken on board the submarine, and fifteen days later was landed at Karlsruhe.

No particulars were received as to the cause of his death.

Captain Henderson commanded the ship Cromartyshire which was in the collision with La Bourgoyne on July 4, 1898, and brought the survivors to Halifax.

Appendicitis Operations Not Always Necessary

Internal Bathing Relieves the Cause.

Your physician will tell you that Appendicitis is an inflamed condition of the little sack called the Appendix at the lower right-hand corner of the Colon or large intestine. By cleansing this Colon with purified warm water by the "J. B. L. Cascade" this sack is cleansed and the inflammation subsides. Hundreds of operations have been avoided by using the warm water cure for Appendicitis. Mr. Jas. McLaughlan, 91 Evanston street, Winnipeg, writes:—

"I had spent over fifty dollars with doctors trying to cure Appendicitis. Finally the doctor said I must go to the hospital at once for an operation. Your advertisement interested me. I bought a "J. B. L. Cascade," which relieved me at once, and am now completely cured. Never felt better in my life; all pain and soreness gone, and I eat and sleep like a boy. I am grateful to Dr. Tyrrell for this wonderful health-giving invention."

95 per cent. of all human ills are caused by accumulated waste in the Colon. Internal Bathing with the "J. B. L. Cascade" keeps this large intestine as free from all waste and as clean as nature demands it should be for perfect health. Ask Warne Drug Co., Peterboro, for booklet called "Why Man of To-day is Only 50 Per Cent. Efficient." It is free. They will also be pleased to show and explain the "J. B. L. Cascade" to you.

PATHE PHONOGRAPH LOCAL AGENCY

E. V. Warne, Jeweller, Appointed Local Selling Agent—Facts Regarding These Famous Phonographs and Records

Pathephones, Pathe Records and Pathe Moving Picture Films are considered throughout Europe and America, to be one of the greatest achievements of to-day.

Twenty-five years ago the Pathe Bros. commenced in France what is known the world over, "The Famous Pathe Phones and Pathe Records."

When you speak of Pathe there seems to be just that little extra in all these products that the others haven't got. Even to the Pathe Moving Picture Film. When you are looking at one of these Pathe pictures you can depend on it that you are looking at the best. Even from these ordinary black and white pictures to the natural coloured pictures of to-day you will readily understand why Pathe excels.

Pathe Records.

Even to this department of their manufacture, the Pathe Bros. have been offered hundreds of thousands of dollars by other firms making phonographs to make records for them, as they considered that the Pathe method of quality of record to be the best, of which the Pathe People hold the secret of the patents of this famous record.

Pathephone.

In Great Britain and continent, Pathephones are considered the first and last in the phonograph achievements. The Pathephone business was so great that it was impossible for them to consider the American market for their products at all. But since the war, the commercial world has been entirely upset and unsettled, Europe allowing the Pathe People to introduce their famous line in the United States and later in Canada. Thus you have the privilege of hearing and seeing this famous French invention at your door.

Call in at any time and our demonstrator will be pleased to demonstrate these machines and records. Notice the clearness and the tone of quality from the finest violin selections to the 84-piece French band selection; also hear Muratore, Cavalieri, Anna Fitzier, Marie Narelle, Note John McCormick and others.

B. C. DOCK IS UNSINKABLE.

Montreal, March 9. — The idea incorporated in the attempt to render unsinkable the steamer Lucia, an Austrian vessel, taken to the United States, came to its inventor, W. T. D. Donnelly, while building the dry dock at Prince Rupert, B.C., he told the Canadian Mining Institute. The waste space in the Lucia is filled with buoyancy boxes.

Mr. Donnelly said at Prince Rupert he wanted to ballast the dock, and instead of putting stone in he bottom he experimented by placing a similar weight of wood on the wings of the dock, with the result that when pressure was put on the dock and it was driven into the water the wooden ballast reversed its function and became additional buoyancy to such an extent that the dock was unsinkable.

GERMAN IS HELD FOR POISONING STOCK

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 9.—Johann Frederick Meyn, Federal officials said yesterday, was arrested in connection with the alleged systematic poisoning of live stock near Fresno. Hundreds of cattle, mules and chickens were found dead from the same poison which was found in grain in Meyn's barn.

The authorities said they were investigating the theory of ranchers, who suffered losses, that a stream had also been poisoned.

Meyn, according to U. S. District Attorney O'Connor, admitted he was a German subject. He denied all charges.

LANSDOWNE'S LETTER IS JEST OF GERMANS.

AMSTERDAM, March 8.—Some of the German papers, commenting on Lord Lansdowne's latest letter, urge the Imperial German Chancellor to reply in the Reichstag and demand whether Lord Lansdowne speaks for himself or at the request of Premier Lloyd George.

The Cologne Volks Zeitung, says the letter, shows that the English people are beginning to fear the consequences of the Russian and Roumanian peace, and would like peace "before it is too late."

The Rheinische Westwalische Zeitung considers Lord Lansdowne "too clever" in wishing to pacify Germany with paper guarantees regarding Belgium, while Germany needs real guarantee.

DEAL DEATH BLOW TO GERMAN TRADE IN UNITED STATES

Committee Votes Enemy Alien Custodian Authority to Sell All Property—Urgent Deficien. Bill As Amended Authorizes Purchase of Hoboken Piers

WILL BUY LIBERTY BONDS WITH PROCEEDS

WASHINGTON, D.C., March 11. — The government has moved to deal a death blow to German interests in American commerce and industry.

At the administration's request the Senate Appropriations committee voted into the pending billion dollar Urgent Deficiency bill an amendment designed to eliminate completely German ownership of American property.

The Amendment gives A. Mitchell Palmer, Custodian of Enemy Property, authority to sell all property under his jurisdiction, running far into the hundreds of millions of dollars in value. The proceeds of the sale are to be invested in Liberty bonds. The disposition of these bonds after the war will be left to action of Congress when peace is proclaimed.

At the same time the committee also voted into the bill an amendment giving to the President authority to buy the German owned piers at Hoboken. It was explained that these piers are in need of extensive repairs and the government is reluctant to spend the money necessary for such repairs without a clear deed to the property. Some members of the committee are still unconvinced of the necessity of spending money on an outright purchase of the piers and may make a point of order against the amendment when it is brought up in the Senate.

Mr. Palmer Before Committee.

The committee's action followed a conference behind closed doors with Mr. Palmer. He explained to the members of the committee in detail the necessity for the proposed legislation. The committee learned that Germany apparently has reached out into the United States in an effort to dominate American industry and commerce just as she has tried to influence American political and social life. They found her interests running far into the millions of dollars, extending into nearly every State in the Union.

Mr. Palmer told the committee that many of the German owned industries of which he is custodian are reaping huge war profits for their stockholders and are running in competition with legitimate American concerns. This, he said, manifestly was unfair to loyal American business. For this reason he urged that he be empowered to sell factories, shops, plants and property of all kinds to American citizens and to invest the proceeds in government bonds.

It was the intention of administration leaders to bring the Urgent Deficiency bill up in the Senate, and they hoped to be able to pass it with a few hours' debate.

BIG JUMP IN NUMBER OF RECRUITS FROM U. S.

NEW YORK, March 7. — Recruiting for the British and Canadian overseas forces have taken a decided jump in the United States, according to an announcement issued here today, probably due to the recent draft convention between the United States and Great Britain.

Last week was the biggest week the British and Canadian recruiting mission has had since the campaign began eight months ago, 1,089 recruits being sent to Canada as compared with 838 the week previous.

Brigadier General W. A. White, in charge of the work, is now touring the south and stimulating accession to the allied ranks at the front.

"THE CLUE IN THE AIR"

A DETECTIVE STORY—Isabel Ostrander

"Good house to-night."

Yah!" the young man responded. "But cold as ice! Wait till we get out there. I am putting on a ballad that will stop the show!"

"Is that so?" murmured McCarty, with immense deference. "I see by the programme that there is a pair of trapeze performers on after you."

"The Accolinis, uh-huh. They played on the same bill with us in Newark three weeks ago, and went big for that kind of an act, but they'll never make good here unless Dan gets back some of his old pep. He fell away off this afternoon—seems to be losing his nerve."

"Dan?" repeated McCarty reflectively. "That will be the heavy, short one?"

"Naw, the other feller. He's only the also ran; Dan's the whole show."

The little comedienne vanished with a final flirt of her bouffant skirts, and the reascending curtain disclosed the Four Bartons drawn up at attention. The ballad of McCarty's informant did not indeed stop the show, but it evoked several encores, and during the last of these, Dennis reached over and clutched his companion's arm.

In the narrow entrance on the far side of the stage two statuesque pink-clad figures stood, the switchboard lights catching the glint of spangles, and revealing a dark head crowned with close cropped curling hair which towered a good five inches above the other.

McCarty's eyes narrowed and he drew a deep, prolonged breath, then settled back in his chair with the wriggling motion of an animal which crouches, tense, before the spring.

Dennis, too, was silent, but he cautiously flexed the muscles of his arms, and cast a practiced glance backward at a clear space for action.

The Bartons concluded with a patriotic number, and gave place in a cannonade of applause for the two swarthy, superbly-poised figures who advanced in the full glare of the footlights. The taller one turned, and for an instant his eyes seemed to meet the quiet ones watching him from the shadows. Then he sprang lightly into the air, caught the swinging trapeze, and the act was on.

McCarty, oblivious to all about him, sat staring at the graceful convolutions of the lithe, agile figure which moved with an abandon that was yet all poise and control. The other members of the team he scarcely saw, and he held his breath as the one upon whom his attention was rivetted paused for a fraction of a moment, and then flung himself recklessly into space in a triple somersault and then clutched at the flying rings.

He all but missed them; one hand slipped perilously and a sobbing gasp went up from the breathless audience, but the next instant he had regained his hold, drawn himself up to his precarious perch and was smiling sardonically down.

A muttered curse behind McCarty obtruded itself on his consciousness, and he turned to find a man garbed as a comedy tramp standing back of his chair, his face white beneath his make up.

"My God, what's got into Dan! the man exclaimed. "He's losing his grip! That was no stall for a hand. He'll do for himself if he ain't careful one of these days!"

"Friend of yours?" asked McCarty quietly.

"I know him, right enough," the other responded non-committally. "I clowned it in Frawley and Wells with him last year."

"The circus?—Have a cigar, sir?"

"Thanks, brother, don't mind if I do, but I'll keep it till after our turn—I'm doing rough and tumble with the tabloid, and we're on next."

"I know a girl with that circus outfit, Ivy Collins," McCarty observed carelessly. "Yvonne, she called herself, in the show."

"Dan Accolini knows her, too." The comedian laughed significantly. "It's her that put him on the blink."

"No," exclaimed McCarty. "She's a grand little kidder, but you don't mean he fell for her?"

"Fell hard. He may look good to you now, but you ought to have seen him when he was working right. Nobody in the business could touch him. Yvonne's as pretty as the devil, but there's no more heart in her than a wild cat, and Dan could have kissed the ground that she walked on. She had him roped, tied and branded and then threw him over, and he's gone to pieces now. There, that's their finish."

He nodded and moved away to take up his entrance as the curtain fell.

McCarty rose slowly and took a step forward to greet the lithe figure which advanced nonchantily toward him, while Dennis kicked the chairs away and lined up at his elbow. Accolini paused, glanced scowlingly at the stocky figure which barred the exit, then turned with a shrug to pass him, but McCarthy touched his shoulder.

"I want you Dan."

With a snarl the man turned, his muscles rippling like a snake's beneath the satiny skin, and sprang straight for McCarty's throat. Some one shouted hoarsely, the curtain was held, and a knot of stage hands, with Accolini's partner at their head, rushed forward, but halted at Dennis' warning.

"In the name of the law!"

Then, his weakness fallen from him, he hurled himself joyously on McCarty's antagonist.

The struggle was sharp and violent, but soon over. In the act of a terrific lunge Dan Accolini halted, a spasm of pain contorted his face and his arms dropped limply to his sides.

His short, mirthless laugh ended in a choking cough, and he squared his massive shoulders.

"All right!" he said. "You've got me! I'm all in, but I pulled off my job, and nothing matters now!"

CHAPTER XXVII.

THE SCIENCE OF EX-ROUNDSMAN McCARTY.

"Yes, I killed her." There was no bitterness now in the swarthy face, only a deep content. "She knew it was coming to her for I tried to get her last spring but it didn't work. I wasn't going to botch it the next time."

Dan Accolini lounged carelessly on a bench in the private room at headquarters, eying McCarty with a frank and not unfriendly gaze. It was evident that the first and futile struggle over, he bore his captor no ill-will but accepted the situation with a philosophy of his own as a mere part of the game.

She was the scleverest skirt in the business," he went on reflectively. "If she had stuck to me she would have been a top liner on the flyin' rings to-day, but she wasn't square. I just had to croak her, Mac, there was nothing to it. Don't mind my callin' you 'Mac,' like I heard the boys outside; it will be all the same in a little while from now."

"Sure, that's all right," McCarty nodded. "Go on!"

He pulled the inevitable cigar from his pocket and offered it tentatively, but the other shook his head.

"I don't mind tellin' you. You're a good fellow, Mac, and I kind of want to get it all off my chest to somebody that maybe will understand. For I loved her! I loved that little girl with all that was in me, and I did for her because there was nothin' else left for me.

"I don't hold it against you that you pulled me in; you're all right, you and other guy Riordan, to dope out how I turned the trick. There is not another performer on the flying trapeze to-day could have done what I did. You not bein' in that line of work yourself can't begin to get it through your head what a stunt it was, danglin' there between heaven and earth on a wisp of rope that the least slip would have twisted out of your hands. But not these hands, Mac; feel them!"

He extended his arms in a gesture of supreme pride.

"Calloused and a bit hard, maybe, but there ain't another pair like 'em in the business to-day. 'King of the Air' they billed me, and that's no rave! It's me, Dan Accolini!"

"Sure!" responded McCarty heartily. "Here, if you won't have a cigar try one of these."

He reached for the box of cigarettes on the inspector's desk, and pushed it over.

"Nothin' doin', thanks. I never smoked in my life and not a drop of liquor ever passed my lips, either. Dissipation couldn't touch me. Not that I wouldn't have liked to try it, like any other guy, to see what it was like; but there was always the other thing in front of my eyes, to go to the top of the profession. The very top, where nobody could touch me! I got there, Mac, and then she came along! After that there was nothin' to it, it was just her! Ivy!"

He paused and then went on slowly:

"You see, Mac, I never was much of a hand to fool around dames; a guy ain't got time for them in my line of work. That's why I was such a mark for her. I didn't lamp her at all at first, I was stickin' to my job, and mindin' my own business, and nothin' was further from my mind than gettin' tangled up with a skirt, though she was a looker for fair! You ought to have seen her before she got what was comin' to her! She was pink and white, like one of these here early summer apples, and like the most of them, rotten to the core.

"I guess I was the first guy that she ever struck that didn't come cringing like a dog when she whistled, and if I'd dodged, and kept away from her, as if I was scared of what she could do to me, maybe she would have been satisfied, and let up on me; but I just didn't happen to see her at all, and that's what's got to her. You know how it is yourself, Mac, when a dame makes up her mind to land you."

"I do not," McCarty observed quite thankfully.

"Well, she stuck around, determined I should know she was on the earth, and at last her wish came true. I saw her right enough, and fell for her—God, how hard I fell! It is funny, looking back now, for she had played the same little game with a few others in the show, but I would not listen. I had it all doped out for a double team, her and me together on the rings, and a little home when the big top was furled for the winter, and she led me on till I thought there wasn't nothin' but her in the whole world. Soft? Say, I'd have laid down in the sawdust and let her ride over me on the elephant if she'd said the word!"

The hands of whose strength he was so proud, were twisted together in a convulsive clasp and for a moment he bowed his head. Then he raised it swiftly and the old fire glowed in his eyes.

"And I made her what she was! Prettiest thing that God ever put on earth, and daring as they come, she was nothing but a gutter-snipe, one of a struggling bunch of cheap acrobats picked up any old way. I taught her all that she ever knew raised out out of that ruck of ornery flip-flappers, and got her up in my class. She'd try anything; I'll say that for her!

"She'd fling herself with a laugh from the highest bar away up under the roof with nothin' under her but the tanbark and that a hundred and fifty feet below, sure that I would be right on the job to catch her; and she was right—I couldn't have missed her, Mac; these hands of mine would have reached out and found her if I'd been blindfold."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Wanted: A Dumb Woman

By Mona Cowles

(Copyright, 1917, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Wanted—A stenographer who is dumb but not deaf; must be over thirty. No others need apply. Call Monday morning at Congressman Pragg's office at the Davenporte."

Perhaps the single affliction of being dumb without being deaf is not a rare one, but in Washington on the Sunday that this advertisement appeared in the local papers, women so handicapped were not numerous. Or, if they were, they were not stenographers in search of a job. Of the half-dozen dumb applicants, there was one whose hearing was keen enough and whose stenography was good enough to justify the congressman's young-man secretary—who sized them up when they came to the office—in referring her to the congressman himself. That was Mardy Mapes, and she was not entirely what the congressman had asked for in the advertisement. She admitted to the secretary in writing, on the small tablet of paper that she carried around with her, that she was under thirty, and anyone could have told at a glance that she wasn't even twenty-five. "However," she wrote to the congressman when he objected to her on the score of extreme youthfulness: "I am old in my ways and I can look much older if I dress in plain dark clothes."

The congressman frowned a little at her to show his disapproval, but consoled himself with the thought that if he kept her in his employ long enough, she would eventually reach a suitable age. On general principles, it seemed, Congressman Pragg had an objection to young women. Some people whispered that this was because of some early disappointment in love, but those who knew him better knew that in the congressman's uphill climb from a poor farmer's boy to the leading man of his state, there had been no time for flirtation or love-making.

"You may consider yourself employed," said the congressman, and the smile that came over Mardy's face showed that she heard perfectly in spite of her total dumbness. "Now, I want to explain why I wanted a dumb stenographer. I have had several women in my employ—good stenographers they were, too—but they drove me almost crazy with their innocent babbling. When they weren't chatting with my secretary out there, they were talking over the telephone to the girl downstairs at the switchboard or arranging with the people at suffrage headquarters to make street-corner speeches on such and such a night. And after hours they babbled to their friends all my business, or tried to retail inside political information to their soap-box audiences. Washington is nothing but a village in lots of ways, and people soon get to know that Miss So-and-So is working for Congressman Thus-and-So, and the first thing I'd know people would be telling me over at the capitol more about my own business than I knew myself. These women didn't do it maliciously, you understand, but they were so fond of hearing themselves speak that they couldn't help it. That is why I wanted a dumb stenographer. Your youthfulness is against you, but I don't suppose I can do any better—never mind the references—you look honest, and my secretary says your stenography is more than fair. Report here tomorrow morning at half-past nine."

Although the ambitious young man from the congressman's home town had the distinction of being his secretary, Miss Mapes soon did practically all the work that is usually connected with that post, and the young man in question occupied his time largely with meeting the congressman's callers, mixing with people whom the congressman might find it useful to know, in hotel lobbies, club-rooms or wherever he might contrive to find them, and making hurried trips back and forth from various of the congressman's constituents to Washington.

Mardy Mapes seemed not to have a responsibility or tie in the world—at least in Washington—outside of the congressman's office. She boarded somewhere over in the northeast—an indefinite section so far as the congressman was concerned, and "trolled" back and forth from there to the congressman's office in the hotel, where he lived, near the White House. She never worked "overtime," because all her time, presumably, was possible office time. And if she stayed in the congressman's office till midnight taking down notes for an important speech that he was to deliver, or listening critically to him as he rehearsed such a speech to her, tongues in the hotel never wagged to her discredit because of it. Perhaps this was because poor Mardy's own tongue itself was incapable of wagging. She was pretty and she was young, but her dumbness and her very somber and demure mode of dressing were a protection against slander or less malicious gossip.
